Ecce Spectaculum dignum, ad quod respicidt, intentus operi suo, Deus! Ecce par Deo dignum, vir fortis cum malâ fortunâ compositus! Non video, inquam, quid habeat in terris Jupiter pulchrius, si convertere animum velit, quàm ut spectet Catonem, jam partibus non semel fractis, nihilominùs inter ruinas publicas erectum.

VERSES

To the AUTHOR of the TRAGEDY of CATO.

WHILE you the fierce divided Britons awe,
And Cato with an equal virtue draw,
While Envy is it ſelf in Wonder loſt,
And Factions ſtrive who ſhall applaud you moſt;
Forgive the fond ambition of a friend,
Who hopes himſelf, not you, to recommend,
And join th' applauſe which all the Learn'd beſtow
On one, to whom a perfect work they owe.
To my * light Scenes I once inſcrib'd your name,
And impotently ſtrove to borrow fame:
Soon will that die, which adds thy name to mine;
Let me, then, live, join'd to a work of thine.

* Tender Husband, Dedicated to Mr. Addiſon.

RICHARD STEELE.

THO' Cato ſhines in Virgil's epick ſong,
Preſcribing laws among th' Elyſian throng;
Tho' Lucan's verſe, exalted by his name,
O'er Gods themſelves has rais'd the Heroe's fame;
The Roman ſtage did ne'er his image ſee,
Drawn at full length; a task reſerv'd for thee.
By thee we view the finiſh'd figure riſe,
And awful march before our raviſh'd eyes;
We hear his voice, aſſerting virtue's cauſe;
His fate renew'd our deep attention draws,
Excites by turns our various hopes and fears,
And all the patriot in thy ſcene appears.

On Tyber's banks thy thought was firſt inſpir'd;
'Twas there, to ſome indulgent grove retir'd,
Rome's ancient fortunes rolling in thy mind,
Thy happy Muſe this manly work deſign'd:
Or in a dream thou ſaw'ſt Rome's Genius ſtand,
And, leading Cato in his ſacred hand,
Point out th' immortal ſubject of thy lays,
And ask this labour to record his praiſe.

'Tis done—— the Heroe lives, and charms our age!
While nobler morals grace the Britiſh ſtage!
Great Shakeſpear's ghoſt, the ſolemn ſtrain to hear,
(Methinks I ſee the laurell'd Shade appear!)
Will hover o'er the Scene, and wond'ring view
His fav'rite Brutus rival'd thus by you.
Such Roman greatneſs in each action ſhines,
Such Roman eloquence adorns your lines,

That

That ſure the Sibylls books this year foretold,
And in ſome myſtick leaf was ſeen inroll'd,
' Rome, turn thy mournful eyes from Africk's ſhore,
' Nor in her ſands thy Cato's tomb explore!
' When thrice ſix hundred times the circling Sun
' His annual race ſhall thro' the Zodiack run,
' An Iſle remote his monument ſhall rear,
' And every generous Briton pay a tear.

J. HUGHES.

WHAT do we ſee! is Cato then become
A greater name in Britain than in Rome?
Does mankind now admire his virtues more,
Tho' Lucan, Horace, Virgil wrote before?
How will Poſterity this truth explain?
" Cato begins to live in Anna's reign:
The World's great chiefs, in council or in arms,
Riſe in your lines with more exalted charms;
Illuſtrious deeds in diſtant nations wrought,
And virtues by departed Heroes taught,
Raiſe in your ſoul a pure immortal flame,
Adorn your life, and conſecrate your fame;
To your renown all ages you ſubdue,
And Cæſar fought, and Cato bled for you.

EDWARD YOUNG.

'TIS nobly done thus to enrich the ſtage,
And raiſe the thoughts of a degenerate age,
To ſhow, how endleſs joys from freedom ſpring:
How life in bondage is a worthleſs thing.
The inborn greatneſs of your ſoul we view,
You tread the paths frequented by the few.
With ſo much ſtrength you write, and ſo much eaſe,
Virtue, and ſenſe! how durſt you hope to pleaſe?
Yet crowds the ſentiments of every line
Impartial clap'd, and own'd the work divine.
Even the ſour Criticks, who malicious came,
Eager to cenſure, and reſolv'd to blame,
Finding the Heroe regularly riſe,
Great, while he lives, but greater when he dies,
Sullen approv'd, too obſtinate to melt,
And ſicken'd with the pleaſures, which they felt.
Not ſo the Fair their paſſions ſecret kept,
Silent they heard, but as they heard, they wept,
When glorioufly the blooming Marcus dy'd,
And Cato told the Gods, I'm ſatisfy'd.

See! how your lays the Britiſh youth inflame!
They long to ſhoot, and ripen into fame;
Applauding theatres diſturb their reſt,
And unborn Cato's heave in every breaſt;

Their

Their nightly dreams their daily thoughts repeat,
And pulſes high with fancy'd glories beat.
So, grieved to view the Marathonian ſpoils,
The young Themiſtocles vow'd equal toils;
Did then his ſchemes of future honours draw
From the long triumphs which with tears he ſaw.

How ſhall I your unrival'd worth proclaim,
Loſt in the ſpreading circle of your fame!
We ſaw you the great William's praiſe rehearſe,
And paint Britannia's joys in Roman verſe.
We heard at diſtance ſoft, enchanting ſtrains,
From blooming mountains, and Italian Plains.
Virgil began in Engliſh dreſs to ſhine,
His voice, his looks, his grandeur ſtill divine.
From him too ſoon unfriendly you withdrew,
But brought the tuneful Ovid to our view.
Then, the delightful theme of every tongue,
Th' immortal Marl'brough was your daring ſong;
From clime to clime the mighty victor flew,
From clime to clime as ſwiftly you purſue;
Still with the Heroe's glow'd the Poet's flame,
Still with his conqueſts you enlarg'd your fame.
With boundleſs raptures here the Muſe could ſwell,
And on your Roſamond for ever dwell:
There opening ſweets, and every fragrant flower
Luxuriant ſmile, a never-fading bower.

Next, human follies kindly to expoſe,
You change from numbers, but not ſink in proſe:
Whether in viſionary ſcenes you play,
Refine our taſtes, or laugh our crimes away.
Now, by the buskin'd Muſe you ſhine confeſt,
The Patriot kindles in the Poet's breaſt.
Such energy of ſenſe might pleaſure raiſe,
Tho' unembelliſh'd with the charms of phraſe:
Such charms of phraſe would with ſucceſs be crown'd,
Tho' nonſenſe flow'd in the melodious ſound.
The chaſteſt Virgin needs no bluſhes fear,
The Learn'd themſelves, not uninſtructed, hear.
The Libertine, in pleaſures us'd to roul,
And idly ſport with an immortal ſoul,
Here comes, and by the virtuous Heathen taught,
Turns pale, and trembles at the dreadful thought.

When e'er you traverſe vaſt Numidia's plains,
What ſluggiſh Briton in his Iſle remains?
When Juba ſeeks the Tiger with delight,
We beat the thicket, and provoke the fight.
By the deſcription warm'd, we fondly ſweat,
And in the chilling Eaſt-wind pant with heat.
What eyes behold not, how the ſtream refines,
'Till by degrees the floating mirrour ſhines?
While hurricanes in circling eddies play,
Tear up the ſands, and ſweep whole plains away,

We ſhrink with horror, and confeſs our fear,
And all the ſudden ſounding ruine hear.
When purple robes, diſtain'd with blood, deceive,
And make poor Marcia beautifully grieve,
When ſhe her ſecret thoughts no more conceals,
Forgets the woman, and her flame reveals,
Well may the Prince exult with noble pride,
Not for his Libyan crown, but Roman bride.

But I in vain on ſingle features dwell,
While all the parts of the fair piece excell.
So rich the ſtore, ſo dubious is the feaſt,
We know not, which to paſs, or which to taſte.
The ſhining incidents ſo juſtly fall,
We may the whole new ſcenes of tranſport call.
Thus jewellers confound our wand'ring eyes,
And with variety of gemms ſurpriſe.
Here Saphires, here the Sardian Stone is ſeen,
The Topaz yellow, and the Jaſper green.
The coſtly Brilliant there, confus'dly bright,
From numerous ſurfaces darts trembling light.
The different colours mingling in a blaze,
Silent we ſtand, unable where to praiſe,
In pleaſure ſweetly loſt ten thouſand ways.

TOO long hath Love engroſs'd Britannia's ſtage,
And ſunk to ſoftneſs all our tragic rage;
By that alone did empires fall or riſe,
And fate depended on a fair one's eyes;
The ſweet infection, mixt with dangerous art,
Debas'd our manhood, while it ſooth'd the heart:
You ſcorn to raiſe a grief thy ſelf muſt blame,
Nor from our weakneſs ſteal a vulgar fame:
A Patriot's fall may juſtly melt the mind,
And tears flow nobly, ſhed for all mankind.

How do our ſouls with gen'rous pleaſure glow!
Our hearts exulting, while our eyes o'erflow,
When thy firm Hero ſtands beneath the weight
Of all his ſufferings venerably great;
Rome's poor remains ſtill ſhelt'ring by his ſide,
With conſcious virtue, and becoming pride.

The aged Oak thus rears his head in air,
His ſap exhauſted, and his branches bare;
'Midſt ſtorms and earthquakes he maintains his ſtate,
Fixt deep in earth, and faſten'd by his weight.
His naked boughs ſtill lend the ſhepherds aid,
And his old trunk projects an awful ſhade.

Amidſt the joys triumphant peace beſtows,
Our Patriots ſadden at his glorious woes,
Awhile they let the world's great bus'neſs wait,
Anxious for Rome, and ſigh for Cato's fate.
Here taught how ancient Heroes roſe to fame,
Our Britons croud, and catch the Roman flame,
Where ſtates and ſenates well might lend an ear,
And Kings and Prieſts without a bluſh appear.

France boaſts no more, but, fearful to engage,
Now firſt pays homage to her rival's ſtage,
Haſtes to learn thee, and learning ſhall ſubmit
Alike to Britiſh arms, and Britiſh wit:
No more ſhe'll wonder, (forc'd to do us right)
Who think like Romans, could like Romans fight.

Thy Oxford ſmiles this glorious work to ſee,
And fondly triumphs in a ſon like thee.
The ſenates, conſuls, and the gods of Rome,
Like old acquaintance at their native home,
In thee we find: each deed, each word expreſt,
And every thought that ſwell'd a Roman breaſt.
We trace each hint that could thy ſoul inſpire
With Virgil's judgment, and with Lucan's fire;
We know thy worth, and, give us leave to boaſt,
We moſt admire, becauſe we know thee moſt.

THO. TICKELL.

SIR,

WHEN your generous labour first I view'd,
And Cato's hands in his own blood imbru'd;
That scene of death so terrible appears,
My soul could only thank you with her tears.
Yet with such wond'rous art your skilful hand
Does all the passions of the soul command,
That even my grief to praise and wonder turn'd,
And envy'd the great death which first I mourn'd.

What pen but yours could draw the doubtful strife,
Of honour struggling with the love of life?
Describe the Patriot, obstinately good,
As hovering o'er eternity he stood:
The wide, th' unbounded ocean lay before
His piercing sight, and Heaven the distant shore.
Secure of endless bliss, with fearless eyes,
He grasps the dagger, and its point defies,
And rushes out of Life, to snatch the glorious prize.

How would old Rome rejoice, to hear you tell
How just her Patriot liv'd, how great he fell!
Recount his wond'rous probity and truth,
And form new Juba's in the British youth.
Their generous souls, when he resigns his breath,
Are pleas'd with ruine, and in love with death.
And when her conquering sword Britannia draws,
Resolve to perish, or defend her cause.

Now

Now first on Albion's theatre we see,
A perfect image of what man should be;
The glorious character is now expreſt,
Of virtue dwelling in a human breaſt.
Drawn at full length by your immortal lines,
In Cato's ſoul, as in her Heaven ſhe ſhines.

All Souls College,
Oxon.

DIGBY COTES.

Left with the Printer by an unknown hand.

NOW we may ſpeak, ſince Cato ſpeaks no more;
'Tis praiſe at length, 'twas rapture all before;
When crowded theatres with Iös rung
Sent to the skies, from whence thy genius ſprung:
Even civil rage awhile in thine was loſt;
And factions ſtrove but to applaud thee moſt:
Nor could enjoyment pall our longing taſte;
But every night was dearer than the laſt.

As when old Rome in a malignant hour
Depriv'd of ſome returning conqueror,
Her debt of triumph to the dead diſcharg'd,
For fame, for treaſure, and her bounds enlarg'd:
And, while his god-like figure mov'd along,
Alternate paſſions fir'd th' adoring throng;
Tears flow'd from every eye, and ſhouts from every tongue.
So in thy pompous lines has Cato far'd,
Grac'd with an ample, tho' a late reward:
A greater victor we in him revere;
A nobler triumph crowns his image here.

With

With wonder, as with pleaſure, we ſurvey
A theme ſo ſcanty wrought into a play;
So vaſt a pile on ſuch foundations plac'd;
Like Ammon's temple rear'd on Libya's waſte:
Behold its glowing paint! its eaſie weight!
Its nice proportions! and ſtupendous height!
How chaſte the conduct, how divine the rage!
A Roman Worthy on a Grecian ſtage!

But where ſhall Cato's praiſe begin or end;
Inclin'd to melt, and yet untaught to bend,
The firmeſt Patriot, and the gentleſt Friend!
How great his genius, when the traytor croud
Ready to ſtrike the blow their fury vow'd,
Quell'd by his look, and liſtning to his lore,
Learn, like his paſſions, to rebel no more!
When, laviſh of his boiling blood, to prove
The cure of ſlaviſh life, aad ſlighted love,
Brave Marcus new in early death appears,
While Cato counts his wounds, and not his years;
Who, checking private grief, the publick mourns,
Commands the pity he ſo greatly ſcorns.
But when he ſtrikes, (to crown his generous part)
That honeſt, ſtaunch, impracticable heart;
No tears, no ſobs purſue his parting breath;
The dying Roman ſhames the pomp of death.

O ſacred Freedom, which the powers beſtow
To ſeaſon bleſſings, and to ſoften woe;
Plant of our growth, and aim of all our cares,
The toil of ages, and the crown of wars:

If,

If, taught by thee, the Poet's wit has flow'd
In strains as precious as his Hero's blood;
Preserve those strains, an everlasting charm
To keep that blood, and thy remembrance warm:
Be this thy guardian image still secure,
In vain shall force invade, or fraud allure;
Our great Palladium shall perform its part,
Fix'd and enshrin'd in every British heart.

THE mind to virtue is by verse subdu'd;
And the true Poet is a publick good.
This Britain feels, while, by your lines inspir'd,
Her free-born sons to glorious thoughts are fir'd.
In Rome had you espous'd the vanquish'd cause,
Enflam'd her senate, and upheld her laws;
Your many scenes had liberty rejoic'd,
And given the just success to Cato's sword:
O'er Cæsar's arms your genius had prevail'd;
And the Muse triumph'd, where the Patriot fail'd.

AMBR. PHILIPS.

PRO-

PROLOGUE,

By Mr. POPE.

Spoken by Mr. WILKS.

TO wake the ſoul by tender ſtrokes of art,
To raiſe the genius, and to mend the heart,
To make mankind in conſcious virtue bold,
Live o'er each ſcene, and be what they behold:
For this the Tragic Muſe firſt trod the ſtage,
Commanding tears to ſtream thro' every age;
Tyrants no more their ſavage nature kept,
And foes to virtue wonder'd how they wept.
Our author ſhuns by vulgar ſprings to move
The Heroe's glory, or the Virgin's love;
In pitying love we but our weakneſs ſhow,
And wild Ambition well deſerves its woe.
Here tears ſhall flow from a more generous cauſe,
Such tears as Patriots ſhed for dying laws:
He bids your breaſts with ancient ardor riſe,
And calls forth Roman drops from Britiſh eyes.
Virtue confeſt in human ſhape he draws,
What Plato thought, and God-like Cato was:
No common object to your ſight diſplays,
But what with pleaſure Heaven it ſelf ſurveys;

A brave man ſtruggling in the ſtorms of fate,
And greatly falling with a falling ſtate!
While Cato gives his little Senate laws,
What boſom beats not in his country's cauſe?
Who ſees him act, but envies every deed?
Who hears him groan, and does not wiſh to bleed?
Even when proud Cæſar 'midſt triumphal cars,
The ſpoils of nations, and the pomp of wars,
Ignobly vain, and impotently great,
Show'd Rome her Cato's figure drawn in ſtate,
As her dead father's reverend image paſt,
The pomp was darken'd, and the day o'ercaſt,
The triumph ceas'd —— tears guſh'd from every eye,
The world's great victor paſs'd unheeded by;
Her laſt good man dejected Rome ador'd,
And honour'd Cæſar's leſs than Cato's ſword.

Britons attend: be worth like this approv'd,
And ſhow you have the virtue to be mov'd.
With honeſt ſcorn the firſt-fam'd Cato view'd
Rome learning arts from Greece, whom ſhe ſubdu'd.
Our ſcene precariouſly ſubſiſts too long
On French tranſlation, and Italian ſong:
Dare to have ſenſe your ſelves; aſſert the ſtage,
Be juſtly warm'd with your own native rage.
Such plays alone ſhould pleaſe a Britiſh ear,
As Cato's ſelf had not diſdain'd to hear.

ACT I. SCENE I.

PORTIUS, MARCUS.

PORTIUS.

THE dawn is over-caſt, the morning lours,
And heavily in clouds brings on the day,
The great, th'important day, big with the fate
Of Cato and of Rome—Our Father's Death
Would fill up all the guilt of Civil war,
And cloſe the ſcene of blood, Already Cæſar
Has ravag'd more than half the globe, and ſees
Mankind grown thin by his deſtructive ſword:
Should he go further, numbers would be wanting
To form new battels, and ſupport his crimes.

Ye

Ye Gods, what havock does Ambition make
Among your works!

MARCUS.

Thy ſteddy temper, Portius,
Can look on guilt, rebellion, fraud, and Cæſar,
In the calm lights of mild Philoſophy;
I'm tortur'd, even to madneſs, when I think
On the proud victor: every time he's named
Pharſalia riſes to my view! — I ſee
Th' inſulting tyrant, prancing o'er the field
Strow'd with Rome's citizens, and drench'd in ſlaughter,
His Horſe's hoofs wet with Patrician blood!
Oh Portius, is there not ſome choſen curſe,
Some hidden thunder in the ſtores of Heaven,
Red with uncommon wrath, to blaſt the man,
Who owes his greatneſs to his country's ruin?

PORTIUS.

Believe me, Marcus, 'tis an impious greatneſs,
And mixt with too much horrour to be envy'd:
How does the luſtre of our father's actions,
Through the dark cloud of Ills that cover him,
Break out, and burn with more triumphant brightneſs!
His ſufferings ſhine, and ſpread a glory round him;
Greatly unfortunate, he fights the cauſe
Of honour, virtue, liberty, and Rome.
His ſword ne'er fell but on the guilty head;
Oppreſſion, tyranny, and power uſurp'd,
Draw all the vengeance of his arm upon 'em.

MAR-

MARCUS.

Who knows not this? but what can Cato do
Againſt a world, a baſe degenerate world,
That courts the yoke, and bows the neck to Cæſar?
Pent up in Utica he vainly forms
A poor epitome of Roman greatneſs,
And, cover'd with Numidian guards, directs
A feeble army, and an empty ſenate;
Remnants of mighty battles fought in vain.
By Heaven's, ſuch virtues, join'd with ſuch ſucceſs,
Diſtract my very ſoul: Our father's fortune
Would almoſt tempt us to renounce his precepts.

PORTIUS.

Remember what our father oft has told us:
The ways of Heaven are dark and intricate,
Puzzled in mazes, and perplex'd with errors:
Our underſtanding traces 'em in vain,
Loſt and bewilder'd in the fruitleſs ſearch;
Nor ſees with how much art the windings run,
Nor where the regular confuſion ends.

MARCUS.

Theſe are ſuggeſtions of a mind at eaſe:
Oh Portius, didſt thou taſte but half the griefs
That wring my ſoul, thou couldſt not talk thus coldly.
Paſſion unpity'd, and ſucceſſleſs love,
Plant daggers in my heart, and aggravate
My other griefs. Were but my Lucia kind!——

PORTIUS.

Thou ſee'ſt not that thy Brother is thy Rival:
But I muſt hide it, for I know thy temper. [Aſide.
Now, Marcus, now, thy virtue's on the proof:
Put forth thy utmoſt ſtrength, work every nerve,
And call up all thy father in thy ſoul:
To quell the tyrant Love, and guard thy heart
On this weak ſide, where moſt our nature fails,
Would be a conqueſt worthy Cato's ſon.

MARCUS.

Portius, the counſel which I cannot take,
Inſtead of healing, but upbraids my weakneſs.
Bid me for honour plunge into a war
Of thickeſt foes, and ruſh on certain death,
Then ſhalt thou ſee that Marcus is not ſlow
To follow glory, and confeſs his father.
Love is not to be reaſon'd down, or loſt
In high ambition, and a thirſt of greatneſs;
'Tis ſecond life, it grows into the ſoul,
Warms every vein, and beats in every pulſe,
I feel it here: my reſolution melts——

PORTIUS.

Behold young Juba, the Numidian Prince!
With how much care he forms himſelf to glory,
And breaks the fierceneſs of his native temper,
To copy out our Father's bright example.
He loves our ſiſter Marcia, greatly loves her,
His eyes, his looks, his actions all betray it:

But

But ſtill the ſmother'd fondneſs burns within him.
When moſt it ſwells, and labours for a vent,
The ſenſe of honour, and deſire of fame
Drive the big paſſion back into his heart.
What! ſhall an African, ſhall Juba's heir
Reproach great Cato's ſon, and ſhow the world
A virtue wanting in a Roman ſoul?

MARCUS.

Portius, no more! your words leave ſtings behind 'em.
When e'er did Juba, or did Portius, ſhow
A virtue that has caſt me at a diſtance,
And thrown me out in the purſuits of honour?

PORTIUS.

Marcus, I know thy gen'rous temper well;
Fling but th' appearance of diſhonour on it,
It ſtrait takes fire, and mounts into a blaze.

MARCUS.

A Brother's ſufferings claim a Brother's pity.

PORTIUS.

Heaven knows I pity thee: behold my eyes
Even whilſt I ſpeak—— Do they not ſwim in tears?
Were but my heart as naked to thy view,
Marcus would ſee it bleed in his behalf.

MARCUS.

Why then doſt treat me with rebukes, inſtead
Of kind condoling cares, and friendly ſorrow?

PORTIUS.

O Marcus, did I know the way to eaſe

Thy troubled heart, and mitigate thy pains,
Marcus, believe me, I could die to do it.

MARCUS.

Thou beſt of brothers, and thou beſt of Friends!
Pardon a weak diſtemper'd ſoul, that ſwells
With ſudden guſts, and ſinks as ſoon in calms,
The ſport of paſſions:—— but Sempronius comes:
He muſt not find this ſoftneſs hanging on me. [Exit.

SCENE II.

SEMPRONIUS, PORTIUS.

SEMPRONIUS.

Conſpiracies no ſooner ſhould be form'd
Than executed. What means Portius here?
I like not that cold youth. I muſt diſſemble,
And ſpeak a language foreign to my heart. [Aſide.
Good-morrow Portius! let us once embrace,
Once more embrace; whilſt yet we both are free.
To-morrow ſhould we thus expreſs our friendſhip,
Each might receive a ſlave into his arms:
This Sun perhaps, this morning Sun's the laſt,
That e'er ſhall riſe on Roman liberty.

PORTIUS.

My father has this morning call'd together
To this poor hall his little Roman Senate,
(The leavings of Pharſalia) to conſult

If

If yet he can oppoſe the mighty torrent
That bears down Rome, and all her gods before it,
Or muſt at length give up the world to Cæſar.

SEMPRONIUS.

Not all the pomp and majeſty of Rome
Can raiſe her Senate more than Cato's preſence.
His virtues render our aſſembly awful,
They ſtrike with ſomething like religious fear,
And make even Cæſar tremble at the head
Of armies flufh'd with conqueſt: O my Portius,
Could I but call that wondrous Man my Father,
Would but thy ſiſter Marcia be propitious.
To thy friend's vows: I might be bleſs'd indeed!

PORTIUS.

Alas! Sempronius, would'ſt thou talk of love
To Marcia, whilſt her father's life's in danger?
Thou might'ſt as well court the pale trembling Veſtal,
When ſhe beholds the holy flame expiring.

SEMPRONIUS.

The more I ſee the wonders of thy race,
The more I'm charm'd. Thou muſt take heed, my Portius!
The world has all its eyes on Cato's ſon.
Thy father's merit ſets thee up to view,
And ſhows thee in the faireſt point of light,
To make thy virtues, or thy faults conſpicuous.

PORTIUS.

Well doſt thou ſeem to check my lingring here
On this important hour—— I'll ſtrait away,

And while the Fathers of the Senate meet,
In cloſe debate to weigh th' events of war,
I'll animate the ſoldier's drooping courage,
With love of freedom, and contempt of life:
I'll thunder in their ears their country's cauſe,
And try to rouſe up all that's Roman in 'em.
'Tis not in mortals to Command ſucceſs,
But we'll do more, Sempronius; we'll Deſerve it. [Exit.

SEMPRONIUS ſolus.

Curſe on the Stripling! how he apes his Sire!
Ambitiouſly ſententious!——— but I wonder
Old Syphax comes not; his Numidian genius
Is well diſpos'd to miſchief, were he prompt
And eager on it; but he muſt be ſpurr'd,
And every moment quickned to the courſe.
——— Cato has us'd me ill: he has refuſed
His daughter Marcia to my ardent vows.
Beſides, his baffled arms, and ruin'd cauſe,
Are bars to my ambition. Cæſar's favour,
That ſhow'rs down greatneſs on his friends, will raiſe me
To Rome's firſt honours. If I give up Cato,
I claim in my reward his captive daughter.
But Syphax comes!———

SCENE

SCENE III.

SYPHAX, SEMPRONIUS.

SYPHAX.

——Sempronius, all is ready,
I've founded my Numidians, man by man,
And find 'em ripe for a revolt: they all
Complain aloud of Cato's diſcipline,
And wait but the command to change their maſter.

SEMPRONIUS.

Believe me, Syphax, there's no time to waſte;
Even whilſt we ſpeak, our Conqueror comes on,
And gathers ground upon us every moment.
Alas! thou know'ſt not Cæſar's active ſoul,
With what a dreadful courſe he ruſhes on
From war to war: in vain has nature form'd
Mountains and Oceans to oppoſe his paſſage;
He bounds o'er all, victorious in his march:
The Alpes and Pyreneans ſink before him,
Through winds and waves and ſtorms he works his way,
Impatient for the battle: one day more
Will ſet the Victor thundering at our gates.
But tell me, haſt thou yet drawn o'er young Juba?
That ſtill would recommend thee more to Cæſar,
And challenge better terms.

SYPHAX.

Alas! he's loſt,
He's loſt, Sempronius; all his thoughts are full
Of Cato's virtues:——but I'll try once more
(For every inſtant I expect him here)
If yet I can ſubdue thoſe ſtubborn principles
Of faith, of honour, and I know not what,
That have corrupted his Numidian temper,
And ſtruck th' infection into all his ſoul.

SEMPRONIUS.

Be ſure to preſs upon him every motive.
Juba's ſurrender, ſince his father's death,
Would give up Africk into Cæſar's hands,
And make him Lord of half the burning Zone.

SYPHAX.

But is it true, Sempronius, that your Senate
Is call'd together? Gods! thou muſt be cautious!
Cato has piercing eyes, and will diſcern
Our frauds, unleſs they're cover'd thick with art.

SEMPRONIUS.

Let me alone, good Syphax, I'll conceal
My thoughts in paſſion (tis the ſureſt way;)
I'll bellow out for Rome and for my country,
And mouth at Cæſar 'till I ſhake the Senate.
Your cold hypocriſie's a ſtale device,
A worn out trick: would'ſt thou be thought in earneſt?
Cloath thy feign'd zeal in rage, in fire, in fury!

SYPHAX.

In troth, thou'rt able to inſtruct grey-hairs,
And teach the wily African deceit!

SEMPRONIUS.

Once more, be ſure to try thy skill on Juba.
Mean while I'll haſten to my Roman ſoldiers,
Inflame the mutiny, and underhand
Blow up their diſcontents, 'till they break out
Unlook'd-for, and diſcharge themſelves on Cato.
Remember, Syphax, we muſt work in haſte:
O think what anxious moments paſs between
The birth of plots, and their laſt fatal periods.
Oh! 'tis a dreadful interval of time,
Fill'd up with horror all, and big with death!
Deſtruction hangs on every word we ſpeak,
On every thought, till the concluding ſtroke
Determines all, and cloſes our deſign. [Exit.

SYPHAX ſolus.

I'll try if yet I can reduce to reaſon
This head-ſtrong youth, and make him ſpurn at Cato.
The time is ſhort, Cæſar comes ruſhing on us——
But hold! young Juba ſees me, and approaches.

SCENE IV.

JUBA, SYPHAX.

JUBA.

Syphax, I joy to meet thee thus alone.
I have obſerv'd of late thy looks are fallen,
O'ercaſt with gloomy cares, and diſcontent;
Then tell me, Syphax, I conjure thee, tell me,
What are the thoughts that knit thy brow in frowns,
And turn thine eye thus coldly on thy Prince?

SYPHAX.

'Tis not my talent to conceal my thoughts,
Or carry ſmiles and ſun-ſhine in my face,
When diſcontent ſits heavy at my heart.
I have not yet ſo much the Roman in me.

JUBA.

Why do'ſt thou caſt out ſuch ungenerous terms
Againſt the Lords and Sov'reigns of the world?
Doſt thou not ſee mankind fall down before them,
And own the force of their ſuperior virtue?
Is there a nation in the wilds of Africk,
Amidſt our barren rocks, and burning ſands,
That does not tremble at the Roman name?

SYPHAX.

Gods! where's the worth that ſets this people up
Above your own Numidia's tawny ſons!

Do

Do they with tougher ſinews bend the bow?
Or flies the javelin ſwifter to its mark,
Launch'd from the vigour of a Roman arm?
Who like our active African inſtructs
The fiery ſteed, and trains him to his hand?
Or guides in troops th' embattled Elephant,
Loaden with war? theſe, theſe are arts, my Prince,
In which your Zama does not ſtoop to Rome.

JUBA.

Theſe all are virtues of a meaner rank,
Perfections that are place'd in bones and nerves.
A Roman ſoul is bent on higher views:
To civilize the rude unpoliſh'd world,
And lay it under the reſtraint of laws;
To make Man mild, and ſociable to Man;
To cultivate the wild licentious Savage
With wiſdom, diſcipline, and liberal arts;
Th' embelliſhments of life: Virtues like theſe,
Make human nature ſhine, reform the ſoul,
And break our fierce barbarians into men.

SYPHAX.

Patience kind Heavens!— excuſe an old man's warmth.
What are theſe wondrous civilizing arts,
This Roman poliſh, and this ſmooth behaviour,
That render man thus tractable and tame?
Are they not only to diſguiſe our paſſions,
To ſet our looks at variance with our thoughts,
To check the ſtarts and ſallies of the ſoul,

And break off all its commerce with the tongue;
In ſhort, to change us into other creatures,
Than what our nature and the Gods deſign'd us?

JUBA.

To ſtrike thee dumb: turn up thy eyes to Cato!
There may'ſt thou ſee to what a godlike height
The Roman virtues lift up mortal man.
While good, and juſt, and anxious for his friends,
He's ſtill ſeverely bent againſt himſelf;
Renouncing ſleep, and reſt, and food, and eaſe,
He ſtrives with thirſt and hunger, toil and heat;
And when his fortune ſets before him all
The pomps and pleaſures that his ſoul can wiſh,
His rigid virtue will accept of none.

SYPHAX.

Believe me, Prince, there's not an African
That traverſes our vaſt Numidian deſarts
In queſt of prey, and lives upon his bow,
But better practiſes theſe boaſted virtues.
Coarſe are his meals, the fortune of the chace,
Amidſt the running ſtream he ſlakes his thirſt,
Toils all the day, and at th'approach of night
On the firſt friendly bank he throws him down,
Or reſts his head upon a rock 'till morn:
Then riſes freſh, purſues his wonted game,
And if the following day he chance to find
A new repaſt, or an untaſted ſpring,
Bleſſes his ſtars, and thinks it luxury.

JUBA.

Thy prejudices, Syphax, won't discern
What virtues grow from ignorance and choice,
Nor how the Hero differs from the Brute.
But grant that others could with equal glory
Look down on pleasures, and the baits of sense;
Where shall we find the man that bears affliction,
Great and majestick in his griefs, like Cato?
Heavens! with what strength, what steadiness of mind,
He triumphs in the midst of all his sufferings!
How does he rise against a load of woes,
And thank the Gods that throw the weight upon him!

SYPHAX.

'Tis pride, rank pride, and haughtiness of soul:
I think the Romans call it Stoicism.
Had not your royal father thought so highly
Of Roman virtue, and of Cato's cause,
He had not fallen by a slave's hand, inglorious:
Nor would his slaughter'd army now have lain
On Africk's sands, disfigur'd with their wounds,
To gorge the Wolves and Vultures of Numidia.

JUBA.

Why do'st thou call my sorrows up afresh?
My Father's name brings tears into my eyes.

SYPHAX.

Oh! that you'd profit by your Father's ills.

JUBA.

What would'st thou have me do?

SY-

SYPHAX.

Abandon Cato.

JUBA.

Syphax, I ſhould be more than twice an Orphan
By ſuch a loſs.

SYPHAX.

Ay, there's the tie that binds you!
You long to call him Father. Marcia's charms
Work in your heart unſeen, and plead for Cato.
No wonder you are deaf to all I ſay.

JUBA.

Syphax, your zeal becomes importunate;
I've hitherto permitted it to rave,
And talk at large; but learn to keep it in,
Leſt it ſhould take more freedom than I'll give it.

SYPHAX.

Sir, your great father never us'd me thus.
Alas, he's dead! but can you e'er forget
The tender ſorrows, and the pangs of nature,
The fond embraces, and repeated bleſſings,
Which you drew from him in your laſt farewel?
Still muſt I cheriſh the dear, ſad, remembrance,
At once to torture, and to pleaſe my ſoul.
The good old King at parting wrung my hand,
(His eyes brim-full of tears) then ſighing cry'd,
Pr'ythee be careful of my ſon! —— his grief
Swell'd up ſo high, he could not utter more.

JUBA.

JUBA.

Alas, thy ſtory melts away my ſoul.
That beſt of fathers! how ſhall I diſcharge
The gratitude and duty which I owe him!

SYPHAX.

By laying up his counſels in your heart.

JUBA.

His counſels bade me yield to thy directions:
Then, Syphax, chide me in ſevereſt terms,
Vent all thy paſſion, and I'll ſtand its ſhock,
Calm and unruffled as a ſummer-ſea,
When not a breath of wind flies o'er its ſurface.

SYPHAX.

Alas, my Prince, I'd guide you to your ſafety.

JUBA.

I do believe thou would'ſt: but tell me how?

SYPHAX.

Fly from the fate that follows Cæſar's foes.

JUBA.

My father ſcorn'd to do it.

SYPHAX.

And therefore dy'd.

JUBA.

Better to die ten thouſand thouſand deaths,
Than wound my honour.

SYPHAX.

Rather ſay your love.

JUBA.

JUBA.

Syphax, I've promis'd to preſerve my temper.
Why wilt thou urge me to confeſs a flame,
I long have ſtifled, and would fain conceal?

SYPHAX.

Believe me, Prince, tho' hard to conquer love,
Tis eaſie to divert and break its force:
Abſence might cure it, or a ſecond miſtreſs
Light up another flame, and put out this.
The glowing dames of Zama's royal court
Have faces fluſht with more exalted charms;
The Sun, that rolls his chariot o'er their heads,
Works up more fire and colour in their cheeks:
Were you with theſe, my Prince, you'd ſoon forget
The pale unripen'd beauties of the North.

JUBA.

'Tis not a ſett of features, or complexion,
The tincture of a skin, that I admire.
Beauty ſoon grows familiar to the lover,
Fades in his eye, and palls upon the ſenſe.
The virtuous Marcia tow'rs above her ſex:
True, ſhe is fair, (Oh how divinely fair!)
But ſtill the lovely maid improves her charms
With inward greatneſs, unaffected wiſdom,
And ſanctity of manners. Cato's ſoul
Shines out in every thing ſhe acts or ſpeaks,
While winning mildneſs and attractive ſmiles

Dwell in her looks, and with becoming grace
Soften the rigour of her father's virtue.

SYPHAX.

How does your tongue grow wanton in her praiſe!
But on my knees I beg you would conſider——

JUBA.

Hah! Syphax, is't not ſhe!—ſhe moves this way:
And with her Lucia, Lucius's fair daughter.
My heart beats thick—I pr'ythee Syphax leave me.

SYPHAX.

Ten thouſand curſes faſten on 'em both!
Now will this woman with a ſingle glance
Undo, what I've been labouring all this while. [Exit.

SCENE V.

JUBA, MARCIA, LUCIA.

JUBA.

Hail charming Maid! how does thy beauty ſmooth
The face of war, and make even Horror ſmile!
At ſight of thee my heart ſhakes off its ſorrows;
I feel a dawn of joy break in upon me,
And for a while forget th' approach of Cæſar.

MARCIA.

I ſhould be griev'd, young Prince, to think my preſence
Unbent your thoughts, and ſlacken'd 'em to arms,

While

While, warm with ſlaughter, our victorious foe
Threatens aloud, and calls you to the field.

JUBA.

O Marcia, let me hope thy kind concerns
And gentle wiſhes follow me to battel!
The thought will give new vigour to my arm,
Add ſtrength and weight to my deſcending ſword,
And drive it in a tempeſt on the foe.

MARCIA.

My prayers and wiſhes always ſhall attend
The friends of Rome, the glorious cauſe of virtue,
And men approv'd of by the Gods and Cato.

JUBA.

That Juba may deſerve thy pious cares,
I'll gaze for ever on thy godlike father,
Tranſplanting, one by one, into my life
His bright perfections, 'till I ſhine like him.

MARCIA.

My Father never at a time like this
Would lay out his great ſoul in words, and waſte
Such precious moments.

JUBA.

Thy reproofs are juſt,
Thou virtuous maid; I'll haſten to my troops,
And fire their languid ſouls with Cato's virtue.
If e'er I lead them to the field, when all
The war ſhall ſtand range'd in its juſt array,
And dreadful pomp: then will I think on thee!

O lovely Maid, then will I think on thee!
And, in the ſhock of charging hoſts, remember
What glorious deeds ſhould grace the man, who hopes
For Marcia's love. [Exit.

SCENE VI.

LUCIA, MARCIA.

LUCIA.

Marcia, you're too ſevere:
How could you chide the young good-natur'd Prince,
And drive him from you with ſo ſtern an air,
A Prince that loves and doats on you to death?

MARCIA.

'Tis therefore, Lucia, that I chide him from me.
His air, his voice, his looks, and honeſt ſoul
Speak all ſo movingly in his behalf,
I dare not truſt my ſelf to hear him talk.

LUCIA.

Why will you fight againſt ſo ſweet a paſſion,
And ſteel your heart to ſuch a world of charms?

MARCIA.

How, Lucia! would'ſt thou have me ſink away
In pleaſing dreams, and loſe my ſelf in love,
When every moment Cato's life's at ſtake?
Cæſar comes arm'd with terror and revenge,

And

And aims his thunder at my father's head:
Should not the ſad occaſion ſwallow up
My other cares, and draw them all into it?

LUCIA.

Why have not I this conſtancy of mind,
Who have ſo many griefs to try its force?
Sure, Nature form'd me of her ſofteſt mould,
Enfeebled all my ſoul with tender paſſions,
And ſunk me even below my own weak ſex:
Pity and love, by turns, oppreſs my heart.

MARCIA.

Lucia, disburthen all thy cares on me,
And let me ſhare thy moſt retir'd diſtreſs;
Tell me who raiſes up this conflict in thee?

LUCIA.

I need not bluſh to name them, when I tell thee
They're Marcia's brothers, and the ſons of Cato.

MARCIA.

They both behold thee with their ſiſter's eyes:
And often have reveal'd their paſſion to me.
But tell me, whoſe addreſs thou favour'ſt moſt:
I long to know, and yet I dread to hear it.

LUCIA.

Which is it Marcia wiſhes for?

MARCIA.

For neither ——
And yet for both —— the youths have equal ſhare

In Marcia's wiſhes, and divide their ſiſter:
But tell me, which of them is Lucia's choice?

LUCIA.

Marcia, they both are high in my eſteem,
But in my love—why wilt thou make me name him?
Thou know'ſt it is a blind and fooliſh paſſion,
Pleas'd and diſguſted with it knows not what——

MARCIA.

O Lucia, I'm perplex'd, O tell me which
I muſt hereafter call my happy brother?

LUCIA.

Suppoſe 'twere Portius, could you blame my choice?
—O Portius, thou haſt ſtol'n away my ſoul!
With what a graceful tenderneſs he loves!
And breathes the ſofteſt, the ſincereſt vows!
Complacency, and truth, and manly ſweetneſs
Dwell ever on his tongue, and ſmooth his thoughts.
Marcus is over-warm, his fond complaints
Have ſo much earneſtneſs and paſſion in them,
I hear him with a ſecret kind of horrour,
And tremble at his vehemence of temper.

MARCIA.

Alas poor youth! how can'ſt thou throw him from thee?
Lucia, thou know'ſt not half the love he bears thee;
Whene'er he ſpeaks of thee, his heart's in flames,
He ſends out all his ſoul in every word,
And thinks, and talks, and looks like one tranſported.

Unhappy youth! how will thy coldneſs raiſe
Tempeſts and ſtorms in his afflicted boſom!
I dread the conſequence.

LUCIA.

You ſeem to plead
Againſt your brother Portius.

MARCIA.

Heaven forbid!
Had Portius been the unſucceſsful lover,
The ſame compaſſion would have fall'n on him.

LUCIA.

Was ever virgin-love diſtreſs'd like mine!
Portius himſelf oft falls in tears before me,
As if he mourn'd his rival's ill ſucceſs;
Then bids me hide the motions of my heart,
Nor ſhow which way it turns. So much he fears
The ſad effects that it would have on Marcus.

MARCIA.

He knows too well how eaſily he's fired,
And would not plunge his brother in deſpair,
But waits for happier times, and kinder moments.

LUCIA.

Alas! too late I find my ſelf involved
In endleſs griefs, and labyrinths of woe,
Born to afflict my Marcia's family,
And ſow diſſenſion in the hearts of brothers.
Tormenting thought! it cuts into my ſoul.

MARCIA.

MARCIA.

Let us not, Lucia, aggravate our ſorrows,
But to the Gods permit th' event of things.
Our lives, diſcolour'd with our preſent woes,
May ſtill grow white, and ſmile with happier hours.

So the pure limpid ſtream, when foul with ſtains
Of ruſhing torrents, and deſcending rains,
Works it ſelf clear, and as it runs, refines;
'Till, by degrees, the floating mirrour ſhines,
Reflects each flow'r that on the border grows,
And a new Heaven in its fair boſom ſhows. [Exeunt.

ACT

ACT II. SCENE I.

The SENATE.

SEMPRONIUS.

ROME ſtill ſurvives in this aſſembled Senate!
Let us remember we are Cato's friends,
And act like men who claim that glorious title.

LUCIUS.

Cato will ſoon be here, and open to us
Th' occaſion of our meeting. Heark! he comes!
[A ſound of trumpets.
May all the guardian gods of Rome direct him!

Enter CATO.

CATO.

Fathers, we once again are met in council.
Cæſar's approach has ſummon'd us together,
And Rome attends her fate from our reſolves:
How ſhall we treat this bold aſpiring man?
Succeſs ſtill follows him, and backs his crimes:
Pharſalia gave him Rome; Egypt has ſince
Receiv'd his yoke, and the whole Nile is Cæſar's.

Why

Why ſhould I mention Juba's overthrow,
And Scipio's death? Numidia's burning ſands
Still ſmoke with blood. 'Tis time we ſhould decree
What courſe to take. Our foe advances on us,
And envies us even Libya's ſultry deſarts.
Fathers, pronounce your thoughts, are they ſtill fixt
To hold it out, and fight it to the laſt?
Or are your hearts ſubdu'd at length, and wrought
By time and ill ſucceſs to a ſubmiſſion?
Sempronius, ſpeak.

SEMPRONIUS.

My voice is ſtill for war.
Gods! can a Roman Senate long debate
Which of the two to chuſe, ſlavery or death!
No, let us riſe at once, gird on our ſwords,
And, at the head of our remaining troops,
Attack the foe, break through the thick array
Of his throng'd legions, and charge home upon him.
Perhaps ſome arm, more lucky than the reſt,
May reach his heart, and free the world from bondage.
Riſe, Fathers, riſe! 'tis Rome demands your help;
Riſe, and revenge her ſlaughter'd citizens,
Or ſhare their fate! the corps of half her Senate
Manure the fields of Theſſaly, while we
Sit here, deliberating in cold debates,
If we ſhould ſacrifice our lives to honour,
Or wear them out in ſervitude and chains.
Rouſe up for ſhame! our brothers of Pharſalia

Point at their wounds, and cry aloud—— to Battel!
Great Pompey's ſhade complains that we are ſlow,
And Scipio's ghoſt walks unreveng'd amongſt us!

CATO.

Let not a torrent of impetuous zeal
Tranſport thee thus beyond the bounds of reaſon:
True fortitude is ſeen in great exploits
That juſtice warrants, and that wiſdom guides,
All elſe is tow'ring frenzy and diſtraction.
Are not the lives of thoſe, who draw the ſword
In Rome's defence, entruſted to our care?
Should we thus lead them to a field of ſlaughter,
Might not th' impartial world with reaſon ſay
We laviſh'd at our deaths the blood of thouſands,
To grace our fall, and make our ruine glorious?
Lucius, we next would know what's your opinion.

LUCIUS.

My thoughts, I muſt confeſs, are turn'd on peace.
Already have our quarrels fill'd the world
With widows and with orphans: Scythia mourns
Our guilty wars, and earth's remoteſt regions
Lie half unpeopled by the feuds of Rome:
'Tis time to ſheath the ſword, and ſpare mankind.
It is not Cæſar, but the Gods, my fathers,
The Gods declare againſt us, and repell
Our vain attempts. To urge the foe to battel,
(Prompted by blind revenge and wild deſpair)
Were to refuſe th' awards of Providence,

And

And not to reſt in Heaven's determination.
Already have we ſhown our love to Rome,
Now let us ſhow ſubmiſſion to the Gods.
We took up arms, not to revenge our ſelves,
But free the common-wealth; when this end fails,
Arms have no further uſe: our country's cauſe,
That drew our ſwords, now wreſts 'em from our hands,
And bids us not delight in Roman blood,
Unprofitably ſhed; what men could do
Is done already: Heaven and earth will witneſs,
If Rome muſt fall, that we are innocent.

SEMPRONIUS.

This ſmooth diſcourſe and mild behaviour oft
Conceal a traitor——ſomething whiſpers me
All is not right—Cato, beware of Lucius. [Aſide to Cato.

CATO.

Let us appear nor raſh nor diffident:
Immoderate valour ſwells into a fault,
And fear, admitted into publick counſels,
Betrays like treaſon. Let us ſhun 'em both.
Fathers, I cannot ſee that our affairs
Are grown thus deſperate. We have bulwarks round us;
Within our walls are troops enur'd to toil
In Africk's heats, and ſeaſon'd to the ſun;
Numidia's ſpacious kingdom lies behind us,
Ready to riſe at its young Prince's call.
While there is hope, do not diſtruſt the Gods;
But wait at leaſt 'till Cæſar's near approach

Force us to yield. 'Twill never be too late
To sue for chains, and own a conqueror.
Why should Rome fall a moment ere her time?
No, let us draw her term of freedom out
In its full length, and spin it to the last,
So shall we gain still one day's liberty;
And let me perish, but, in Cato's judgment,
A day, an hour of virtuous liberty,
Is worth a whole eternity in bondage.

Enter MARCUS.

MARCUS.

Fathers, this moment, as I watch'd the gates
Lodg'd on my post, a herald is arrived
From Cæsar's camp, and with him comes old Decius,
The Roman knight; he carries in his looks
Impatience, and demands to speak with Cato.

CATO.

By your permission, fathers, bid him enter.

[Exit Marcus.

Decius was once my friend, but other prospects
Have loose'd those ties, and bound him fast to Cæsar.
His message may determine our resolves.

SCENE

SCENE II.

DECIUS, CATO, &c.

DECIUS.

Cæſar ſends health to Cato.——

CATO.

Could he ſend it
To Cato's ſlaughter'd friends, it would be welcome.
Are not your orders to addreſs the Senate?

DECIUS.

My buſineſs is with Cato: Cæſar ſees
The ſtreights, to which you're driven; and, as he knows
Cato's high worth, is anxious for your life.

CATO.

My life is grafted on the fate of Rome:
Would he ſave Cato? bid him ſpare his country.
Tell your Dictator this: and tell him, Cato
Diſdains a life, which he has power to offer.

DECIUS.

Rome and her Senators ſubmit to Cæſar.
Her Generals and her Conſuls are no more,
Who check'd his conqueſts, and denied his triumphs.
Why will not Cato be this Cæſar's friend?

CATO.

Thoſe very reaſons, thou haſt urg'd, forbid it.

DECIUS.

Cato, I've orders to expoſtulate,
And reaſon with you, as from friend to friend:
Think on the ſtorm that gathers o'er your head,
And threatens every hour to burſt upon it;
Still may you ſtand high in your country's honours,
Do but comply, and make your peace with Cæſar.
Rome will rejoice, and caſt its eyes on Cato,
As on the ſecond of mankind.

CATO.

No more!
I muſt not think of life on ſuch conditions.

DECIUS.

Cæſar is well acquainted with your virtues,
And therefore ſets this value on your life:
Let him but know the price of Cato's friendſhip;
And name your terms.

CATO.

Bid him diſband his legions,
Reſtore the common-wealth to liberty,
Submit his actions to the publick cenſure,
And ſtand the judgment of a Roman Senate.
Bid him do this, and Cato is his friend.

DECIUS.

Cato, the world talks loudly of your wiſdom——

CATO.

Nay more, tho' Cato's voice was ne'er employ'd
To clear the guilty, and to varniſh crimes,

My

My ſelf will mount the Roſtrum in his favour,
And ſtrive to gain his pardon from the people.

DECIUS.

A ſtyle, like this, becomes a Conqueror.

CATO.

Decius, a ſtyle, like this, becomes a Roman.

DECIUS.

What is a Roman, that is Cæſar's foe?

CATO.

Greater than Cæſar: he's a friend to virtue.

DECIUS.

Conſider, Cato, you're in Utica,
And at the head of your own little Senate;
You don't now thunder in the capitol,
With all the mouths of Rome to ſecond you.

CATO.

Let him conſider that, who drives us hither:
'Tis Cæſar's ſword has made Rome's Senate little,
And thinn'd its ranks. Alas, thy dazzled eye
Beholds this man in a falſe glaring light,
Which conqueſt and ſucceſs have thrown upon him;
Didſt thou but view him right, thou'dſt ſee him black
With murther, treaſon, ſacrilege, and crimes
That ſtrike my ſoul with horror but to name 'em.
I know thou look'ſt on me, as on a wretch
Beſet with ills, and cover'd with misfortunes;
But, by the Gods I ſwear, millions of worlds
Should never buy me to be like that Cæſar.

DECIUS.

Does Cato ſend this anſwer back to Cæſar,
For all his generous cares, and proffer'd friendſhip?

CATO.

His cares for me are inſolent and vain:
Preſumptuous man! the Gods take care of Cato.
Would Cæſar ſhow the greatneſs of his ſoul?
Bid him employ his care for theſe my friends,
And make good uſe of his ill-gotten power,
By ſhelt'ring men much better than himſelf.

DECIUS.

Your high unconquer'd heart makes you forget
You are a Man. You ruſh on your deſtruction.
But I have done. When I relate hereafter
The tale of this unhappy embaſſie,
All Rome will be in tears. [Exit Decius.

SCENE III.

SEMPRONIUS, LUCIUS, CATO, &c.

SEMPRONIUS.

Cato, we thank thee.
The mighty genius of immortal Rome
Speaks in thy voice, thy ſoul breathes liberty:
Cæſar will ſhrink to hear the words thou utter'ſt,
And ſhudder in the midſt of all his conqueſts.

LUCIUS.

LUCIUS.

The Senate owns its gratitude to Cato,
Who with ſo great a ſoul conſults its ſafety,
And guards our lives, while he neglects his own.

SEMPRONIUS.

Sempronius gives no thanks on this account.
Lucius ſeems fond of life; but what is Life?
'Tis not to ſtalk about, and draw freſh air,
From time to time, or gaze upon the Sun;
'Tis to be Free. When liberty is gone,
Life grows inſipid, and has loſt its reliſh.
O could my dying hand but lodge a ſword
In Cæſar's boſom, and revenge my country,
By Heavens I could enjoy the pangs of death,
And ſmile in agony.

LUCIUS.

Others perhaps
May ſerve their country with as warm a zeal,
Though 'tis not kindled into ſo much rage.

SEMPRONIUS.

This ſober conduct is a mighty virtue
In luke-warm Patriots.

CATO.

Come! no more, Sempronius,
All here are friends to Rome, and to each other.
Let us not weaken ſtill the weaker ſide,
By our diviſions.

SEMPRONIUS.

Cato, my reſentments
Are ſacrifice'd to Rome—— I ſtand reproved.

CATO.

Fathers, 'tis time you come to a reſolve.

LUCIUS.

Cato, we all go into your opinion.
Cæſar's behaviour has convince'd the Senate
We ought to hold it out 'till terms arrive.

SEMPRONIUS.

We ought to hold it out 'till death; but, Cato,
My private voice is drown'd amid the Senate's.

CATO.

Then let us riſe, my friends, and ſtrive to fill
This little interval, this pauſe of life,
(While yet our liberty and fates are doubtful)
With reſolution, friendſhip, Roman bravery,
And all the virtues we can croud into it;
That Heaven may ſay, it ought to be prolong'd.
Fathers, farewel—— The young Numidian Prince
Comes forward, and expects to know our counſels.

SCENE IV.

CATO, JUBA.

CATO.

Juba, the Roman Senate has reſolv'd,
'Till time give better proſpects, ſtill to keep
The ſword unſheath'd, and turn its edge on Cæſar.

JUBA.

The reſolution fits a Roman Senate.
But, Cato, lend me for a while thy patience,
And condeſcend to hear a young Man ſpeak.
My father, when ſome days before his death
He order'd me to march for Utica
(Alas, I thought not then his death ſo near!)
Wept o'er me, preſt me in his aged arms,
And, as his griefs gave way, my ſon, ſaid he,
Whatever fortune ſhall befall thy father,
Be Cato's friend, he'll train thee up to great
And virtuous deeds: do but obſerve him well,
Thou'lt ſhun misfortunes, or thou'lt learn to bear 'em.

CATO.

Juba, thy father was a worthy Prince,
And merited, alas! a better fate;
But Heaven thought otherwiſe.

JUBA.

My father's fate,
In ſpight of all the fortitude, that ſhines

Before

Before my face, in Cato's great example,
Subdues my ſoul, and fills my eyes with tears.

CATO.

It is an honeſt ſorrow, and becomes thee.

JUBA.

My father drew reſpect from foreign climes:
The Kings of Africk ſought him for their friend;
Kings far remote, that rule, as fame reports,
Behind the hidden ſources of the Nile,
In diſtant Worlds, on t'other ſide the Sun:
Oft have their black ambaſſadors appeared,
Loaden with gifts, and fill'd the courts of Zama.

CATO.

I am no ſtranger to thy father's greatneſs!

JUBA.

I would not boaſt the greatneſs of my father,
But point out new alliances to Cato.
Had we not better leave this Utica,
To arm Numidia in our cauſe, and court
Th'aſſiſtance of my father's powerful friends?
Did they know Cato, our remoteſt Kings
Would pour embattled multitudes about him;
Their ſwarthy hoſts would darken all our plains,
Doubling the native horrour of the war,
And making death more grim.

CATO.

And canſt thou think
Cato will fly before the ſword of Cæſar?

Reduce'd like Hannibal, to ſeek relief
From court to court, and wander up and down
A vagabond in Africk!

JUBA.

Cato, perhaps
I'm too officious, but my forward cares
Would fain preſerve a life of ſo much value.
My heart is wounded, when I ſee ſuch virtue
Afflicted by the weight of ſuch misfortunes.

CATO.

Thy nobleneſs of ſoul obliges me.
But know, young Prince, that value ſoars above
What the world calls misfortune and affliction.
Theſe are not ills; elſe would they never fall
On Heaven's firſt favourites, and the beſt of men:
The Gods, in bounty, work up ſtorms about us,
That give mankind occaſion to exert
Their hidden ſtrength, and throw out into practice
Virtues, which ſhun the day, and lie conceal'd
In the ſmooth ſeaſons and the calms of life.

JUBA.

I'm charm'd whene'er thou talk'ſt! I pant for virtue!
And all my ſoul endeavours at perfection.

CATO.

Doſt thou love watchings, abſtinence, and toil,
Laborious virtues all? learn them from Cato:
Succeſs and fortune muſt thou learn from Cæſar.

JUBA.

JUBA.

The beſt good fortune that can fall on Juba,
The whole ſucceſs, at which my heart aſpires,
Depends on Cato.

CATO.

What does Juba ſay?
Thy words confound me.

JUBA.

I would fain retract them,
Give 'em me back again. They aim'd at nothing.

CATO.

Tell me thy wiſh, young Prince; make not my ear
A ſtranger to thy thoughts.

JUBA.

Oh, they're extravagant;
Still let me hide them.

CATO.

What can Juba ask
That Cato will refuſe!

JUBA.

I fear to name it.
Marcia—— inherits all her father's virtues.

CATO.

What would'ſt thou ſay?

JUBA.

Cato, thou haſt a daughter.

CATO.

Adieu, young Prince: I would not hear a word

Should

Should leſſen thee in my eſteem: remember
The hand of fate is over us, and Heaven
Exacts ſeverity from all our thoughts:
It is not now a time to talk of aught
But chains, or conqueſt; liberty, or death.

SCENE V.

SYPHAX, JUBA.

SYPHAX.

How's this, my Prince! what, cover'd with confuſion?
You look as if yon ſtern Philoſopher
Had juſt now chid you.

JUBA.

Syphax, I'm undone!

SYPHAX.

I know it well.

JUBA.

Cato thinks meanly of me.

SYPHAX.

And ſo will all mankind.

JUBA.

I've opened to him
The weakneſs of my ſoul, my love for Marcia.

SYPHAX.

Cato's a proper perſon to entruſt
A love-tale with.

JUBA.

JUBA.

Oh, I could pierce my heart,
My fooliſh heart! was ever wretch like Juba?

SYPHAX.

Alas, my Prince, how are you change'd of late!
I've known young Juba riſe, before the Sun,
To beat the thicket where the Tiger ſlept,
Or ſeek the Lion in his dreadful haunts:
How did the colour mount into your cheeks,
When firſt you rouſe'd him to the chaſe! I've ſeen you,
Even in the Libyan Dog-days, hunt him down,
Then charge him cloſe, provoke him to the rage
Of fangs and claws, and ſtooping from your Horſe
Rivet the panting ſavage to the ground.

JUBA.

Pr'ythee, no more!

SYPHAX.

How would the old King ſmile
To ſee you weigh the paws, when tipp'd with gold,
And throw the ſhaggy ſpoils about your ſhoulders!

JUBA.

Syphax, this old man's talk (tho' honey flow'd
In every word) would now loſe all its ſweetneſs.
Cato's diſpleas'd, and Marcia loſt for ever!

SYPHAX.

Young Prince, I yet could give you good advice.
Marcia might ſtill be yours.

JUBA.

JUBA.

What ſay'ſt thou, Syphax?
By heavens, thou turn'ſt me all into attention.

SYPHAX.

Marcia might ſtill be yours.

JUBA.

As how, dear Syphax?

SYPHAX.

Juba commands Numidia's hardy troops,
Mounted on ſteeds, unus'd to the reſtraint
Of curbes or bittes, and fleeter than the winds:
Give but the word, we'll ſnatch this damſel up,
And bear her off.

JUBA.

Can ſuch diſhoneſt thoughts
Riſe up in man! would'ſt thou ſeduce my youth
To do an act that would deſtroy my honour?

SYPHAX.

Gods, I could tear my beard to hear you talk!
Honour's a fine imaginary notion,
That draws in raw and unexperience'd men
To real miſchiefs, while they hunt a ſhadow.

JUBA.

Would'ſt thou degrade thy Prince into a Ruffian?

SYPHAX.

The boaſted Anceſtors of theſe great men,
Whoſe virtues you admire, were all ſuch Ruffians.
This dread of nations, this almighty Rome,

That

That comprehends in her wide empire's bounds
All under Heaven, was founded on a Rape.
Your Scipio's, Cæsar's, Pompey's, and your Cato's,
(These Gods on earth) are all the spurious brood
Of violated maids, of ravish'd Sabines.

JUBA.

Syphax, I fear that hoary head of thine
Abounds too much in our Numidian wiles.

SYPHAX.

Indeed, my Prince, you want to know the world;
You have not read mankind; your youth admires
The throws and swellings of a Roman soul,
Cato's bold flights, th' extravagance of virtue.

JUBA.

If knowledge of the world makes man perfidious,
May Juba ever live in ignorance!

SYPHAX.

Go, go, you're young.

JUBA.

Gods, must I tamely bear
This arrogance unanswer'd! thou'rt a traitor,
A false old traitor.

SYPHAX.

I have gone too far. [Aside.

JUBA.

Cato shall know the baseness of thy soul.

SYPHAX.

I must appease this storm, or perish in it. [Aside.

Young Prince, behold theſe locks that are grown white
Beneath a helmet in your father's battels.

JUBA.

Thoſe locks ſhall ne'er protect thy inſolence.

SYPHAX.

Muſt one raſh word, th' infirmity of age,
Throw down the merit of my better years?
This the reward of a whole life of ſervice!
—Curſe on the boy! how ſteadily he hears me! [Aſide.

JUBA.

Is it becauſe the throne of my fore-fathers
Still ſtands unfill'd, and that Numidia's crown
Hangs doubtful yet, whoſe head it ſhall encloſe,
Thou thus preſum'ſt to treat thy Prince with ſcorn?

SYPHAX.

Why will you rive my heart with ſuch expreſſions?
Does not old Syphax follow you to war?
What are his aims? why does he load with darts
His trembling hand, and cruſh beneath a cask
His wrinkled brows? what is it he aſpires to;
Is it not this? to ſhed the ſlow remains,
His laſt poor ebb of blood, in your defence?

JUBA.

Syphax, no more! I would not hear you talk.

SYPHAX.

Not hear me talk! what, when my faith to Juba,
My royal maſter's ſon, is call'd in queſtion?
My Prince may ſtrike me dead, and I'll be dumb:

But

But whilſt I live I muſt not hold my tongue,
And languiſh out old age in his diſpleaſure.

JUBA.

Thou know'ſt the way too well into my heart,
I do believe thee loyal to thy Prince.

SYPHAX.

What greater inſtance can I give? I've offer'd
To do an action, which my ſoul abhors,
And gain you whom you love at any price.

JUBA.

Was this thy motive? I have been too haſty.

SYPHAX.

And 'tis for this my Prince has call'd me traitor.

JUBA.

Sure thou miſtak'ſt; I did not call thee ſo.

SYPHAX.

You did indeed, my Prince, you call'd me traitor:
Nay, further, threaten'd you'd complain to Cato.
Of what, my Prince, would you complain to Cato?
That Syphax loves you, and would ſacrifice
His life, nay more, his honour in your ſervice.

JUBA.

Syphax, I know thou lov'ſt me, but indeed
Thy zeal for Juba carried thee too far.
Honour's a ſacred tie, the law of Kings,
The noble mind's diſtinguiſhing perfection,
That aids and ſtrengthens virtue, where it meets her,
And imitates her actions, where ſhe is not:

It ought not to be ſported with.

SYPHAX.

By Heavens
I'm raviſh'd when you talk thus, tho' you chide me!
Alas, I've hitherto been uſe'd to think
A blind officious zeal to ſerve my King
The ruling principle, that ought to burn
And quench all others in a ſubject's heart.
Happy the people, who preſerve their honour,
By the ſame duties, that oblige their Prince!

JUBA.

Syphax, thou now begin'ſt to ſpeak thy ſelf.
Numidia's grown a ſcorn among the nations
For breach of publick vows. Our Punick faith
Is infamous, and branded to a proverb.
Syphax, we'll join our cares, to purge away
Our country's crimes, and clear her reputation.

SYPHAX.

Believe me, Prince, you make old Syphax weep
To hear you talk —— but 'tis with tears of joy.
If e'er your father's crown adorn your brows,
Numidia will be bleſt by Cato's lectures.

JUBA.

Syphax, thy hand! we'll mutually forget
The warmth of youth, and frowardneſs of age:
Thy Prince eſteems thy worth, and loves thy perſon.
If e'er the ſcepter comes into my hand,
Syphax ſhall ſtand the ſecond in my kingdom.

SY-

SYPHAX.

Why will you overwhelm my age with kindneſs?
My joy grows burdenſome, I ſhan't ſupport it.

JUBA.

Syphax, farewel: I'll hence, and try to find
Some bleſt occaſion that may ſet me right
In Cato's thoughts. I'd rather have that man
Approve my deeds, than worlds for my admirers.

SYPHAX ſolus.

Young men ſoon give, and ſoon forget affronts;
Old age is ſlow in both — A falſe old traitor!
Thoſe words, raſh boy, may chance to coſt thee dear.
My heart had ſtill ſome fooliſh fondneſs for thee:
But hence! 'tis gone: I give it to the winds: ——
Cæſar, I'm wholly thine ——

SCENE VI.

SYPHAX, SEMPRONIUS.

SYPHAX.

All hail, Sempronius!
Well, Cato's ſenate is reſolv'd to wait
The fury of a ſiege, before it yields.

SEMPRONIUS.

Syphax, we both were on the verge of fate:
Lucius declare'd for Peace, and terms were offer'd

To Cato by a meſſenger from Cæſar.
Should they ſubmit, ere our deſigns are ripe,
We both muſt periſh in the common wreck,
Loſt in a general undiſtinguiſh'd ruine.

SYPHAX.

But how ſtands Cato?

SEMPRONIUS.

Thou haſt ſeen mount Atlas:
While ſtorms and tempeſts thunder on its brows,
And oceans break their billows at its feet,
It ſtands unmove'd, and glories in its height.
Such is that haughty man; his towering ſoul,
'Midſt all the ſhocks and injuries of fortune,
Riſes ſuperior, and looks down on Cæſar.

SYPHAX.

But what's this meſſenger?

SEMPRONIUS.

I've practis'd with him,
And found a means to let the victor know
That Syphax and Sempronius are his friends.
But let me now examine in my turn:
Is Juba fixt?

SYPHAX.

Yes, —— but it is to Cato.
I've try'd the force of every reaſon on him,
Sooth'd and careſs'd, been angry, ſooth'd again,
Laid ſafety, life, and intereſt in his ſight;
But all are vain, he ſcorns them all for Cato.

SEM.

SEMPRONIUS.

Come, 'tis no matter, we ſhall do without him.
He'll make a pretty figure in a triumph,
And ſerve to trip before the victor's chariot.
Syphax, I now may hope thou haſt forſook
Thy Juba's cauſe, and wiſheſt Marcia mine.

SYPHAX.

May ſhe be thine as faſt as thou would'ſt have her!

SEMPRONIUS.

Syphax, I love that woman; though I curſe
Her and my ſelf, yet ſpight of me, I love her.

SYPHAX.

Make Cato ſure, and give up Utica,
Cæſar will ne'er refuſe thee ſuch a trifle.
But are thy troops prepare'd for a revolt?
Does the ſedition catch from man to man,
And run among their ranks?

SEMPRONIUS.

All, all is ready.
The factious leaders are our friends, that ſpread
Murmurs and diſcontents among the ſoldiers.
They count their toilſome marches, long fatigues,
Unuſual faſtings, and will bear no more
This medly of Philoſophy and War.
Within an hour they'll ſtorm the Senate-houſe.

SYPHAX.

Mean while I'll draw up my Numidian troops
Within the ſquare, to exerciſe their arms,

And

And, as I ſee occaſion, favour thee.
I laugh to think how your unſhaken Cato
Will look aghaſt, while unforeſeen deſtruction
Pours in upon him, thus from every ſide.
So, where our wide Numidian waſtes extend,
Sudden, th'impetuous hurricanes deſcend,
Wheel through the air, in circling eddies play,
Tear up the ſands, and ſweep whole plains away.
The helpleſs traveller, with wild ſurprize,
Sees the dry deſart all around him riſe,
And ſmother'd in the duſty whirlwind dies.

ACT III. SCENE I.

MARCUS and PORTIUS.

MARCUS.

THANKS to my ſtars, I have not range'd about
The wilds of life, ere I could find a friend;
Nature firſt pointed out my Portius to me,
And early taught me, by her ſecret force,
To love thy perſon, ere I knew thy merit;
Till, what was inſtinct, grew up into friendſhip.

PORTIUS.

Marcus, the friendſhips of the world are oft
Confederacies in vice, or leagues of pleaſure;
Ours has ſevereſt virtue for its baſis,
And ſuch a friendſhip ends not but with life.

MARCUS.

Portius, thou know'ſt my ſoul in all its weakneſs,
Then pr'ythee ſpare me on its tender ſide,
Indulge me but in love, my other paſſions
Shall riſe and fall by virtue's niceſt rules.

PORTIUS.

When love's well-tim'd, 'tis not a fault to love.

The

The ſtrong, the brave, the virtuous, and the wiſe,
Sink in the ſoft captivity together.
I would not urge thee to diſmiſs thy paſſion,
(I know 'twere vain) but to ſuppreſs its force,
'Till better times may make it look more graceful.

MARCUS.

Alas; thou talk'ſt like one who never felt
Th'impatient throbbs and longings of a ſoul,
That pants, and reaches after diſtant good.
A lover does not live by vulgar time:
Believe me, Portius, in my Lucia's abſence
Life hangs upon me, and becomes a burden;
And yet, when I behold the charming maid,
I'm ten times more undone; while hope and fear,
And grief, and rage, and love, riſe up at once,
And with variety of pain diſtract me.

PORTIUS.

What can thy Portius do to give thee help?

MARCUS.

Portius, thou oft enjoy'ſt the fair one's preſence:
Then undertake my cauſe, and plead it to her
With all the ſtrength and heats of eloquence
Fraternal love and friendſhip can inſpire.
Tell her thy brother languiſhes to death,
And fades away, and withers in his bloom;
That he forgets his ſleep, and loaths his food,
That youth, and health, and war are joyleſs to him:
Deſcribe his anxious days, and reſtleſs nights,

And all the torments that thou ſeeſt me ſuffer.

PORTIUS.

Marcus, I beg thee give me not an office,
That ſuits with me ſo ill. Thou know'ſt my temper.

MARCUS.

Wilt thou behold me ſinking in my woes?
And wilt thou not reach out a friendly arm,
To raiſe me from amidſt this plunge of ſorrows?

PORTIUS.

Marcus, thou canſt not ask what I'd refuſe.
But here believe me I've a thouſand reaſons ——

MARCUS.

I know thou'lt ſay my paſſion's out of ſeaſon,
That Cato's great example and misfortunes
Should both conſpire to drive it from my thoughts.
But what's all this to one who loves like me!
Oh Portius, Portius, from my ſoul I wiſh
Thou didſt but know thy ſelf what 'tis to love!
Then wouldſt thou pity and aſſiſt thy brother.

PORTIUS.

What ſhould I do! if I diſcloſe my paſſion,
Our friendſhip's at an end: if I conceal it,
The world will call me falſe to a friend and brother. [Aſide.

MARCUS.

But ſee where Lucia, at her wonted hour,
Amid the cool of yon high marble arch,
Enjoys the noon-day breeze! obſerve her, Portius!
That face, that ſhape, thoſe eyes, that Heaven of beauty!

Obſerve

Obſerve her well, and blame me if thou canſt.

PORTIUS.

She ſees us, and advances —

MARCUS.

I'll withdraw,
And leave you for a while. Remember, Portius,
Thy brother's life depends upon thy tongue.

SCENE II.

LUCIA, PORTIUS.

LUCIA.

Did I not ſee your brother Marcus here?
Why did he fly the place, and ſhun my preſence?

PORTIUS.

Oh, Lucia, language is too faint to ſhow
His rage of love; it preys upon his life;
He pines, he ſickens, he deſpairs, he dies:
His paſſions and his virtues lie confuſed,
And mixt together in ſo wild a tumult,
That the whole man is quite diſfigur'd in him.
Heavens! would one think 'twere poſſible for love
To make ſuch ravage in a noble ſoul!
Oh, Lucia, I'm diſtreſt! my heart bleeds for him;
Even now, while thus I ſtand bleſt in thy preſence,
A ſecret damp of grief comes o'er my thoughts,

And I'm unhappy, tho' thou ſmil'ſt upon me.

LUCIA.

How wilt thou guard thy honour, in the ſhock
Of love and friendſhip! think betimes, my Portius,
Think how the nuptial tie, that might enſure
Our mutual bliſs, would raiſe to ſuch a height
Thy brother's griefs, as might perhaps deſtroy him.

PORTIUS.

Alas, poor youth! what doſt thou think, my Lucia?
His generous, open, undeſigning heart
Has begg'd his rival to ſolicit for him.
Then do not ſtrike him dead with a denial,
But hold him up in life, and chear his ſoul
With the faint glimmering of a doubtful hope:
Perhaps, when we have paſs'd theſe gloomy hours,
And weather'd out the ſtorm that beats upon us ——

LUCIA.

No, Portius, no! I ſee thy ſiſter's tears,
Thy father's anguiſh, and thy brother's death,
In the purſuit of our ill-fated loves.
And, Portius, here I ſwear, to Heaven I ſwear,
To Heaven, and all the powers that judge mankind,
Never to mix my plighted hands with thine,
While ſuch a cloud of miſchiefs hangs about us,
But to forget our loves, and drive thee out
From all my thoughts, as far —— as I am able.

PORTIUS.

What haſt thou ſaid! I'm thunder-ſtruck! —— recall

Thoſe

Thoſe haſty words, or I am loſt for ever.

LUCIA.

Has not the Vow already paſs'd my lips?
The Gods have heard it, and 'tis ſeal'd in Heaven.
May all the vengeance that was ever pour'd
On perjur'd heads, o'erwhelm me, if I break it!

PORTIUS.

Fixt in aſtoniſhment, I gaze upon thee;
Like one juſt blaſted by a ſtroke from Heaven,
Who pants for breath, and ſtiffens, yet alive,
In dreadful looks: a monument of wrath!

LUCIA.

At length I've acted my ſevereſt part:
I feel the woman breaking in upon me,
And melt about my heart! my tears will flow.
But oh I'll think no more! the hand of fate
Has torn thee from me, and I muſt forget thee.

PORTIUS.

Hard-hearted, cruel maid!

LUCIA.

Oh ſtop thoſe ſounds,
Thoſe killing ſounds! why doſt thou frown upon me?
My blood runs cold, my heart forgets to heave,
And life it ſelf goes out at thy diſpleaſure.
The Gods forbid us to indulge our loves;
But oh! I cannot bear thy hate, and live!

PORTIUS.

Talk not of love: thou never knew'ſt its force.

I've been deluded, led into a dream
Of fancied bliſs. Oh Lucia, cruel maid!
Thy dreadful Vow, loaden with death, ſtill ſounds
In my ſtunn'd ears. What ſhall I ſay or do?
Quick, let us part! perdition's in thy preſence,
And horror dweils about thee! —— hah, ſhe faints!
Wretch that I am! what has my raſhneſs done!
Lucia, thou injur'd innocence! thou beſt
And lovelieſt of thy ſex! awake, my Lucia,
Or Portius ruſhes on his ſword to join thee.
—— Her imprecations reach not to the tomb,
They ſhut not out ſociety in death—
But hah! ſhe moves! life wanders up and down
Through all her face, and lights up every charm.

LUCIA.

O Portius, was this well! —— to frown on her
That lives upon thy ſmiles! to call in doubt
The faith of one expiring at thy feet,
That loves thee more than ever woman lov'd!
—— What do I ſay? my half-recover'd ſenſe
Forgets the Vow in which my ſoul is bound.
Deſtruction ſtands betwixt us! we muſt part.

PORTIUS.

Name not the word; my frighted thoughts run back,
And ſtartle into madneſs at the ſound.

LUCIA.

What would'ſt thou have me do? conſider well
The train of ills our love would draw behind it.

Think,

Think, Portius, think, thou ſeeſt thy dying brother
Stabb'd at his heart, and all beſmear'd with blood,
Storming at heaven and thee! thy awful Sire
Sternly demands the cauſe, th'accurſed cauſe,
That robs him of his ſon! poor Marcia trembles,
Then tears her hair, and frantick in her griefs
Calls out on Lucia! what could Lucia anſwer?
Or how ſtand up in ſuch a ſcene of ſorrow!

PORTIUS.

To my confuſion, and eternal grief,
I muſt approve the ſentence that deſtroys me.
The miſt, that hung about my mind, clears up;
And now, athwart the terrors that thy Vow
Has planted round thee, thou appear'ſt more fair,
More amiable, and riſeſt in thy charms.
Lovelieſt of women! Heaven is in thy ſoul,
Beauty and virtue ſhine for ever round thee,
Bright'ning each other! thou art all divine!

LUCIA.

Portius, no more! thy words ſhoot through my heart,
Melt my reſolves, and turn me all to love.
Why are thoſe tears of fondneſs in thy eyes?
Why heaves thy heart? why ſwells thy ſoul with ſorrow?
It ſoftens me too much — farewel, my Portius,
Farewel, though death is in the word, For-ever!

PORTIUS.

Stay, Lucia ſtay! what doſt thou ſay? For-ever?

LUCIA.

Have I not ſworn? if, Portius, thy ſucceſs
Muſt throw thy brother on his fate, farewel,
Oh, how ſhall I repeat the word! For-ever!

PORTIUS.

Thus o'er the dying lamp th' unſteady flame
Hangs quivering on a point, leaps off by fits,
And falls again, as loth to quit its hold.
—Thou muſt not go, my ſoul ſtill hovers o'er thee,
And can't get looſe.

LUCIA.

If the firm Portius ſhake
To hear of parting, think what Lucia ſuffers!

PORTIUS.

'Tis true; unruffled and ſerene I've met
The common accidents of life, but here
Such an unlook'd for ſtorm of ills falls on me,
It beats down all my ſtrength. I cannot bear it.
We muſt not part.

LUCIA.

What doſt thou ſay? not part?
Haſt thou forgot the Vow that I have made?
Are there not heavens, and gods, and thunder, o'er us!
—But ſee! thy brother Marcus bends this way!
I ſicken at the ſight. Once more, farewel,
Farewel, and know thou wrong'ſt me, if thou think'ſt
Ever was love, or ever grief, like mine.

SCENE

SCENE III.

MARCUS, PORTIUS.

MARCUS.

Portius, what hopes? how ſtands ſhe? am I doom'd
To life or death?

PORTIUS.

What would'ſt thou have me ſay?

MARCUS.

What means this penſive poſture? thou appear'ſt
Like one amaz'd and terrified.

PORTIUS.

I've reaſon.

MARCUS.

Thy caſt-down looks, and thy diſorder'd thoughts
Tell me my fate. I ask not the ſucceſs
My cauſe has found.

PORTIUS.

I'm griev'd I undertook it.

MARCUS.

What? does the barbarous maid inſult my heart,
My aking heart! and triumph in my pains?
That I could caſt her from my thoughts for ever?

PORTIUS.

Away! you're too ſuſpicious in your griefs;
Lucia, though ſworn never to think of love,

Compaſſionates your pains, and pities you.

MARCUS.

Compaſſionates my pains, and pities me!
What is compaſſion when 'tis void of love!
Fool that I was to chuſe ſo cold a friend
To urge my cauſe! Compaſſionates my pains!
Pr'ythee what art, what rhetorick did'ſt thou uſe
To gain this mighty boon? She pities me!
To one that asks the warm return of love,
Compaſſion's cruelty, 'tis ſcorn, 'tis death——

PORTIUS.

Marcus, no more! have I deſerv'd this treatment?

MARCUS.

What have I ſaid! O Portius, O forgive me!
A ſoul exaſperated in ills falls out
With every thing, its friend, its ſelf——but hah!
What means that ſhout, big with the ſounds of war?
What new alarm?

PORTIUS.

A ſecond, louder yet,
Swells in the winds, and comes more full upon us.

MARCUS.

Oh, for ſome glorious cauſe to fall in battel!
Lucia, thou haſt undone me! thy diſdain
Has broke my heart: 'tis death muſt give me eaſe.

PORTIUS.

Quick, let us hence; who knows if Cato's life
Stand ſure? O Marcus, I am warm'd, my heart
Leaps at the trumpet's voice, and burns for glory.

SCENE

SCENE IV.

SEMPRONIUS with the leaders of the mutiny.

SEMPRONIUS.

At length the winds are rais'd, the ſtorm blows high;
Be it your care, my friends, to keep it up
In its full fury, and direct it right,
'Till it has ſpent it ſelf on Cato's head.
Mean while I'll herd among his friends, and ſeem
One of the number, that what-e'er arrive,
My friends and fellow-ſoldiers may be ſafe.

1 LEADER.

We all are ſafe, Sempronius is our friend.
Sempronius is as brave a man as Cato.
But heark! he enters. Bear up boldly to him;
Be ſure you beat him down, and bind him faſt.
This day will end our toils, and give us reſt!
Fear nothing, for Sempronius is our friend.

SCENE V.

CATO, SEMPRONIUS, LUCIUS, PORTIUS, MARCUS, &c.

CATO.

Where are theſe bold intrepid ſons of war,
That greatly turn their backs upon the foe,
And to their General ſend a brave defiance?

SEMPRONIUS.

Curſe on their daſtard ſouls, they ſtand aſtoniſh'd! [Aſide.

CATO.

Perfidious men! and will you thus diſhonour
Your paſt exploits, and ſully all your wars?
Do you confeſs 'twas not a zeal for Rome,
Nor love of liberty, nor thirſt of honour,
Drew you thus far; but hopes to ſhare the ſpoil
Of conquer'd towns, and plunder'd provinces?
Fire'd with with ſuch motives you do well to join
With Cato's foes, and follow Cæſar's banners.
Why did I 'ſcape th' invenom'd Aſpic's rage,
And all the fiery monſters of the deſart,
To ſee this day? why could not Cato fall
Without your guilt? behold, ungrateful men,
Behold my boſom naked to your ſwords,
And let the man that's injure'd ſtrike the blow.
Which of you all ſuſpects that he is wrong'd,
Or thinks he ſuffers greater ills than Cato?

Am

Am I diſtinguiſh'd from you but by toils,
Superior toils, and heavier weight of cares!
Painful pre-eminence!

SEMPRONIUS.

By heavens they droop!
Confuſion to the villains! all is loſt. [Aſide.

CATO.

Have you forgotten Libya's burning waſte,
Its barren rocks, parch'd earth, and hills of ſand,
Its tainted air, and all its broods of poiſon?
Who was the firſt t'explore th' untrodden path,
When life was hazarded in every ſtep?
Or, fainting in the long laborious march,
When on the banks of an unlook'd for ſtream
You ſunk the river with repeated draughts,
Who was the laſt in all your hoſt that thirſted?

SEMPRONIUS.

If ſome penurious ſource by chance appear'd,
Scanty of waters, when you ſcoop'd it dry,
And offer'd the full helmet up to Cato,
Did he not daſh th' untaſted moiſture from him?
Did he not lead you through the mid-day Sun,
And clouds of duſt? did not his temples glow
In the ſame ſultry winds and ſcorching heats?

CATO.

Hence, worthleſs men! hence! and complain to Cæſar
You could not undergo the toils of war,
Nor bear the hardſhips that your leader bore.

LUCIUS.

LUCIUS.

See, Cato, ſee th'unhappy men! they weep!
Fear, and remorſe, and ſorrow for their crime,
Appear in every look, and plead for mercy.

CATO.

Learn to be honeſt men, give up your leaders,
And pardon ſhall deſcend on all the reſt.

SEMPRONIUS.

Cato, commit theſe wretches to my care.
Firſt let 'em each be broken on the rack,
Then, with what life remains, impale'd, and left
To writhe at leiſure round the bloody ſtake.
There let 'em hang, and taint the ſouthern wind.
The partners of their crime will learn obedience,
When they look up and ſee their fellow-traitors
Stuck on a fork, and blackening in the Sun.

LUCIUS.

Sempronius, why, why wilt thou urge the fate
Of wretched men?

SEMPRONIUS.

How! would'ſt thou clear rebellion!
Lucius (good man) pities the poor offenders,
That would imbrue their hands in Cato's blood.

CATO.

Forbear, Sempronius!—— ſee they ſuffer death,
But in their deaths remember they are Men.
Strain not the laws to make their tortures grievous.
Lucius, the baſe degenerate age requires

Severity,

Severity, and juſtice in its rigour;
This awes an impious, bold, offending world,
Commands obedience, and gives force to laws.
When by juſt vengeance guilty mortals periſh,
The Gods behold their puniſhment with pleaſure,
And lay th'uplifted thunder-bolt aſide.

SEMPRONIUS.

Cato, I execute thy will with pleaſure.

CATO.

Mean-while we'll ſacrifice to Liberty.
Remember, O my friends, the laws, the rights,
The generous plan of power deliver'd down,
From age to age, by your renown'd Fore-fathers,
(So dearly bought, the price of ſo much blood.)
O let it never periſh in your hands!
But piouſly tranſmit it to your children.
Do thou, great Liberty, inſpire our ſouls,
And make our lives in thy poſſeſſion happy,
Or our deaths glorious in thy juſt defence.

SCENE VI.

SEMPRONIUS and the leaders of the mutiny.

1 LEADER.

Sempronius, you have acted like your ſelf,
One would have thought you had been half in earneſt.

SEM-

SEMPRONIUS.

Villain, ſtand off! baſe groveling worthleſs wretches,
Mongrils in faction, poor faint-hearted traitors!

2 LEADER.

Nay, now you carry it too far, Sempronius:
Throw off the mask, there are none here but friends.

SEMPRONIUS.

Know, villains, when ſuch paltry ſlaves preſume
To mix in treaſon, if the plot ſucceeds,
They're thrown neglected by: but if it fails,
They're ſure to die like dogs, as you ſhall do.
Here, take theſe factious monſters, drag 'em forth
To ſudden death.

Enter Guards.

1 LEADER.

Nay, ſince it comes to this——

SEMPRONIUS.

Diſpatch 'em quick, but firſt pluck out their tongues,
Leſt with their dying breath they ſow ſedition.

SCENE VII.

SYPHAX and SEMPRONIUS.

SYPHAX.

Our firſt deſign, my friend, has prov'd abortive;
Still there remains an after-game to play:

My

My troops are mounted; their Numidian ſteeds
Snuff up the wind, and long to ſcoure the deſart:
Let but Sempronius head us in our flight,
We'll force the gate where Marcus keeps his guard,
And hew down all that would oppoſe our paſſage.
A day will bring us into Cæſar's camp.

SEMPRONIUS.

Confuſion! I have fail'd of half my purpoſe:
Marcia, the charming Marcia's left behind!

SYPHAX.

How? will Sempronius turn a woman's ſlave!

SEMPRONIUS.

Think not thy friend can ever feel the ſoft
Unmanly warmth, and tenderneſs of love.
Syphax, I long to claſp that haughty maid,
And bend her ſtubborn virtue to my paſſion:
When I have gone thus far, I'd caſt her off.

SYPHAX.

Well ſaid! that's ſpoken like thy ſelf, Sempronius.
What hinders then, but that thou find her out,
And hurry her away by manly force?

SEMPRONIUS.

But how to gain admiſſion? for acceſs
Is given to none but Juba, and her brothers.

SYPHAX.

Thou ſhalt have Juba's dreſs, and Juba's guards:
The doors will open, when Numidia's Prince
Seems to appear before the ſlaves that watch them.

SEMPRO-

SEMPRONIUS.

Heavens what a thought is there! Marcia's my own!
How will my boſom ſwell with anxious joy,
When I behold her ſtruggling in my arms,
With glowing beauty, and diſorder'd charms,
While fear and anger with alternate grace,
Pant in her breaſt, and vary in her face!
So Pluto, ſeiz'd of Proſerpine, convey'd
To hell's tremendous gloom th' affrighted maid,
There grimly ſmil'd, pleas'd with the beauteous prize,
Nor envy'd Jove his ſunſhine and his skies.

ACT IV. SCENE I.

LUCIA and MARCIA.

LUCIA.

NOW tell me, Marcia, tell me from thy ſoul,
If thou believ'ſt 'tis poſſible for woman
To ſuffer greater ills than Lucia ſuffers?

MARCIA.

O Lucia! Lucia! might my big-ſwoln heart
Vent all its griefs, and give a looſe to ſorrow:
Marcia could anſwer thee in ſighs, keep pace
With all thy woes, and count out tear for tear.

LUCIA.

I know thou'rt doom'd alike, to be belov'd
By Juba, and thy father's friend Sempronius;
But which of theſe has power to charm like Portius!

MARCIA.

Still muſt I beg thee not to name Sempronius?
Lucia, I like not that loud boiſterous man;
Juba to all the bravery of a Heroe
Adds ſofteſt love, and more than female ſweetneſs:

Juba

Juba might make the proudeſt of our ſex,
Any of woman-kind but Marcia, happy,

LUCIA.

And why not Marcia? come, you ſtrive in vain
To hide your thoughts from one, who knows too well
The inward glowings of a heart in love.

MARCIA.

While Cato lives, his daughter has no right
To love or hate, but as his choice directs.

LUCIA.

But ſhould this father give you to Sempronius?

MARCIA.

I dare not think he will: but if he ſhould——
Why wilt thou add to all the griefs I ſuffer
Imaginary ills, and fancy'd tortures?
I hear the ſound of feet! they march this way!
Let us retire, and try if we can drown
Each ſofter thought in ſenſe of preſent danger.
When love once pleads admiſſion to our hearts
(In ſpight of all the virtue we can boaſt)
The woman that deliberates is loſt.

SCENE

SCENE II.

SEMPRONIUS, dreſs'd like JUBA, with Numidian guards.

SEMPRONIUS.

The Deer is lodg'd. I've track'd her to her covert.
Be ſure you mind the Word, and when I give it,
Ruſh in at once, and ſeize upon your prey.
Let not her cries or tears have force to move you.
—— How will the young Numidian rave, to ſee
His miſtreſs loſt? if aught could glad my ſoul,
Beyond th' enjoyment of ſo bright a prize,
'Twould be to torture that young gay Barbarian.
—— But heark, what noiſe! death to my hopes! 'tis he
'Tis Juba's ſelf! there is but one way left ——
He muſt be murder'd, and a paſſage cut
Through thoſe his guards.—Hah, daſtards, do you tremble!
Or act like men, or by yon azure Heaven ——

Enter JUBA.

JUBA.

What do I ſee? who's this that dares uſurp
The guards and habit of Numidia's Prince?

SEMPRONIUS.

One that was born to ſcourge thy arrogance,
Preſumptuous youth!

JUBA.

JUBA.

What can this mean? Sempronius!

SEMPRONIUS.

My ſword ſhall anſwer thee. Have at thy heart.

JUBA.

Nay, then beware thy own, proud, barbarous man!

[Semp. falls. His guards ſurrender.

SEMPRONIUS.

Curſe on my ſtars! am I then doom'd to fall
By a boy's hand? diſfigur'd in a vile
Numidian dreſs, and for a worthleſs woman?
Gods, I'm diſtracted! this my cloſe of life!
O for a peal of thunder that would make
Earth, ſea, and air, and Heaven, and Cato tremble! [Dies.

JUBA.

With what a ſpring his furious ſoul broke looſe,
And left the limbs ſtill quivering on the ground!
Hence let us carry off thoſe ſlaves to Cato,
That we may there at length unravel all
This dark deſign, this myſtery of fate.

SCENE

SCENE III.

LUCIA and MARCIA.

LUCIA.

Sure 'twas the claſh of ſwords; my troubled heart
Is ſo caſt down, and ſunk amidſt its ſorrows,
It throbs with fear, and akes at every ſound.
O Marcia, ſhould thy brothers for my ſake!—
I die away with horror at the thought.

MARCIA.

See, Lucia, ſee! here's blood! here's blood and murder!
Hah! a Numidian! Heavens preſerve the Prince:
The face lies muffled up within the garment.
But hah! death to my ſight! a diadem,
And purple robes! O Gods! 'tis he, 'tis he!
Juba, the loveliеſt youth that ever warm'd
A Virgin's heart, Juba lies dead before us!

LUCIA.

Now, Marcia, now call up to thy aſſiſtance
Thy wonted ſtrength, and conſtancy of mind;
Thou can'ſt not put it to a greater tryal.

MARCIA.

Lucia, look there, and wonder at my Patience.
Have I not cauſe to rave, and beat my breaſt,
To rend my heart with grief, and run diſtracted!

Bayerische Staatsbibliothek München

LUCIA.

What can I think or ſay to give thee comfort?

MARCIA.

Talk not of comfort, 'tis for lighter ills:
Behold a ſight, that ſtrikes all comfort dead.

Enter JUBA liſtning.

I will indulge my ſorrows, and give way
To all the pangs and fury of deſpair;
That man, that beſt of men, deſerv'd it from me.

JUBA.

What do I hear? and was the falſe Sempronius
That beſt of men? O had I fallen like him,
And could have thus been mourn'd, I had been happy!

LUCIA.

Here will I ſtand, companion in thy woes,
And help thee with my tears; when I behold
A loſs like thine, I half forget my own.

MARCIA.

'Tis not in fate to eaſe my tortur'd breaſt.
This empty world, to me a joyleſs deſart,
Has nothing left to make poor Marcia happy.

JUBA.

I'm on the rack! was he ſo near her heart?

MARCIA.

Oh he was all made up of love and charms,
Whatever maid could wiſh, or man admire:
Delight of every eye! when he appear'd,

A ſecret pleaſure gladned all that ſaw him;
But when he talk'd, the proudeſt Roman bluſh'd
To hear his virtues, and old age grew wiſe.

JUBA.

I ſhall run mad———

MARCIA.

O Juba! Juba! Juba!

JUBA.

What means that voice? did ſhe not call on Juba?

MARCIA.

Why do I think on what he was! he's dead!
He's dead, and never knew how much I lov'd him.
Lucia, who knows but his poor bleeding heart,
Amidſt its agonies, remember'd Marcia,
And the laſt words he utter'd call'd me Cruel!
Alas, he knew not, hapleſs youth, he knew not
Marcia's whole ſoul was full of love and Juba!

JUBA.

Where am I! do I live! or am indeed
What Marcia thinks! all is Eliſium round me!

MARCIA.

Ye dear remains of the moſt lov'd of men!
Nor modeſty nor virtue here forbid
A laſt embrace, while thus———

JUBA.

See, Marcia, ſee. [Throwing himſelf before her.
The happy Juba lives! he lives to catch

That dear embrace, and to return it too
With mutual warmth and eagerneſs of love.

MARCIA.

With pleaſure and amaze, I ſtand tranſported!
Sure 'tis a dream! dead and alive at once!
If thou art Juba, who lies there?

JUBA.

A wretch,
Diſguis'd like Juba on a curs'd deſign.
The tale is long, nor have I heard it out.
Thy father knows it all. I could not bear
To leave thee in the neighbourhood of death,
But flew, in all the haſte of love, to find thee:
I found thee weeping, and confeſs this once,
Am rapt with joy to ſee my Marcia's tears.

MARCIA.

I've been ſurprize'd in an unguarded hour,
But muſt not now go back: the love, that lay
Half ſmother'd in my breaſt, has broke through all
Its weak reſtraints, and burns in its full luſtre.
I cannot, if I would, conceal it from thee.

JUBA.

I'm loſt in ecſtaſie! and doſt thou love,
Thou charming maid?

MARCIA.

And doſt thou live to ask it?

JUBA.

This, this is life indeed! life worth preſerving,
Such life as Juba never felt 'till now!

MARCIA.

Believe me, Prince, before I thought thee dead,
I did not know my ſelf how much I lov'd thee.

JUBA.

O fortunate miſtake!

MARCIA.

O happy Marcia!

JUBA.

My joy! my beſt-beloved! my only wiſh!
How ſhall I ſpeak the tranſport of my ſoul!

MARCIA.

Lucia, thy arm! Oh let me reſt upon it!——
The vital blood, that had forſook my heart,
Returns again in ſuch tumultuous tides,
It quite o'ercomes me. Lead to my apartment.——
O Prince! I bluſh to think what I have ſaid,
But fate has wreſted the confeſſion from me;
Go on, and proſper in the paths of honour,
Thy virtue will excuſe my paſſion for thee,
And make the gods propitious to our love.

JUBA.

I am ſo bleſt, I fear 'tis all a dream.
Fortune, thou now haſt made amends for all
Thy paſt unkindneſs. I abſolve my ſtars.
What though Numidia add her conquer'd towns

And provinces, to ſwell the victor's triumph!
Juba will never at his fate repine;
Let Cæſar have the world, if Marcia's mine.

SCENE IV.

A March at a Diſtance.

CATO and LUCIUS.

LUCIUS.

I ſtand aſtoniſht! what, the bold Sempronius!
That ſtill broke foremoſt through the crowd of Patriots,
As with a hurricane of zeal tranſported,
And virtuous ev'n to madneſs——

CATO.

Truſt me, Lucius,
Our civil diſcords have produce'd ſuch crimes,
Such monſtrous crimes, I am ſurprize'd at nothing.
——O Lucius, I am ſick of this bad world!
The day-light and the Sun grow painful to me.

Enter PORTIUS.

But ſee where Portius comes! what means this haſte?
Why are thy looks thus changed?

PORTIUS.

My heart is griev'd.
I bring ſuch news as will afflict my father.

CATO.

CATO.

Has Cæſar ſhed more Roman blood?

PORTIUS.

Not ſo.
The traytor Syphax, as within the ſquare
He exerciſe'd his troops, the ſignal given,
Flew off at once with his Numidian horſe
To the ſouth gate, where Marcus holds the watch;
I ſaw, and call'd to ſtop him, but in vain,
He toſt his arm aloft, and proudly told me,
He would not ſtay and periſh like Sempronius.

CATO.

Perfidious men! but haſte, my ſon, and ſee
Thy brother Marcus acts a Roman's part. [Exit Portius.
—— Lucius, the torrent bears too hard upon me:
Juſtice gives way to force: the conquer'd world
Is Cæſar's: Cato has no buſineſs in it.

LUCIUS.

While pride, oppreſſion, and injuſtice reign,
The world will ſtill demand her Cato's preſence.
In pity to mankind, ſubmit to Cæſar,
And reconcile thy mighty ſoul to life.

CATO.

Would Lucius have me live to ſwell the number
Of Cæſar's ſlaves, or by a baſe ſubmiſſion
Give up the cauſe of Rome, and own a tyrant?

LUCIUS.

The victor never will impoſe on Cato

Ungen'rous terms. His enemies confeſs
The virtues of humanity are Cæſar's.

CATO.

Curſe on his virtues! they've undone his Country.
Such popular humanity is treaſon———
But ſee young Juba! the good youth appears
Full of the guilt of his perfidious ſubjects.

LUCIUS.

Alas, poor Prince! his fate deſerves compaſſion.

Enter JUBA.

JUBA.

I bluſh, and am confounded to appear
Before thy preſence, Cato.

CATO.

What's thy crime?

JUBA.

I'm a Numidian.

CATO.

And a brave one too.
Thou haſt a Roman ſoul.

JUBA.

Haſt thou not heard
Of my falſe countrymen?

CATO.

Alas, young Prince,
Falſhood and fraud ſhoot up in every ſoil,
The product of all climes——Rome has its Cæſars.

JUBA.

JUBA.

'Tis gen'rous thus to comfort the diſtreſt.

CATO.

'Tis juſt to give applauſe where 'tis deſerv'd;
Thy virtue, Prince, has ſtood the teſt of fortune,
Like pureſt gold, that, tortur'd in the furnace,
Comes out more bright, and brings forth all its weight.

JUBA.

What ſhall I anſwer thee? my raviſh'd heart
O'erflows with ſecret joy: I'd rather gain
Thy praiſe, O Cato, than Numidia's empire.

Re-enter PORTIUS.

PORTIUS.

Misfortune on misfortune! grief on grief!
My brother Marcus——

CATO.

Hah! what has he done?
Has he forſook his poſt? has he given way?
Did he look tamely on, and let 'em paſs?

PORTIUS.

Scarce had I left my father, but I met him
Borne on the ſhields of his ſurviving ſoldiers,
Breathleſs and pale, and cover'd o'er with wounds.
Long, at the head of his few faithful friends,
He ſtood the ſhock of a whole hoſt of foes;
'Till obſtinately brave, and bent on death,
Oppreſt with multitudes, he greatly fell.

CATO.

I'm satisfy'd.

PORTIUS.

Nor did he fall before
His sword had pierc'd through the false heart of Syphax.
Yonder he lies. I saw the hoary traytor
Grin in the pangs of death, and bite the ground.

CATO.

Thanks to the Gods! my boy has done his duty.
—— Portius, when I am dead, before thou place
His urn near mine.

PORTIUS.

Long may they keep asunder!

LUCIUS.

O Cato, arm thy soul with all its patience;
See where the corps of thy dead son approaches!
The citizens and senators, alarm'd,
Have gather'd round it, and attend it weeping.

CATO meeting the Corps.

Welcome my son! here lay him down, my friends,
Full in my sight, that I may view at leisure
The bloody corse, and count those glorious wounds.
—— How beautiful is death, when earn'd by virtue!
Who would not be that youth? what pity is it
That we can die but once to serve our country!
—— Why sits this sadness on your brows, my friends?
I should have blush'd if Cato's house had stood

Secure,

Secure, and flouriſh'd in a civil war.
——Portius, behold thy brother, and remember
Thy life is not thy own, when Rome demands it.

JUBA.

Was ever man like this! [Aſide.

CATO.

Alas my friends!
Why mourn you thus? let not a private loſs
Affict your hearts. 'Tis Rome requires our tears.
The miſtreſs of the world, the ſeat of empire,
The nurſe of heroes, the delight of gods,
That humbled the proud Tyrants of the earth,
And ſet the nations free, Rome is no more.
O liberty! O virtue! O my country!

JUBA.

Behold that upright man! Rome fills his eyes
With tears, that flow'd not o'er his own dead ſon. [Aſide.

CATO.

Whate'er the Roman virtue has ſubdu'd,
The Sun's whole courſe, the day and year, are Cæſar's.
For him the ſelf-devoted Decii dy'd,
The Fabii fell, and the great Scipio's conquer'd:
Even Pompey fought for Cæſar. Oh my friends!
How is the toil of fate, the work of ages,
The Roman empire fallen! O curſt ambition!
Fallen into Cæſar's hands! our great Fore-fathers
Had left him nought to conquer but his country.

JUBA.

JUBA.

While Cato lives, Cæſar will bluſh to ſee
Mankind enſlave'd, and be aſhame'd of empire.

CATO.

Cæſar aſhame'd! has not he ſeen Pharſalia?

LUCIUS.

Cato, 'tis time thou ſave thy ſelf and us.

CATO.

Loſe not a thought on me, I'm out of danger.
Heaven will not leave me in the victor's hand.
Cæſar ſhall never ſay I conquer'd Cato.
But oh! my friends, your ſafety fills my heart
With anxious thoughts: a thouſand ſecret terrors
Riſe in my ſoul: how ſhall I ſave my friends!
'Tis now, O Cæſar, I begin to fear thee.

LUCIUS.

Cæſar has mercy, if we ask it of him.

CATO.

Then ask it, I conjure you! let him know
Whate'er was done againſt him, Cato did it.
Add, if you pleaſe, that I requeſt it of him,
The virtue of my friends may paſs unpuniſh'd.
Juba, my heart is troubled for thy ſake.
Should I adviſe thee to regain Numidia,
Or ſeek the conqueror? ———

JUBA.

If I forſake thee
Whilſt I have life, may heaven abandon Juba!

CATO.

CATO.

Thy virtues, Prince, if I foreſee aright,
Will one day make thee great; At Rome, hereafter,
'Twill be no crime to have been Cato's friend.
Portius, draw near! My ſon, thou oft haſt ſeen
Thy Sire engage'd in a corrupted ſtate,
Wreſtling with vice and faction: now thou ſeeſt me
Spent, overpower'd, deſpairing of ſucceſs;
Let me adviſe thee to retreat betimes
To thy paternal ſeat, the Sabine field,
Where the great Cenſor toil'd with his own hands,
And all our frugal Anceſtors were bleſt
In humble virtues, and a rural life.
There live retire'd, pray for the peace of Rome;
Content thy ſelf to be obſcurely good.
When vice prevails, and impious men bear ſway,
The poſt of honour is a private ſtation.

PORTIUS.

I hope, my father does not recommend
A life to Portius, that he ſcorns himſelf.

CATO.

Farewel, my friends! if there be any of you
Who dare not truſt the victor's clemency,
Know, there are ſhips prepare'd by my command,
(Their ſails already opening to the winds)
That ſhall convey you to the wiſht-for port.
Is there aught elſe, my friends, I can do for you?
The conqueror draws near. Once more farewel!

If

If e'er we meet hereafter, we ſhall meet
In happier climes, and on a ſafer ſhore,
Where Cæſar never ſhall approach us more.
[Pointing to his dead Son.
There the brave youth, with love of virtue fired,
Who greatly in his country's cauſe expired,
Shall know he conquer'd. The firm Patriot there
(Who made the welfare of mankind his care)
Tho' ſtill, by faction, vice, and fortune, croſt,
Shall find the gen'rous labour was not loſt.

ACT

ACT V. SCENE I.

CATO ſolus, ſitting in a thoughtful poſture: In his hand Plato's book on the Immortality of the Soul. A drawn ſword on the Table by him.

IT muſt be ſo — Plato, thou reaſon'ſt well! —
Elſe whence this pleaſing hope, this fond deſire,
This longing after immortality?
Or whence this ſecret dread, and inward horror,
Of falling into nought? why ſhrinks the ſoul
Back on her ſelf, and ſtartles at deſtruction?
'Tis the divinity that ſtirs within us;
'Tis heaven it ſelf, that points out an Hereafter,
And intimates eternity to man.
Eternity! thou pleaſing, dreadful, thought!
Through what variety of untry'd being,
Through what new ſcenes and changes muſt we paſs?
The wide, th' unbounded proſpect, lies before me;
But ſhadows, clouds, and darkneſs, reſt upon it.
Here will I hold. If there's a pow'r above us,
(And that there is all nature cries aloud
Through all her works) he muſt delight in virtue;
And that which he delights in, muſt be happy.

But

But when! or where!—This world was made for Cæsar.
I'm weary of conjectures—This must end 'em.

[Laying his hand on his sword.

Thus am I doubly arm'd: my death and life,
My bane and antidote are both before me:
This in a moment brings me to an end;
But this informs me I shall never die.
The soul, secure'd in her existence, smiles
At the drawn dagger, and defies its point.
The stars shall fade away, the sun himself
Grow dim with age, and nature sink in years;
But thou shalt flourish in immortal youth,
Unhurt amidst the war of elements,
The wrecks of matter, and the crush of worlds.
What means this heaviness that hangs upon me?
This lethargy that creeps through all my senses?
Nature oppress'd, and harrass'd out with care,
Sinks down to rest. This once I'll favour her,
That my awaken'd soul may take her flight,
Renew'd in all her strength, and fresh with life,
An offering fit for heaven. Let guilt or fear
Disturb man's rest: Cato knows neither of 'em,
Indifferent in his choice to sleep or die.

SCENE

SCENE II.

CATO, PORTIUS.

CATO.

But hah! how's this, my ſon? why this intruſion?
Were not my orders that I would be private?
Why am I diſobey'd?

PORTIUS.

Alas, my father!
What means this ſword? this inſtrument of death?
Let me convey it hence!

CATO.

Raſh youth, forbear!

PORTIUS.

O let the prayers, th' entreaties of your friends,
Their tears, their common danger, wreſt it from you.

CATO.

Would'ſt thou betray me? would'ſt thou give me up
A ſlave, a captive, into Cæſar's hands?
Retire, and learn obedience to a father,
Or know, young man!———

PORTIUS.

Look not thus ſternly on me;
You know I'd rather die than diſobey you.

CATO.

'Tis well! again I'm maſter of my ſelf.

Now,

Now, Cæſar, let thy troops beſet our gates,
And barr each avenue, thy gathering fleets
O'erſpread the ſea, and ſtop up every port;
Cato ſhall open to himſelf a paſſage,
And mock thy hopes——

PORTIUS.

O Sir, forgive your ſon,
Whoſe grief hangs heavy on him! O my father!
How am I ſure it is not the laſt time
I e'er ſhall call you ſo! be not diſpleaſed,
O be not angry with me whilſt I weep,
And, in the anguiſh of my heart, beſeech you
To quit the dreadful purpoſe of your ſoul!

CATO.

Thou haſt been ever good and dutiful. [Embracing him.
Weep not, my ſon. All will be well again.
The righteous gods, whom I have ſought to pleaſe,
Will ſuccour Cato, and preſerve his children.

PORTIUS.

Your words give comfort to my drooping heart.

CATO.

Portius, thou may'ſt rely upon my conduct.
Thy father will not act what misbecomes him.
But go, my ſon, and ſee if aught be wanting
Among thy father's friends; ſee them embarked;
And tell me if the winds and ſeas befriend them.
My ſoul is quite weigh'd down with care, and asks
The ſoft refreſhment of a moment's ſleep.

PORTIUS.

My thoughts are more at eaſe, my heart revives.

SCENE III.

PORTIUS and MARCIA.

PORTIUS.

O Marcia, O my ſiſter, ſtill there's hope!
Our father will not caſt away a life
So needful to us all, and to his country.
He is retire'd to reſt, and ſeems to cheriſh
Thoughts full of peace. He has diſpatcht me hence
With orders, that beſpeak a mind compoſed,
And ſtudious for the ſafety of his friends.
Marcia, take care that none diſturb his ſlumbers.

MARCIA.

O ye immortal powers, that guard the juſt,
Watch round his couch, and ſoften his repoſe,
Baniſh his ſorrows, and becalm his ſoul
With eaſy dreams; remember all his virtues!
And ſhow mankind that goodneſs is your care.

SCENE

SCENE IV.

LUCIA and MARCIA.

LUCIA.

Where is your father, Marcia, where is Cato?

MARCIA.

Lucia, ſpeak low, he is retire'd to reſt.
Lucia, I feel a gently-dawning hope
Riſe in my ſoul. We ſhall be happy ſtill.

LUCIA.

Alas, I tremble when I think on Cato,
In every view, in every thought I tremble!
Cato is ſtern, and awful as a God;
He knows not how to wink at humane frailty,
Or pardon weakneſs that he never felt.

MARCIA.

Though ſtern and awful to the foes of Rome,
He is all goodneſs, Lucia, always mild,
Compaſſionate, and gentle to his friends.
Fill'd with domeſtick tenderneſs, the beſt,
The kindeſt father! I have ever found him
Eaſy, and good, and bounteous to my wiſhes.

LUCIA.

'Tis his conſent alone can make us bleſt.
Marcia, we both are equally involv'd
In the ſame intricate, perplext, diſtreſs.

The cruel hand of fate, that has deſtroy'd
Thy brother Marcus, whom we both lament ——

MARCIA.

And ever ſhall lament, unhappy youth!

LUCIA.

Has ſet my ſoul at large, and now I ſtand
Looſe of my Vow. But who knows Cato's thoughts?
Who knows how yet he may diſpoſe of Portius,
Or how he has determin'd of thy ſelf?

MARCIA.

Let him but live! commit the reſt to heaven.

Enter LUCIUS.

LUCIUS.

Sweet are the ſlumbers of the virtuous man!
O Marcia, I have ſeen thy godlike father:
Some power inviſible ſupports his ſoul,
And bears it up in all its wonted greatneſs.
A kind refreſhing ſleep is fallen upon him:
I ſaw him ſtretcht at eaſe, his fancy loſt
In pleaſing dreams; as I drew near his couch,
He ſmil'd, and cry'd, Cæſar thou canſt not hurt me.

MARCIA.

His mind ſtill labours with ſome dreadful thought.

LUCIUS.

Lucia, why all this grief, theſe floods of ſorrow?
Dry up thy tears, my child, we are all ſafe
While Cato lives —— his preſence will protect us.

Enter

Enter JUBA.

JUBA.

Lucius, the horſemen are return'd from viewing
The number, ſtrength, and poſture of our foes,
Who now encamp within a ſhort hour's march.
On the high point of yon bright weſtern tower
We kenn them from afar, the ſetting Sun
Plays on their ſhining arms and burniſh'd helmets,
And covers all the field with gleams of fire.

LUCIUS.

Marcia, 'tis time we ſhould awake thy father.
Cæſar is ſtill diſpoſe'd to give us terms,
And waits at diſtance 'till he hears from Cato.

Enter PORTIUS.

Portius, thy looks ſpeak ſomewhat of importance.
What tidings doſt thou bring? methinks I ſee
Unuſual gladneſs ſparkling in thy eyes.

PORTIUS.

As I was haſting to the port, where now
My father's friends, impatient for a paſſage,
Accuſe the ling'ring winds, a ſail arrived
From Pompey's ſon, who through the realms of Spain
Calls out for vengeance on his father's death,
And rouſes the whole nation up to arms.
Were Cato at their head, once more might Rome
Aſſert her rights, and claim her liberty.

But

But hearkʼ! what means that groan! O give me way,
And let me fly into my father's preſence.

LUCIUS.

Cato, amidſt his ſlumbers, thinks on Rome,
And in the wild diſorder of his ſoul
Mourns o'er his country.—hah! a ſecond groan!—
Heaven guard us all—

MARCIA.

Alas, 'tis not the voice
Of one who ſleeps! 'tis agonizing pain,
'Tis death is in that ſound——

Enter PORTIUS.

PORTIUS.

O ſight of woe!
O Marcia, what we fear'd is come to paſs!
Cato is fallen upon his ſword——

LUCIUS.

O Portius,
Hide all the horrours of thy mournful tale,
And let us gueſs the reſt.

PORTIUS.

I've rais'd him up,
And place'd him in his chair, where pale, and faint,
He gaſps for breath, and, as his life flows from him,
Demands to ſee his friends. His ſervants weeping,
Obſequious to his orders, bear him hither.

[The back Scene opens, and diſcovers Cato.

MAR-

MARCIA.

O heaven assist me in this dreadful hour
To pay the last sad duties to my father.

JUBA.

These are thy triumphs, thy exploits, O Cæsar!

LUCIUS.

Now is Rome fallen indeed!

[Cato brought forward in his Chair.

CATO.

Here set me down ——
Portius come near me —— are my friends embark'd?
Can any thing be thought of for their service?
Whilst I yet live, let me not live in vain.
— O Lucius, art thou here? — thou art too good! ——
Let this our friendship live between our children;
Make Portius happy in thy daughter Lucia.
Alas poor man, he weeps! — Marcia, my daughter —
— O bend me forward! — Juba loves thee, Marcia.
A Senator of Rome, while Rome survived,
Would not have match'd his Daughter with a King.
But Cæsar's arms have thrown down all distinction;
Whoe'er is Brave and Virtuous, is a Roman. ——
— I'm sick to death —— Oh when shall I get loose
From this vain world, th' abode of guilt and sorrow!
—— And yet methinks a beam of light breaks in
On my departing soul. Alas, I fear
I've been too hasty. O ye powers, that search
The heart of man, and weigh his inmost thoughts,

If

If I have done amiſs, impute it not!——
The beſt may err, but you are good, and—oh! [Dies.

LUCIUS.

There fled the greateſt ſoul that ever warm'd
A Roman breaſt; O Cato! O my friend!
Thy will ſhall be religiouſly obſerv'd.
But let us bear this awful corps to Cæſar,
And lay it in his ſight, that it may ſtand
A fence betwixt us and the victor's wrath;
Cato, tho' dead, ſhall ſtill protect his friends.

From hence, let fierce contending nations know
What dire effects from civil diſcord flow.
'Tis this that ſhakes our country with alarms,
And gives up Rome a prey to Roman arms,
Produces fraud, and cruelty, and ſtrife,
And robs the Guilty world of Cato's life.

EPILOGUE.

By Dr. GARTH.

Spoken by Mrs. PORTER.

WHAT odd fantaſtick things we women do!
Who wou'd not liſten when young lovers woo?
But die a maid, yet have the choice of two!
Ladies are often cruel to their coſt;
To give you pain, themſelves they puniſh moſt.
Vows of virginity ſhould well be weigh'd;
Too oft they're cancell'd, tho' in convents made.
Would you revenge ſuch raſh reſolves——you may:
Be ſpiteful—— and believe the thing we ſay;
We hate you when you're eaſily ſaid nay.
How needleſs, if you knew us, were your fears?
Let Love have eyes, and Beauty will have ears.
Our hearts are form'd as you your ſelves would chuſe,
Too proud to ask, too humble to refuſe:
We give to merit, and to wealth we ſell;
He ſighs with moſt ſucceſs that ſettles well.
The woes of wedlock with the joys we mix;
'Tis beſt repenting in a coach and ſix.

Blame

EPILOGUE.

Blame not our conduct, ſince we but purſue
Thoſe lively leſſons we have learn'd from you:
Your breaſts no more the fire of beauty warms,
But wicked wealth uſurps the power of charms;
What pains to get the gawdy thing you hate!
To ſwell in ſhow, and be a wretch in ſtate!
At plays you ogle, at the ring you bow;
Even churches are no ſanctuaries now:
There, golden idols all your vows receive,
She is no goddeſs that has nought to give.
Oh, may once more the happy age appear,
When words were artleſs, and the thoughts ſincere;
When gold and grandeur were unenvy'd things,
And courts leſs coveted than groves and ſprings.
Love then ſhall only mourn when truth complains,
And conſtancy feel tranſport in its chains.
Sighs with ſucceſs their own ſoft anguiſh tell,
And eyes ſhall utter what the lips conceal:
Virtue again to its bright ſtation climb,
And beauty fear no enemy but time;
The fair ſhall liſten to deſert alone,
And every Lucia find a Cato's ſon.

To Her ROYAL HIGHNESS the PRINCESS of WALES,

With the Tragedy of CATO. Nov. 1714.

THE Muſe that oft, with ſacred raptures fir'd,
Has gen'rous thoughts of Liberty inſpir'd,
And, boldly riſing for Britannia's laws,
Engage'd great Cato in her country's cauſe,
On You ſubmiſſive waits, with hopes aſſur'd,
By whom the mighty bleſſing ſtands ſecur'd,
And all the glories, that our age adorn,
Are promis'd to a people yet unborn.

No longer ſhall the widow'd land bemoan
A broken lineage, and a doubtful throne;
But boaſt her royal progeny's increaſe,
And count the pledges of her future peace.
O born to ſtrengthen and to grace our iſle!
While you, fair PRINCESS, in your Off-ſpring ſmile,
Supplying charms to the ſucceeding age,
Each heavenly Daughter's triumphs we preſage;
Already ſee th' illuſtrious youths complain,
And pity Monarchs doom'd to ſigh in vain.

Thou

Thou too, the darling of our fond deſires,
Whom Albion, opening wide her arms, requires,
With manly valour and attractive air
Shalt quell the fierce, and captivate the fair.
O England's younger hope! in whom conſpire
The mother's ſweetneſs, and the father's fire!
For thee perhaps, even now, of kingly race
Some dawning beauty blooms in every grace,
Some Carolina, to heaven's dictates true,
Who, while the ſcepter'd rivals vainly ſue,
Thy inborn worth with conſcious eyes ſhall ſee,
And ſlight th' Imperial diadem for thee.

Pleas'd with the proſpect of ſucceſſive reigns,
The tuneful tribe no more in daring ſtrains
Shall vindicate, with pious fears oppreſt,
Endanger'd rights, and liberty diſtreſt:
To milder ſounds each Muſe ſhall tune the lyre,
And gratitude, and faith to Kings inſpire,
And filial love; bid impious diſcord ceaſe,
And ſooth the madding factions into peace;
Or riſe ambitious in more lofty lays,
And teach the nation their new Monarch's praiſe,
Deſcribe his awful look, and godlike mind,
And Cæſar's power with Cato's virtue join'd.

Mean-while, bright PRINCESS, who, with graceful eaſe
And native majeſty are form'd to pleaſe,
Behold thoſe Arts with a propitious eye,
That ſupppliant to their great protectreſs fly!

Then ſhall they triumph, and the Britiſh ſtage
Improve her manners, and refine her rage,
More noble characters expoſe to view,
And draw her finiſht heroines from you.
Nor you the kind indulgence will refuſe,
Skill'd in the labours of the deathleſs Muſe:
The deathleſs Muſe with undiminiſht rays
Through diſtant times the lovely dame conveys:
To Gloriana Waller's harp was ſtrung;
The Queen ſtill ſhines, becauſe the Poet ſung.
Even all thoſe graces, in your frame combin'd,
The common fate of mortal charms may find;
(Content our ſhort-live'd praiſes to engage,
The joy and wonder of a ſingle age,)
Unleſs ſome Poet in a laſting ſong
To late poſterity their fame prolong,
Inſtruct our ſons the radiant form to prize,
And ſee your beauty with their fathers' eyes.

TO

TO

Sir GODFREY KNELLER,

ON HIS

PICTURE of the KING.

KNELLER, with ſilence and ſurprize
We ſee Britannia's Monarch riſe,
A godlike form, by thee diſplay'd
In all the force of light and ſhade;
And, aw'd by thy deluſive hand,
As in the preſence-chamber ſtand.

The magick of thy art calls forth
His ſecret ſoul and hidden worth,
His probity and mildneſs ſhows,
His care of friends, and ſcorn of foes:
In every ſtroke, in every line,
Does ſome exalted virtue ſhine,
And Albion's happineſs we trace
Through all the features of his face.

O may I live to hail the day,
When the glad nation ſhall ſurvey
Their Sov'reign, through his wide command,
Paſſing in progreſs o'er the land!
Each heart ſhall bend, and every voice
In loud applauding ſhouts rejoice,
Whilſt all his gracious aſpect praiſe,
And crowds grow loyal as they gaze.
This image on the medal placed,
With its bright round of titles graced,
And ſtampt on Britiſh coins ſhall live,
To richeſt ores the value give,
Or, wrought within the curious mould,
Shape and adorn the running gold.
To bear this form, the genial Sun
Has daily, ſince his courſe begun,
Rejoice'd the metal to refine,
And ripen'd the Peruvian mine.
Thou, Kneller, long with noble pride,
The foremoſt of thy art, haſt vie'd
With nature in a generous ſtrife,
And touch'd the canvas into life.
Thy pencil has, by Monarchs ſought,
From reign to reign in ermine wrought,
And, in their robes of ſtate array'd,
The Kings of half an age diſplay'd.
Here ſwarthy Charles appears, and there
His Brother with dejected air:

Trium-

Triumphant Naſſau here we find,
And with him bright Maria join'd;
There Anna, great as when ſhe ſent
Her armies through the continent,
Ere yet her Hero was diſgrac't:
O may fam'd Brunſwick be the laſt,
(Though heaven ſhould with my wiſh agree,
And long preſerve thy art in thee)
The laſt, the happieſt Britiſh King,
Whom thou ſhalt paint, or I ſhall ſing!
Wiſe Phidias, thus his skill to prove,
Through many a God advance'd to Jove.
And taught the poliſht rocks to ſhine
With airs and lineaments divine;
'Till Greece, amaz'd, and half-afraid,
Th'aſſembled deities ſurvey'd.
Great Pan, who wont to chaſe the fair,
And lov'd the ſpreading oak, was there;
Old Saturn too with up-caſt eyes
Beheld his abdicated skies;
And mighty Mars, for war renown'd,
In adamantine armour frown'd;
By him the childleſs goddeſs roſe,
Minerva, ſtudious to compoſe
Her twiſted threads; the webb ſhe ſtrung,
And o'er a loom of marble hung:
Thetis the troubled ocean's Queen,
Match'd with a mortal, next was ſeen,

Reclining on a funeral urn,
Her ſhort-liv'd darling Son to mourn.
The laſt was he, whoſe thunder ſlew
The Titan-race, a rebel crew,
That from a hundred hills ally'd
In impious leagues their King defy'd.
This wonder of the ſculptor's hand
Produce'd, his art was at a ſtand:
For who would hope new fame to raiſe,
Or riſque his well-eſtabliſh'd praiſe,
That, his high genius to approve,
Had drawn a GEORGE, or carv'd a Jove!

* Honoratiſſimus D. Dominus CUTTS, Baro de Gowran, &c.

Sic,

Sic, poſtquam Enceladi dejecit fulmine fratres
Cœlicolum pater, et vetuit contemnere divos:
Divulſam terræ faciem, ingenteſque ruinas
Mortales ſtupuere; altum hinc mirantur abeſſe
Pelion, invertique imis radicibus Oſſam;
Hic fluvium moles inter confuſaque ſaxa
Reptare, atque aliis diſcentem currere ripis.
Stant dubii, et notos montes umbraſque requirunt,
Errore ambiguo eluſi, et novitate locorum.
Nempe hic AURIACI nuper vexilla ſecutæ
Confluxere acies, hic, aſpera corda, Britanni,
Germanuſque ferox, et juncto fœdere Belga;
Quique truci Boreæ, et cœlo damnatus iniquo.
Vitam agit in tenebris; et qui dudum ore peruſto
Decolor admoti prodit veſtigia Phœbi:
Undique conveniunt, totum conſcripta per orbem
Agmina, NASSOVIque latus ſocialibus armis
Circumfuſa tegunt, fremituſque et murmura miſcent,
Tam vario disjuncta ſitu, tot diſſona linguis.
Te tamen e mediis, * Ductor Fortiſſime, turmis
Exere, Tu vitam (ſi quid mea carmina poſſunt)
Accipies, populique encomia fera futuri,
Quem varias edoctum artes, ſtudiiſque Minervæ
Omnibus ornatum Marti Rhedycina furenti
Credidit invita, et tanto ſe jactat alumno.
Hunc nempe ardorem, atque immenſos pectoris æſtus

* Inſig. Dom. Chriſtoph. Codrington, unus ex Regii Satellitii Præfectis.

Non

Non jubar Arctoum, aut noſtri penuria cœli,
Sed plaga torridior, qua ſol intentius omnes
Effundit radios, totique obnoxia Phœbo
India progenuit, teneriſque incoxit ab annis
Virtutem immodicam, et generoſæ incendia mentis.

Jam quoque torpentem qui infelix ſuſpicit Arcton,
Brumamque æternam friguſque perambulat, urſæ
Horridus exuviis, GULIELMI ingentia facta
Deſcribit ſociis, pugnataque in ordine bella
Attentus numerat, neque brumam aut frigora curat.
En! vaſtos nivium tractus et pallida regna
Deſerit, imperio extremum * qui ſubjicit orbem,
Indigenaſque hyemes, Britonumque Heroa pererrat
Luminibus tacitis; ſubeunt nunc fuſa Namurcæ
Mœnia, nunc tardo quæ ſanguine plurima fluxit
Boinia, nunc dubii palma indiſcreta Seneffi.
Quæ facies, et quanta viri! quo vertice in auras
Aſſurgit! quali firmat veſtigia greſſu,
Majeſtate rudi, et torvo ſpectabilis ore.

Sic olim Alcides, immania membra Leonis
Inſtratus ſpoliis, vaſta ſe mole ferebat,
Evandri amplexus dextramque adjungere dextræ
Cum peteret, tectiſque ingens ſuccederet hoſpes.

Dum pugnas, GULIELME, tuas, campoſque cruentos
Accipit, in venis ebullit vividus humor,
Corda micant crebro, et mentem ferit æmulus ardor.
Non jam Riphæos hoſtis populabitur agros

Impune,

Impune, aut agitabit inultas Sarmata prædas.
Quis tamen ille procul fremitus! Quæ murmura vulgi
NASSOVIUM ingeminant! video cava littora circum
Fervere remigibus, ſubitiſque albeſcere velis.
Anglia ſolve metus, et inanes mitte querelas,
NASSOVI ſecura tui, deſiſte tumentes
Proſpicere in fluctus animo ſuſpenſa, truceſque
Objurgare notos, tardamque requirere puppim:
Optatus tibi Cæſar adeſt, nec ut ante videbis
Sollicitum belli ſtudiis, fatalia Gallo
Conſilia et tacitas verſantem in pectore pugnas.
Olli grata quies et pax tranquilla verendum
Compoſuit vultum, lætoſque afflavit honores.
Ut denſo circum ſe plurimus agmine miles
Agglomerat lateri! ut patriam veteresque penates
Reſpicit exultans! juvat oſtentare recentes
Ore cicatrices, et vulnera cruda, notaſque
Mucronum inſignes, afflataque ſulphure membra.
Chara ſtupet conjux, reduciſque incerta mariti
Veſtigat faciem; trepida formidine proles
Stat procul, et patrios horreſcit neſcia vultus.
Ille graves caſus, duri et diſcrimina belli
Enumerat, tumidiſque inſtaurat prœlia verbis.
Sic, poſtquam in patriam fœcunda heroibus Argo
Phryxeam attulerat pellem, lanamque rigentem
Expoſuit Graiis, et tortile velleris aurum,
Navita terrificis infamia littora monſtris
Deſcribit, mixto ſpirantem incendia fumo

Serpentem,

Serpentem, vigileſque feras, plauſtroque gementes
Inſolito tauros, et anhelos igne juvencos.

Te tamen, O quantis GULIELME erepte periclis,
Accipimus reducem: tibi Diva Britannia fundit
Plebemque et proceres: medias quacunque per urbes
Ingrederis, crebræ conſurgunt undique pompæ,
Gaudiaque et plauſus: mixto ordine vulgus euntem
Circumſtat fremitu denſo: Tibi Jupiter annum
Serius invertit, luces mirata ſerenas
Ridet Hyems, feſtoque vacat cœlum omne triumpho.

Jamque * Nepos tibi parvus adeſt, lætoque juventæ
Inceſſu, et blando teſtatur gaudia riſu.
Ut Patrius vigor atque elati gratia vultus
Cæſareum ſpirant, majeſtatemque verendam
Infundunt puero! ut Mater formoſa ſerenat
Auguſtam frontem, et ſublimia temperat ora!
Agnoſco faciem ambiguam, mixtoſque parentes.
Ille tuas, GULIELME, acies, et triſtia bella,
Pugnaſque innocua dudum ſub imagine luſit.
Nunc indignanti ſimilis fugitiva puſillæ
Terga premit turmæ, et falſis terroribus implet,
Sternitque exiguum ficto cognomine Gallum.
Nunc ſimulat turres, et propugnacula parva
Nominibus ſignat variis; ſubitoque tumultu
Sedulus infirmas arces, humilemque Namurcam
Diruit: interea generoſæ in pectore flammæ
Aſſurgunt ſenſim juveni, notat ignis honeſtas

* Celſiſſimus Princeps Dux Gloceſtrenſis.

Purpureo

Purpureo fervore genas, et amabilis horror.
Quis tamen Auguſtæ immenſas in carmine pompas
Inſtruet, in luteos ubi vulgo effuſa canales
Vina rubent, variatque infectas purpura ſordes?
Quis lapſus referet ſtellarum, et fictile cœlum,
Qua laceram oſtendunt redolentia compita chartam,
Sulphuris exuvias, tubuloſque bitumine caſſos?
En procul attonitam video clareſcere noctem
Fulgore inſolito! ruit undique lucidus imber,
Flagranteſque hyemes; crepitantia ſidera paſſim
Scintillant, totoque pluunt incendia cœlo.
Nec minus in terris Vulcanus mille figuras
Induit, ignivomaſque feras, et fulgida monſtra,
Terribiles viſu formas! hic membra Leonis
Hiſpida mentitur, tortiſque comantia flammis
Colla quatit, rutilaſque jubas; hic lubricus Anguem
Ludit, ſubſiliens, et multo ſibilat igne.
Lætitiam ingentem atque effuſa hæc gaudia civis
Jam tandem ſecurus agit, poſitoque timore
Exercet ventos, claſſemque per ultima mundi
Impune educit, pelagoque licentius errat:
Seu conſtricta gelu, mediiſque horrentia Cancri
Menſibus arva videt; ſeu turgida malit olenti
Tendere vela noto, qua thurea flamina miſcet
Æolus, et placidis perfundit odoribus auras.
Vos animæ illuſtres heroum, umbræque recentes,
Quarum trunca jacent et adhuc ſtillantia crudis
Corpora vulneribus, quibus hæc optabilis orbi

Parta

Parta quies, nondum NASSOVO abducite veſtro
Fida ſatellitia, at ſolitis ſtipate catervis
Ductorem, et tenues circum diffundite turmas.
Tuque MARIA, tuos non unquam oblita Britannos,
O Diva, O patiens magnum expectare maritum,
Ne terris Dominum invideas, quanquam amplius illum
Detineant, longamque agitent ſub vindice pacem.

BAROMETRI Deſcriptio.

QUA penetrat foſſor terræ cæca antra, metallo
Fœcunda informi, rudibuſque nitentia venis;
Dum ſtupet occultas gazas, nummoſque futuros,
Eruit argenti latices, nitidumque liquorem;
Qui nullo effuſus prodit veſtigia tractu,
Nec terram ſigno revolubilis imprimit udo,
Sed fractus ſparſim in globulos formam uſque rotundam
Servat, et in teretes lapſans ſe colligit orbes.

Incertum qua ſit natura, an negligat ultra
Perficier, jubar et maturus inutile temnat;
An potius ſolis vis imperfecta relinquat
Argentum male coctum, divitiaſque fluentes:
Quicquid erit, magno ſe jactat nobilis uſu;
Nec Deus effulſit magis aſpectabilis olim,
Cum Danaen flavo circum pretioſus amictu
Ambiit, et gratam ſuadente libidine formam,

Depluit

Depluit irriguo liquefactum Numen in Auro.
Quin age, ſume tubum fragilem, cui denſior aër
Excluſus; fundo vitri ſubſidat in imo
Argenti ſtagnum; ut pluvia impendente metallum
Mobile deſcendat, vel contra, ubi poſtulat æſtus,
Prodeat hinc liquor emergens, et rurſus inane
Occupet aſcenſu, tubulumque excurrat in omnem.
Jam cœli faciem tempeſtateſque futuras
Conſcia lympha monet, brumamque et frigora narrat.
Nam quoties liquor inſurgit, vitreoque canali
Sublatum nequeunt ripæ cohibere priores;
Tum lætos ſperare dies licet, arva fatentur
Æſtatem, et large diffuſo lumine rident.
Sin ſeſe immodicum attollens Argenteus humor,
Et nimium oppreſſus, contendat ad ardua vitri,
Jam ſitiunt herbæ, jam ſuccos flamma feraces
Excoquit, et languent conſumto prata virore.
Cum vero tenues nebulas ſpiracula terræ
Fundunt, et madidi fluitant ſuper æquora fumi,
Pabula venturæ pluviæ; tum fuſile pondus
Inferiora petit; nec certior Ardea cœlos
Indicat humentes, medias quando ætheris oras
Tranando, craſſa fruitur ſublimius aura,
Diſcutit et madidis rorantia nubila pennis.
Nunc guttæ agglomerant, diſperſas frigora ſtipant
Particulas, raruſque in nimbum cogitur humor:
Prata virent, ſegetem fœcundis imbribus æther
Irrigat, et bibulæ radici alimenta miniſtrat.

Quin

Quin ubi plus æquo deſcendens uda metalli
Fundum amat, impatiens pluviæ, metuenſque procellam,
Agricolæ caveant; non hoc impune colonus
Aſpicit; oſtendet mox fœta vaporibus aura
Collectas hyemes, tempeſtatemque ſonoram.
At licet Argentum mole incumbente levatum
Subſidat, penituſque imo ſe condat in alveo,
Cætera quæque tument; everſis flumina ripis
Expatiata ruunt, ſpumantibus æſtuat undis
Diluvium, rapidique effuſa licentia ponti.
Nulla tacet ſecreta poli mirabile vitrum,
Quin varios cœli vultus et tempora prodit.
Ante refert, quando tenui velamine tutus
Incedes, quando ſperabis frigidus ignem.
Augurio hoc fretus, quanquam atri nubila cœli
Dirumpunt obſcura diem, pluviaſque minantur;
Machina ſi neget, et ſudum promittat apertum,
Audax carpat iter nimbo pendente viator;
Nec metuens imbrem, poſcentes Meſſor ariſtas
Proſternat: terræ jam bruma incumbit inermis,
Frigoraque haud nocitura cadunt, feriuntque paratos.

ΠΥΓΜΑΙΟ-

ΠΥΓΜΑΙΟ-ΓΕΡΑΝΟΜΑΧΙΑ,

SIVE,

PRÆLIUM

INTER

PYGMEOS et GRUES commissum.

PEnnatas acies, et lamentabile bellum
Pygmeadum refero: parvas tu, Musa, cohortes
Instrue; tu gladios, mortemque minantia rostra,
Offensosque Grues, indignantesque pusillam
Militiam celebra; volucrumque hominumque tumultus.
Heroum ingentes animos et tristia bella
Pieridum labor exhausit, versuque sonoro
Jussit et æterna numerorum assurgere pompa:
Quis lectos Graium juvenes, et torva tuentem
Thesea, quis pedibus velocem ignorat Achillem?
Quem dura Æneæ certamina, quem GULIELMI
Gesta latent? fratres Thebani, et flebile fatum

Pompeii quem non delaſſavere legentem?
Primus ego intactas acies, gracilemque tubarum
Carmine depingam ſonitum, nova caſtra ſecutus;
Exiguoſque canam pugiles, Gruibuſque malignos
Heroas, nigriſque ruentem è nubibus hoſtem.
Qua ſolis tepet ortu, primitiiſque diei
India læta rubet, medium inter inhoſpita ſaxa
(Per placidam vallem, et paucis acceſſa vireta)
Pygmæum quondam ſteterat, dum fata ſinebant,
Imperium. Hinc varias vitam excoluere per artes
Seduli, et aſſiduo fervebant arva popello.
Nunc ſi quis dura evadat per ſaxa viator,
Deſertoſque lares, et valles oſſibus albas
Exiguis videt, et veſtigia parva ſtupeſcit.
Deſolata tenet victrix impune volucris
Regna, et ſecuro crepitat Grus improba nido.
Non ſic, dum multos ſtetit inſuperabilis annos
Parvula progenies; tum, ſi quis cominus ales
Congredi, et immixtæ auderet ſe credere pugnæ,
Miles atrox aderat, ſumptiſque feroculus armis
Sternit humi volucrem moribundam, humeriſque reportat
Ingentem prædam; cæſoque epulatur in hoſte.
Sæpe improviſas mactabat, ſæpe juvabat
Diripere aut nidum, aut ulciſci in prole parentem.
Nempe larem quoties multa conſtruxerat arte,
Aut uteri poſuiſſet onus, volucremque futuram;
Continuo vultu ſpirans immane minaci
Omnia vaſtaret miles, fœtuſque necaret

Immeritos,

Immeritos, vitamque abrumperet imperfectam,
Cum tepido nondum maturuit hoſtis in ovo.
Hinc cauſæ irarum, bella hinc, fatalia bella,
Atque acies letho intentæ, volucrumque virumque
Commiſſæ ſtrages, confuſaque mortis imago.
Non tantos motus, nec tam memorabile bellum,
Mæonius quondam ſublimi carmine vates
Luſit; ubi totam ſtrepituque armiſque paludem
Miſcuit: hic (viſu miſerabile!) corpora murum
Sparſa jacent juncis transfixa, hic gutture rauco
Rana dolet, pedibuſque abſciſſo poplite ternis
Reptat humi, ſolitis nec ſeſe ſaltibus effert.
Jamque dies Pygmæo aderat, quo tempore cæſi
Pœnituit fœtus, intactaque maluit ova.
Nam ſuper his accenſa graves exarſit in iras
Grus ſtomachans; omneſque ſimul, quas Strymonis unda,
Aut ſtagnum Mareotidis, imi aut uda Cayſtri
Prata tenent, adſunt; Scythicaque excita palude,
Et conjurato volucris deſcendit ab Iſtro,
Strageſque immenſas et vulnera cogitat abſens,
Exacuitque ungues ictum meditata futurum,
Et roſtrum parat acre, fugæque accommodat alas.
Tantus amor belli, et vindictæ arrecta cupido.
Ergo ubi ver nactus proprium, ſuſpenſus in alto
Aëre concuſſis exercitus obſtrepit alis,
Terræque immenſos tractus, ſemotaque longe
Æquora deſpiciunt, Boreamque et nubila tranant
Innumeri: crebro circum ingens fluctuat æther

Flamine, et aſſiduus miſcet cœlum omne tumultus.
Nec minor in terris motus, dum bella faceſſit
Impiger, inſtituitque agmen, firmatque phalangas,
Et furit arreptis animoſus homuncio telis:
Donec turma duas compoſta excurrat in alas,
Ordinibuſque frequens, et marte inſtructa perito.
Jamque acies inter medias ſeſe arduus infert
Pygmeadum ductor, qui majeſtate verendus
Inceſſuque gravis reliquos ſupereminet omnes
Mole gigantea, mediamque aſſurgit in ulnam.
Torvior aſpectu (hoſtilis nam inſculpſerat unguis
Ore cicatrices) vultuque oſtentat honeſta
Roſtrorum ſigna, et crudos in pectore morſus.
Immortali odio, æterniſque exercuit iris
Alituum gentem, non illum impune volucris
Aut ore, aut pedibus peteret confiſus aduncis.
Fatalem quoties Gruibus diſtrinxerat enſem,
Truncavitque alas, celerique fugam abſtulit hoſti!
Quot fecit ſtrages! quæ nudis funera pullis
Intulit, heu! quoties implevit Strymona fletu!
Jamque procul ſonus auditur, piceamque volantum
Proſpectant nubem bellumque hoſteſque ferentem.
Crebreſcit tandem, atque oculis ſe plurimus offert
Ordinibus ſtructus variis exercitus ingens
Alituum, motiſque eventilat aëra pennis.
Turba polum replet, ſpecieque immanis obumbrat
Agmina Pygmæorum, et denſa in nubibus hæret:
Nunc denſa, at patriis mox reddita rarior oris.

Belli

Belli ardent ſtudio Pygmæi, et lumine ſævo
Suſpiciunt hoſtem; nec longum tempus, et ingens
Turba Gruum horrifico ſeſe ſuper agmina lapſu
Præcipitat gravis, et bellum ſperantibus infert:
Fit fragor; avulſæ volitant circum aera plumæ.
Mox defeſſa iterum levibus ſeſe eripit alis,
Et vires reparata iterum petit impete terras.
Armorum pendet fortuna: hic fixa volucris
Cuſpide, ſanguineo ſeſe furibunda rotatu
Torquet agens circum, roſtrumque intendit in hoſtem
Imbelle, et curvos in morte recolligit ungues.
Pygmæi hic ſtillat lentus de vulnere ſanguis,
Singultuſque ciet crebros, pedibuſque puſillis
Tundit humum, et moriens unguem execratur acutum.
Æſtuat omne ſolum ſtrepitu, tepidoque rubeſcit
Sanguine, ſparguntur gladii, ſparguntur et alæ,
Ungueſque et digiti, commiſtaque roſtra lacertis.
Pygmeadum ſævit, mediiſque in millibus ardet
Ductor, quem late hinc atque hinc pereuntia cingunt
Corpora fuſa Gruum; mediaque in morte vagatur,
Nec plauſu alarum, nec roſtri concidit ictu.
Ille Gruum terror, illum denſiſſima circum
Miſcetur pugna, et bellum omne laborat in uno:
Cum, ſubito appulſus (ſic Dî voluere) tumultu
Ex inopino ingens et formidabilis Ales
Comprendit pedibus pugnantem; et (triſte relatu)
Suſtulit in cœlum; bellator ab unguibus hæret
Pendulus, agglomerat ſtrepitu globus undique denſus

Alituum; fruſtra Pygmæi lumine mœſto
Regem inter nubes lugent, ſolitoque minorem
Heroem aſpiciunt Gruibus plaudentibus eſcam.

Jamque recrudeſcit bellum, Grus deſuper urget
Pygmæum roſtro, atque hoſtem petit ardua morſu;
Tum fugit alta volans; is ſurſum brachia jactat
Vulneris impatiens, et inanes fævit in auras.
Talis erat belli facies, cum Pelion ingens
Mitteret in cœlum Briareus, ſolioque Tonantem
Præcipitem excuteret; ſparguntur in æthere toto
Fulminaque ſcopulique: flagrantia tela deorſum
Torquentur Jovis acta manu, dum vaſta Gigantum
Corpora fuſa jacent, ſemiuſtaque ſulphure fumant.

Viribus abſumptis penitus Pygmeïa tandem
Agmina langueſcunt; ergo pars vertere terga
Horribili perculſa metu, pars tollere vocem
Exiguam; late populus Cubitalis oberrat.
Inſtant a tergo volucres, lacerantque trahuntque
Immites, certæ gentem extirpare nefandam.

Sic Pygmæa domus multos dominata per annos,
Tot bellis defuncta, Gruum tot læta triumphis,
Funditus interiit: Nempe exitus omnia tandem
Certus Regna manet, ſunt certi denique fines,
Quos ultra tranſire nefas: ſic corruit olim
Aſſyriæ Imperium, ſic magnæ Perſidis imis
Sedibus everſum eſt, et majus utroque Latinum.
Elyſii valles nunc agmine luſtrat inani,
Et veterum Heroum miſcetur grandibus umbris

Plebs parva: aut, ſi quid fidei mereatur anilis
Fabula, Paſtores per noctis opaca puſillas
Sæpe vident umbras, Pygmæos corpore caſſos.
Dum ſecura Gruum, et veteres oblita labores,
Lætitiæ penitus vacat, indulgetque choreis,
Anguſtoſque terit calles, virideſque per orbes
Turba levis ſalit, et lemurum cognomine gaudet.

RESURRECTIO

DELINEATA

Ad Altare Col. Magd. Oxon.

EGregios ſuci tractus, calamique labores,
Surgenteſque hominum formas, ardentiaque ora
Judicis, et ſimulachra modis pallentia miris,
Terribilem viſu pompam, tu carmine Muſa
Pande novo, vatique ſacros accende furores.
Olim planitiem (quam nunc fœcunda colorum
Inſignit pictura) inhoneſto et ſimplice cultu
Veſtiit albedo, ſed ne rima ulla priorem
Agnoſcat faciem, mox fundamenta futuræ
Subſtravit pictor tabulæ, humoremque ſequacem
Per muros traxit; velamine mœnia craſſo
Squallent obducta, et rudioribus illita fucis.
Utque (polo nondum ſtellis fulgentibus apto)
Ne ſpatio moles immenſa dehiſcat inani,
Per cava cœlorum, et convexa patentia late
Hinc atque hinc interfuſus fluitaverat æther;
Mox radiante novum torrebat lumine mundum

Titan,

Titan, et pallens alienos mitius ignes
Cynthia vibrabat; crebris nunc consitus astris
Scintillare polus, nunc fulgor Lacteus omne
Diffluere in cœlum, longoque albescere tractu.
Sic, operis postquam lusit primordia pictor,
Dum sordet paries, nullumque fatetur Apellem,
Cautius exercet calamos, atque arte tenacem
Confundit viscum, succosque attemperat, omnes
Inducit tandem formas; apparet ubique
Muta cohors, et picturarum vulgus inane.
Aligeris muri vacat ora suprema ministris,
Sparsaque per totam cœlestis turba tabellam
Raucos inspirat lituos, buccasque tumentes
Inflat, et attonitum replet clangoribus orbem.
Defunctis sonus auditur, tabulamque per imam
Picta gravescit humus, terris emergit apertis
Progenies rediviva, et plurima surgit imago.
Sic, dum fœcundis Cadmus dat semina sulcis,
Terra tumet prægnans, animataque gleba laborat,
Luxuriatur ager segete spirante, calescit
Omne solum, crescitque virorum prodiga messis.
Jam pulvis varias terræ dispersa per oras,
Sive inter venas teneri concreta metalli,
Sensim diriguit, seu sese immiscuit herbis,
Explicita est; molem rursus coalescit in unam
Divisum funus, sparsos prior alligat artus
Junctura, aptanturque iterum coëuntia membra.
Hic nondum specie perfecta resurgit imago,

Vultum truncata, atque inhoneſto vulnere nares
Manca, et adhuc deeſt informi de corpore multum.
Paulatim in rigidum hic vita inſinuata cadaver
Motu ægro vix dum redivivos erigit artus.
Inficit his horror vultus, et imagine tota
Fuſa per attonitam pallet formido figuram.
Detrahe quin oculos ſpectator, et, ora nitentem
Si poterint perferre diem, medium inſpice murum,
Qua ſedet orta Deo proles, Deus ipſe, ſereno
Lumine perfuſus, radiiſque inſperſus acutis.
Circum tranquillæ funduntur tempora flammæ,
Regius ore vigor ſpirat, nitet ignis ocellis,
Plurimaque effulget majeſtas numine toto.
Quantum diſſimilis, quantum o! mutatus ab illo,
Qui peccata luit cruciatus non ſua, vitam
Quando luctantem cunctata morte trahebat!
Sed fruſtra voluit defunctum Golgotha numen
Condere, dum victa fatorum lege triumphans
Nativum petiit cœlum, et ſuper æthera vectus
Deſpexit lunam exiguam, ſolemque minorem.
Jam latus effoſſum, et palmas oſtendit utraſque,
Vulnuſque infixum pede, clavorumque recepta
Signa, et tranſacti quondam veſtigia ferri.
Umbræ huc felices tendunt, numeroſaque cœlos
Turba petunt, atque immortalia dona capeſſunt.
Matres, et longæ nunc reddita corpora vitæ
Infantum, juvenes, pueri, innuptæque puellæ
Stant circum, atque avidos jubar immortale bibentes

Affigunt

Affigunt oculos in Numine; laudibus æther
Intonat, et læto ridet cœlum omne triumpho.
His amor impatiens conceptaque gaudia mentem
Funditus exagitant, imoque in pectore fervent.
Non æque exultat flagranti corde Sibyllæ,
Hoſpite cum tumet incluſo, et præcordia ſentit
Mota Dei ſtimulis, nimioque calentia Phœbo.
Quis tamen ille novus perſtringit lumina fulgor?
Quam Mitra effigiem diſtinxit pictor, honeſto
Surgentem e tumulo, alatoque ſatellite fultam?
Agnoſo faciem, vultu latet alter in illo
*Wainfletus, ſic ille oculos, ſic ora ferebat:
Eheu quando animi par invenietur Imago!
Quando alium ſimilem virtus habitura!——
Irati innocuas ſecurus numinis iras
Aſpicit, impavidoſque in Judice figit ocellos.
Quin age, et horrentem commixtis igne tenebris
Jam videas ſcenam; multo hic ſtagnantia fuco
Mœnia flagrantem liquefacto ſulphure rivum
Fingunt, et falſus tanta arte accenditur ignis,
Ut toti metuas tabulæ, ne flamma per omne
Livida ſerpat opus, tenueſque abſumpta recedat
Pictura in cineres, propriis peritura favillis.
Huc turba infelix agitur, turpiſque videri
Infrendet dentes, et rugis contrahit ora.
Vindex a tergo implacabile ſævit, et enſem
Fulmineum vibrans acie flagrante ſceleſtos

Jam

Jam Paradiſeis iterum depellit ab oris.
Heu! quid agat triſtis? quo ſe cœleſtibus iris
Subtrahat? o! quantum vellet nunc æthere in alto
Virtutem colere! at tandem ſuſpiria ducit
Nequicquam, et ſero in lachrymas effunditur; obſtant
Sortes non revocandæ, et inexorabile numen.
Quam varias aperit veneres pictura! periti
Quot calami legimus veſtigia! quanta colorum
Gratia ſe profert! tales non diſcolor Iris
Oſtendat, vario cum lumine floridus imber
Rore nitet toto, et gutta ſcintillat in omni.
O fuci nitor, o pulchri durate colores!
Nec, pictura, tuæ langueſcat gloria formæ,
Dum lucem videas, qualem exprimis ipſa, ſupremam.

SPHÆRISTERIUM.

HIC ubi graminea in latum ſeſe explicat æquor
Planities, vacuoque ingens patet area campo,
Cum ſolem nondum fumantia prata fatentur
Exortum, et tumidæ pendent in gramine guttæ,
Improba falx noctis parva incrementa prioris
Deſecat, exiguam radens a ceſpite meſſem:
Tum motu aſſiduo ſaxum verſatile terram
Deprimit extantem, & ſurgentes atterit herbas.

THE PREFACE.

HAVING recommended this Play to the Town, and delivered the Copy of it to the Bookſeller, I think my ſelf obliged to give ſome Account of it.

It had been ſome Years in the Hands of the Author, and falling under my Peruſal, I thought ſo well of it, that I perſuaded him to make ſome Additions and Alterations to it, and let it appear upon the Stage. I own I was very highly pleaſed with it, and lik'd it the better, for the want of thoſe ſtudied Similes and Repartees, which we, who have writ before him, have thrown into our Plays, to indulge and gain upon a falſe Taſte that has prevailed for many Years in the Britiſh Theatre. I believe the Author would have condeſcended to fall into this way a little more than he has, had he before the writing of it been often preſent at Theatrical Repreſentations. I was confirmed in my thoughts of the Play, by the Opinion of better Judges to whom it was communicated, who obſerved that the Scenes were drawn after Moliere's Manner, and that an eaſy and natural Vein of Humour ran through the whole.

I do not queſtion but the Reader will diſcover this, and ſee many Beauties that eſcaped the Audience; the Touches being too delicate for every Taſte in a Popular Aſſembly. My Brother-Sharers were of opinion, at the firſt reading of it, that it was like a Picture in which the Strokes were not ſtrong enough to appear at a diſtance. As it is not in the common way of writing, the Approbation was at firſt doubtful, but has riſen every time time it has been Acted, and has given an Opportunity in ſeveral of its Parts for as juſt and good Action as ever I ſaw on the Stage.

The Reader will conſider that I ſpeak here, not as the Author, but as the Patentee. Which is, perhaps, the Reaſon why I am not diffuſe in the Praiſes of the Play, leſt I ſhould ſeem like a Man who cries up his own Wares only to draw in Cuſtomers.

Richard Steele.

PROLOGUE.

IN this grave Age, when Comedies are few,
We crave your Patronage for one that's New:
Tho' 'twere poor Stuff, yet bid the Author fair,
And let the Scarceneſs recommend the Ware.
Long have your Ears been fill'd with Tragick Parts,
Blood and Blank-Verſe have harden'd all your Hearts:
If e'er you ſmile, 'tis at ſome Party Strokes,
Round-heads and Wooden-ſhoes are ſtanding Jokes;
The ſame Conceit gives Claps and Hiſſes Birth,
You're grown ſuch Politicians in your Mirth!
For once we try (tho' 'tis I own unſafe,)
To pleaſe you All, and make both Parties laugh.
Our Author, anxious for his Fame to-night,
And baſhful in his firſt Attempt to write,
Lies cautiouſly obſcure and unreveal'd,
Like antient Actors in a Maſque conceal'd.
Cenſure, when no Man knows who writes the Play,
Were much good Malice merely thrown away.
The mighty Criticks will not blaſt, for ſhame,
A raw young Thing, who dares not tell his Name:
Good-natur'd Judges will th' Unknown defend,
And fear to blame, leſt they ſhou'd hurt a Friend:

Each

PROLOGUE.

Each Wit may praiſe it, for his own dear Sake,
And hint he writ it, if the Thing ſhou'd take.
But if you're rough, and uſe him like a Dog,
Depend upon it—— He'll remain Incog.
If you ſhou'd hiſs, he ſwears he'll hiſs as high,
And, like a Culprit, join the Hue-and-Cry.
If cruel Men are ſtill averſe to ſpare
Theſe Scenes, they fly for Refuge to the Fair.
Tho' with a Ghoſt our Comedy be heighten'd,
Ladies, upon my word, you ſhan't be frighten'd;
O, 'tis a Ghoſt that ſcorns to be uncivil,
A well-ſpread, luſty, Jointure-hunting Devil;
An am'rous Ghoſt, that's faithful, fond and true,
Made up of Fleſh and Blood——as much as you.
Then every Evening come in Flocks, undaunted,
We never think this Houſe is too much Haunted.

THE
OR, THE HAUNTED-HOUSE.

ACT I. SCENE I.

A Great Hall.

Enter the Butler, Coachman, and Gardiner.

BUTLER.

THERE came another Coach to Town laſt Night, that brought a Gentleman to enquire about this ſtrange Noiſe, we hear in the Houſe. This Spirit will bring a power of Cuſtom to the George---If ſo be he continues his Pranks, I deſign to ſell a Pot of Ale, and ſet up the Sign of the Drum.

COACHMAN.

I'll give Madam warning, that's flat--- I've always liv'd in ſober Families. I'll not diſparage my ſelf to be a Servant in a Houſe that is haunted.

GARDINER.

I'll e'en marry Nell, and rent a bit of Ground of my own, if both of you leave Madam; not but that Madam's a very good Woman--- if Mrs. Abigal did not ſpoil her--- come, here's her Health.

BUTLER.

It's a very hard thing to be a Butler in a Houſe, that is diſturb'd. He made ſuch a Racket in the Cellar laſt Night, that I'm afraid he'll ſour all the Beer in my Barrels.

COACHMAN.

Why then, John, we ought to take it off as faſt as we can. Here's to you --He rattled ſo loud under the Tiles laſt Night, that I verily thought the Houſe wou'd have fallen over our Heads. I durſt not go up into the Cock-loft this Morning, if I had not got one of the Maids to go along with me.

GARDINER.

I thought I heard him in one of my Bed-poſts---- I marvel, John, how he gets into the Houſe when all the Gates are ſhut.

BUTLER.

Why look ye, Peter, your Spirit will creep you into an Augre-hole:-- he'll whisk ye through a Key-hole, without ſo much as juſtling againſt one of the Wards.

COACHMAN.

Poor Madam is mainly frighted, that's certain, and verily believes 'tis my Maſter that was kill'd in the laſt Campaign.

BUTLER.

Out of all manner of queſtion, Robin, 'tis Sir George. Mrs. Abigal is of Opinion it can be none but his Honour; he always lov'd the Wars, and you know was

was mightily pleas'd from a Child with the Muſick of a Drum.

GARDINER.

I wonder his Body was never found after the Battle.

BUTLER.

Found! Why, you fool, is not his Body here about the Houſe? Doſt thou think he can beat his Drum without Hands and Arms?

COACHMAN.

'Tis Maſter as ſure as I ſtand here alive, and I verily believe I ſaw him laſt Night in the Town cloſe.

GARDINER.

Ay! how did he appear?

COACHMAN.

Like a white Horſe.

BUTLER.

Pho, Robin, I tell ye he has never appear'd yet but in the Shape of the Sound of a Drum.

COACHMAN.

This makes one almoſt afraid of one's own Shadow. As I was walking from the Stable t'other Night without my Lanthorn, I fell acroſs a Beam, that lay in my way, and faith my Heart was in my Mouth---- I thought I had ſtumbled over a Spirit.

BUTLER.

Thou might'ſt as well have ſtumbled over a Straw; why, a Spirit is ſuch a little little Thing, that I have heard a Man, who was a great Scholar, ſay, that he'll dance ye a Lancaſhire Horn-pipe upon the point of a Needle---- As I ſat in the Pantry laſt Night counting my Spoons, the Candle methought burnt blue, and the ſpay'd Bitch look'd as if ſhe ſaw ſomething.

COACHMAN.

Ay poor Cur, ſhe's almoſt frighten'd out of her Wits.

GARDINER.

Ay I warrant ye, ſhe hears him many a time and often when we don't.

BUT-

BUTLER.

My Lady muſt have him laid, that's certain, whatever it coſt her.

GARDINER.

I fancy, when one goes to market, one might hear of ſomebody that can make a ſpell.

COACHMAN.

Why may not the parſon of our pariſh lay him?

BUTLER.

No, no, no, our parſon cannot lay him?

COACHMAN.

Why not he as well as another man?

BUTLER.

Why, ye fool, he is not qualified---He has not taken the oaths.

GARDINER.

Why, d'ye think John, that the Spirit wou'd take the law of him?---faith, I cou'd tell you one way to drive him off.

COACHMAN.

How's that?

GARDINER.

I'll tell you immediately [drinks]- - I fancy Mrs. Abigal might ſcold him out of the houſe.

COACHMAN.

Ay, ſhe has a tongue that would drown his Drum, if any thing cou'd.

BUTLER.

Pugh, this is all froth! you underſtand nothing of the matter--- the next time it makes a noiſe, I tell you what ought to be done,---I would have the ſteward ſpeak Latin to it.

COACHMAN.

Ay, that wou'd do, if the ſteward had but courage.

GARDINER.

There you have it- --He's a fearful man. If I had as much much learning as he, and I met the ghoſt, I'd tell him his own! but alack what can one of us poor men do with a Spirit, that can neither write nor read?

BUTLER.

Thou art always cracking and boaſting, Peter; thou doſt not know what miſchief it might do thee, if ſuch a filly dog as thee ſhould offer to ſpeak to it. For ought I know, he might flea thee alive, and make parchment of thy skin to cover his Drum with.

GARDINER.

A fiddleſtick! tell not me--- I fear nothing; not I! I never did harm in my life, I never committed murder.

BUTLER.

I verily believe thee, keep thy temper, Peter; after ſupper we'll drink each of us a double mug, and then let come what will.

GARDINER.

Why that's well ſaid John, an honeſt man that is not quite ſober, has nothing to fear---- Here's to ye---- why how if he ſhou'd come this minute, here wou'd I ſtand. Ha! what noiſe is that?

BUTLER and COACHMAN.

Ha! where?

GARDINER.

The devil! the devil! Oh no, 'tis Mrs. Abiga'.

BUTLER.

Ay faith! 'tis ſhe; 'tis Mrs. Abigal! a good miſtake! 'tis Mrs. Abigal.

Enter ABIGAL.

ABIGAL.

Here are your drunken ſots for you! Is this a time to be guzzling, when gentry are come to the houſe! why don't you lay your cloth? How come you out of the ſtables? Why are not you at work in your garden?

GAR-

GARDINER.

Why, yonder's the fine Londoner and Madam fetching a walk together, and me-thought they look'd as if they ſhould ſay they had rather have my room than my company.

BUTLER.

And ſo forſooth being all three met together, we are doing our endeavours to drink this ſame Drummer out of our heads.

GARDINER.

For you muſt know, Mrs. Abigal, we are all of opinion that one can't be a match for him, unleſs one be as drunk as a Drum.

COACHMAN.

I am reſolved to give Madam warning to hire herſelf another coachman; for I came to ſerve my Maſter, d'ye ſee, while he was alive, but do ſuppoſe that he has no further occaſion for a coach, now he walks.

BUTLER.

Truly, Mrs. Abigal, I muſt needs ſay, that this ſame Spirit is a very odd ſort of a body, after all, to fright Madam and his old ſervants at this rate.

GARDINER.

And truly, Mrs. Abigal, I muſt needs ſay, I ſerv'd my Maſter contentedly, while he was living; but I will ſerve no man living (that is, no Man that is not living) without double wages.

ABIGAL.

Ay, 'tis ſuch cowards as you that go about with idle ſtories to diſgrace the houſe, and bring ſo many Strangers about it; you firſt frighten your ſelves, and then your neighbours.

GARDINER.

Frighten'd! I ſcorn your words. Frighten'd quoth-a!

ABIGAL.

What you ſot! are you grown pot-valiant?

GAR-

GARDINER.

Frightned with a Drum! that's a good one! it will do us no harm, I'll anſwer for it. It will bring no bloodſhed along with it, take my word. It ſounds as like a train-band Drum as ever I heard in my life.

BUTLER.

Pr'ythee, Peter, don't be ſo preſumptuous.

ABIGAL.

Well, theſe drunken rogues take it as I could wiſh.

[Aſide.

GARDINER.

I ſcorn to be frightned, now I am in for't; if old Dub-a-dub ſhou'd come into the room, I wou'd take him----

BUTLER.

Pr'ythee hold thy tongue.

GARDINER.

I would take him---- [The Drum beats, the Gard. endeavours to get off, and falls.

BUTLER and COACHMAN.

Speak to it, Mrs. Abigal.

GARDINER.

Spare my life, and take all I have.

COACHMAN.

Make off, make off, good Butler, and let us go hide our ſelves in the cellar. [They all run off.

ABIGAL Sola.

ABIGAL.

So, now the coaſt is clear, I may venture to call out my Drummer.---- But firſt let me ſhut the door, leſt we be ſurpriz'd. Mr. Fantome, Mr. Fantome! [He beats.] Nay, nay, pray come out, the enemy's fled--- I muſt ſpeak with you immediately--- don't ſtay to beat a parley.

[The back Scene opens, and diſcovers Fantome with a Drum.

FAN-

FANTOME.

Dear Mrs. Nabby, I have overheard all that has been ſaid, and find thou haſt manag'd this thing ſo well, that I could take thee in my arms, and kiſs thee----if my Drum did not ſtand in my way.

ABIGAL.

Well, O' my conſcience, you are the merrieſt ghoſt! and the very picture of Sir George Truman.

FANTOME.

There you flatter me, Mrs. Abigal: Sir George had that freſhneſs in his looks, that we Men of the town cannot come up to.

ABIGAL.

Oh! Death may have alter'd you, you know----beſides, you muſt conſider, you loſt a great deal of blood in the battle.

FANTOME.

Ay, that's right; let me look never ſo pale, this cut croſs my forehead will keep me in countenance.

ABIGAL.

'Tis juſt ſuch a one as my Maſter receiv'd from a curſed French trooper, as my Lady's letter inform'd her.

FANTOME.

It happens luckily that this ſuit of cloaths of Sir George's fits me ſo well,---I think I can't fail hitting the air of a Man with whom I was ſo long acquainted

ABIGAL.

You are the very Man---I vow I almoſt ſtart when I look upon you.

FANTOME.

But what good will this do me, if I muſt remain inviſible?

ABIGAL.

Pray what good did your being viſible do you? The fair Mr. Fantome thought no Woman cou'd withſtand him----But when you were ſeen by my Lady in your proper proper Perſon, after ſhe had taken a full ſurvey of you, and heard all the pretty things you cou'd ſay, ſhe very civilly diſmiſs'd you for the ſake of this empty, noiſy creature Tinſel. She fancies you have been gone from hence this fortnight.

FANTOME.

Why really I love thy Lady ſo well, that tho' I had no hopes of gaining her for my ſelf, I cou'd not bear to ſee her given to another, eſpecially ſuch a wretch as Tinſel.

ABIGAL.

Well, tell me truly Mr. Fantome, have you not agreat opinion of my fidelity to my dear Lady, that I would not ſuffer her to be deluded in this manner, for leſs than a thouſand pound?

FANTOME.

Thou art always remembring me of my promiſe---- thou ſhalt have it, if thou canſt bring our project to bear; do'ſt not know that ſtories of ghoſts and apparitions generally end in a pot of money?

ABIGAL.

Why, truly now Mr. Fantome, I ſhou'd think my ſelf a very bad Woman, if I had done what I do, for a farthing leſs.

FANTOME.

Dear Abigal, how I admire thy virtue!

ABIGAL.

No, no, Mr. Fantome, I defy the worſt of my enemies to ſay I love miſchief for miſchief ſake.

FANTOME.

But is thy Lady perſuaded that I am the ghoſt of her deceaſed husband?

ABIGAL.

I endeavour to make her believe ſo, and tell her every time your Drum rattles, that her husband is chiding her for entertaining this new lower.

FANTOME.

Pr'ythee make uſe of all thy art, for I am tir'd to death with ſtrowling round this wide old houſe like a Rat behind a wainſcot.

ABIGAL.

Did not I tell you, 'twas the pureſt place in the world for you to play your tricks in? there's none of the family that knows every hole and corner in it, beſides my ſelf.

FANTOME.

Ah Mrs. Abigal! you have had your intrigues----

ABIGAL.

For you muſt know, when I was a romping young girl, I was a mighty lover of hide and ſeek.

FANTOME.

I believe, by this time, I am as well acquainted with the houſe as your ſelf.

ABIGAL.

You are very much miſtaken, Mr. Fantome; but no matter for that; here is to be your ſtation to-night. This is the place unknown to any one living beſides my ſelf, ſince the death of the Joyner; who, you muſt underſtand, being a lover of mine, contriv'd the wainſcot to move to and fro, in the manner that you find it. I deſign'd it for a wardrobe for my Lady's caſt cloaths. Oh! the ſtomachers, ſtays, petticoats, commodes, lac'd ſhoes, and good things that I have had in it----- pray take care you don't break the cherry-brandy bottle that ſtands up in the corner.

FANTOME.

Well, Mrs. Abigal, I hire your cloſet of you but for this one night---- a thouſand pound you know is a very good rent.

ABIGAL.

Well, get you gone; you have ſuch a way with you, there's no denying you any thing!

FAN-

FANTOME.

I'm a thinking how Tinsel will stare when he sees me come out of the wall: for I'm resolved to make my appearance to-night.

ABIGAL.

Get you in, get you in, my Lady's at the door.

FANTOME.

Pray take care she does not keep me up so late as she did last night, or depend upon it I'll beat the Tattoo.

ABIGAL.

I'm undone! I'm undone-----[As he is going in.] Mr. Fantome, Mr. Fantome, you have put the thousand pound bond into my brother's hands.

FANTOME.

Thou shalt have it, I tell thee, thou shalt have it.

[Fantome goes in.

ABIGAL.

No more words----- vanish, vanish.

Enter LADY.

ABIGAL, [opening the door.]

Oh, dear Madam, was it you that made such a knocking? my heart does so beat---- I vow you have frighted me to death------ I thought verily it had been the Drummer.

LADY.

I have been showing the garden to Mr. Tinsel; he's most insufferably witty upon us about the story of the Drum.

ABIGAL.

Indeed, Madam, he's a very loose man! I'm afraid 'tis he that hinders my poor master from resting in his grave.

LADY.

Well! an Infidel is such a Novelty in the country, that

I am resolv'd to divert my self a day or two at least with the oddness of his conversation.

ABIGAL.

Ah, Madam! the Drum begun to beat in the house as soon as ever this creature was admitted to visit you. All the while Mr. Fantome made his addresses to you, there was not a mouse stirring in the family more than us'd to be------

LADY.

This baggage has some design upon me, more than I can yet discover. [aside.] ------ Mr. Fantome was always thy favourite.

ABIGAL.

Ay, and shou'd have been yours too, by my consent! Mr. Fantome was not such a slight fantastick thing as this is.----- Mr. Fantome was the best-built Man one shou'd see in a summer's day! Mr. Fantome was a Man of Honour, and lov'd you! Poor Soul! how he sigh'd when he has talk'd to me of my hard-hearted Lady. ------ Well! I had as lief as a thousand pounds you would marry Mr. Fantome!

LADY.

To tell thee truly, I lov'd him well enough till I found he lov'd me so much. But Mr. Tinsel makes his Court to me with so much Neglect and Indifference, and with such an agreeable Saucinefs---.--- Not that I say I'll marry him.

ABIGAL.

Marry him, quoth-a! no, if you should, you'll be awaken'd sooner than marry'd Couples generally are---- You'll quickly have a Drum at your window.

LADY.

I'll hide my contempt of Tinsel for once, if it be but to see what this Wench drives at. [Aside.

ABIGAL.

Why, suppose your Husband, after this fair Warning he

he has given you, ſhou'd ſound you an Alarm at Midnight; then open your Curtains with a Face as pale as my Apron, and cry out with a hollow Voice, What doſt thou do in Bed with this ſpindle-ſhank'd Fellow?

LADY.

Why wilt thou needs have it to be my Husband? he never had any reaſon to be offended at me. I always lov'd him while he was living, and ſhould prefer him to any Man, were he ſo ſtill. Mr. Tinſel is indeed very idle in his Talk, but I fancy, Abigal, a diſcreet Woman might reform him.

ABIGAL.

That's a likely matter indeed! did you ever hear of a Woman who had power over a Man, when ſhe was his Wife, that had none while ſhe was his Miſtreſs! Oh! there's nothing in the World improves a Man in his Complaiſance like Marriage!

LADY.

He is indeed, at preſent, too familiar in his Converſation.

ABIGAL.

Familiar! Madam, in troth, he's down-right rude.

LADY.

But that you know, Abigal, ſhows he has no Diſſimulation in him ---- Then he is apt to jeſt a little too much upon grave Subjects.

ABIGAL.

Grave Subjects! he jeſts upon the Church.

LADY.

But that you know, Abigal, may be only to ſhew his Wit ------ Then it muſt be own'd, he is extremely talkative.

ABIGAL.

Talkative d'ye call it! he's down-right impertinent.

LADY.

But that you know, Abigal, is a ſign he has been us'd

us'd to good Company ------ Then indeed he is ve poſitive.

ABIGAL.

Poſitive! Why he contradicts you in every thing you ſay.

LADY.

But then you know, Abigal, he has been educated at the Inns of Court.

ABIGAL.

A bleſſed Education indeed! it has made him forget his Catechiſm!

LADY.

You talk as if you hated him.

ABIGAL.

You talk as if you lov'd him.

LADY.

Hold your tongue! here he comes.

Enter TINSEL.

TINSEL.

My dear Widow!

ABIGAL.

My dear Widow! marry come up! [Aſide.

LADY.

Let him alone, Abigal, ſo long as he does not call me My dear Wife, there's no harm done.

TINSEL.

I have been moſt ridiculouſly diverted ſince I left you ----- your ſervants have made a convert of my booby. His head is ſo filled with this fooliſh ſtory of a Drummer, that I expect the rogue will be afraid hereafter to go upon a meſſage by moon-light.

LADY.

Ah, Mr. Tinſel, what a loſs of billet-doux would that be to many a fine lady!

ABI-

ABIGAL.

Then you ſtill believe this to be a fooliſh ſtory? I thought my Lady had told you, that ſhe had heard it herſelf.

TINSEL.

Ha, ha, ha!

ABIGAL.

Why, you would not perſuade us out of our ſenſes?

TINSEL.

Ha, ha, ha!

ABIGAL.

There's manners for you, Madam. [Aſide.

LADY.

Admirably rally'd! that laugh is unanſwerable! now I'll be hang'd if you could forbear being witty upon me, if I ſhould tell you I heard it no longer ago than laſt night.

TINSEL.

Fancy!

LADY.

But what if I ſhould tell you my maid was with me!

TINSEL.

Vapours! vapours! pray, my dear Widow, will you anſwer me one queſtion?----- had you ever this noiſe of a Drum in your head, all the while your husband was living?

LADY.

And pray, Mr. Tinſel, will you let me ask you another queſtion; do you think we can hear in the country, as well as you do in town?

TINSEL.

Believe me, Madam, I could preſcribe you a cure for theſe imaginations.

ABIGAL.

Don't tell my Lady of imaginations, Sir, I have heard it my ſelf.

TINSEL.

Hark thee, child ----- art thou not an old maid?

ABIGAL.

Sir, if I am, it is my own fault.

TINSEL.

Whims! freaks! megrims! indeed Mrs. Abigal.

ABIGAL.

Marry, Sir, by your talk one would believe you thought every thing that was good is a megrim.

LADY.

Why truly I don't very well underſtand what you mean by your doctrine to me in the garden juſt now, that every thing we ſaw was made by chance.

ABIGAL.

A very pretty ſubject indeed for a lover to divert his miſtreſs with.

LADY.

But I ſuppoſe that was only a taſte of the converſation you would entertain me with after marriage.

TINSEL.

Oh, I ſhall then have time to read you ſuch lectures of motions, atoms, and nature --- that you ſhall learn to think as freely as the beſt of us, and be convinc'd in leſs than a month, that all about us is chance-work.

LADY.

You are a very complaiſant perſon indeed; and ſo you would make your court to me, by perſuading me that I was made by chance!

TINSEL.

Ha, ha, ha! well ſaid, my dear! why, faith, thou wert a very lucky hit, that's certain!

LADY.

Pray, Mr. Tinſel, where did you learn this odd way of talking?

TINSEL.

Ah, Widow, 'tis your country innocence makes you think it an odd way of talking.

LADY.

LADY.

Tho' you give no credit to ſtories of apparitions, I hope you believe there are ſuch things as ſpirits!

TINSEL.

Simplicity!

ABIGAL.

I fancy you don't believe women have ſouls, d'ye Sir?

TINSEL.

Fooliſh enough!

LADY.

I vow, Mr. Tinſel, I'm afraid malicious people will ſay I'm in love with an Atheiſt.

TINSEL.

Oh, my dear, that's an old faſhion'd word---I'm a Free-thinker, child.

ABIGAL.

I am ſure you are a free ſpeaker.

LADY.

Really, Mr, Tinſel, conſidering that you are ſo fine a Gentleman, I'm amaz'd where you got all this learning! I wonder it has not ſpoil'd your breeding.

TINSEL.

To tell you the truth, I have not time to look into theſe dry matters myſelf, but I am convinc'd by four or five learned men, whom I ſometimes over-hear at a Coffee-houſe I frequent, that our fore-fathers were a pack of aſſes, that the world has been in an error for ſome thouſands of years, and that all the people upon earth, excepting thoſe two or three worthy Gentlemen, are impos'd upon, cheated, bubbled, abus'd, bamboozl'd-----

ABIGAL.

Madam, how can you hear ſuch a profligate? he talks like the London prodigal.

LADY.

Why really, I'm a thinking, if there be no ſuch things as ſpirits, a woman has no occaſion for marrying---ſhe need not be afraid to lie by her ſelf.

TINSEL.

Ah! my dear! are husbands good for nothing but to frighten away ſpirits? doſt thou think I could not inſtruct thee in ſeveral other comforts of matrimony?

LADY.

Ah! but you are a man of ſo much knowledge that you would always be laughing at my ignorance---you learned men are ſo apt to deſpiſe one!

TINSEL.

No, Child! I'd teach thee my principles, thou ſhould'ſt be as wiſe as I am---in a week's time.

LADY.

Do you think your principles would make a woman the better wife?

TINSEL.

Pr'ythee, Widow, don't be queer.

LADY.

I love a gay temper, but I would not have you rally things that are ſerious.

TINSEL.

Well enough faith! where's the jeſt of rallying any thing elſe!

ABIGAL.

Ah, Madam, did you ever hear Mr. Fantome talk at this rate? [Aſide.

TINSEL.

But where's this ghoſt! the ſon of a whore of a Drummer? I'd fain hear him methinks.

ABIGAL.

Pray, Madam, don't ſuffer him to give the Ghoſt ſuch ill language, eſpecially when you have reaſon to believe it is my maſter.

TINSEL.

That's well enough faith, Nab; doſt thou think thy maſter maſter is ſo unreaſonable, as to continue his claim to his Relict after his bones are laid? Pray, Widow, remember the words of your contract, you have fulfill'd them to a tittle---did not you marry Sir George to the tune of, 'till death us do part?

LADY.

I muſt not hear Sir George's memory treated in ſo ſlight a manner--- this fellow muſt have been at ſome pains to make himſelf ſuch a finiſh'd coxcomb. [Aſide.

TINSEL.

Give me but poſſeſſion of your perſon, and I'll whirl you up to town for a winter, and cure you at once. Oh! I have known many a country Lady come to London with frightful ſtories of the hall-houſe being haunted, of fairies, ſpirits, and witches; that by the time ſhe had ſeen a Comedy, play'd at an Aſſembly, and ambled in a Ball or two, has been ſo little afraid of bugbears, that ſhe has ventur'd home in a chair at all hours of the night.

ABIGAL.

Hum---ſauce-box. [Aſide.

TINSEL.

'Tis the ſolitude of the country that creates theſe whimſies; there was never ſuch a thing as a Ghoſt heard of at London, except in the play-houſe---Oh we'd paſs all our time in London. 'Tis the ſcene of pleaſure and diverſions, where there's ſomething to amuſe you every hour of the day. Life's not life in the country.

LADY.

Well then, you have an opportunity of ſhewing the ſincerity of that love to me which you profeſs. You may give a proof that you have an affection to my perſon, not my jointure.

TINSEL.

Your jointure! how can you think me ſuch a dog! but child, won't your jointure be the ſame thing in London as in the country?

LADY.

No, you're deceiv'd! you muſt know it is ſettled on me by marriage-articles, on condition that I live in this old manſion-houſe, and keep it up in repair.

TINSEL.

How!

ABIGAL.

That's well put, Madam.

TINSEL.

Why faith I have been looking upon this houſe, and think it is the prettieſt habitation I ever ſaw in my life.

LADY.

Ay, but then this cruel Drum!

TINSEL.

Something ſo venerable in it!

LADY.

Ay, but the Drum!

TINSEL.

For my part, I like this Gothick way of building better than any of your new orders---- it would be a thouſand pities it ſhou'd fall to ruin.

LADY.

Ay, but the Drum!

TINSEL.

How pleaſantly we two could paſs our time in this delicious ſituation. Our lives wou'd be a continu'd dream of happineſs. Come, faith, Widow, let's go upon the leads, and take a view of the country.

LADY.

Ay, but the Drum! the Drum!

TINSEL.

My dear, take my word for't 'tis all fancy: beſides ſhou'd he drum in thy very bed-chamber, I ſhou'd only hug thee the cloſer.

Claſp'd in the fo'ds of love, I'd meet my doom,
And act my joys tho' thunder ſhook the room.

ACT

ACT II. SCENE I.

SCENE opens, and discovers Vellum in his Office, and a Letter in his hand.

VELLUM.

THIS Letter astonisheth; may I believe my own eyes---- or rather my spectacles---- To Humphrey Vellum, Esq; Steward to the Lady Truman.

Vellum,

I Doubt not but you will be glad to hear your master is alive, and designs to be with you in half an hour. The report of my being slain in the Netherlands, has, I find, produced some disorders in my family. I am now at the George-Inn: If an old man with a grey beard in a black cloak, enquires after you, give him admittance. He passes for a Conjurer, but is really

Your faithful Friend,

G. Truman.

P. S. Let this be a secret, and you shall find your account in it.

This amazeth me! and yet the reasons why I should believe he is still living are manifold---- First, because this has often been the case of other military adventurers.

Secondly, becauſe the news of his death was firſt publiſh'd in Dyer's Letter.

Thirdly, becauſe this letter can be written by none but himſelf----I know his hand, and manner of ſpelling.

Fourthly,-----

Enter BUTLER.

BUTLER.

Sir, here's a ſtrange old Gentleman that asks for you; he ſays he's a Conjurer, but he looks very ſuſpicious; I wiſh he ben't a Jeſuit.

VELLUM.

Admit him immediately.

BUTLER.

I wiſh he ben't a Jeſuit; but he ſays he's nothing but a Conjurer.

VELLUM.

He ſays right----he is no more than a Conjurer. Bring him in and withdraw. [Exit Butler.

And Fourthly, as I was ſaying, becauſe----

Enter BUTLER with Sir GEORGE.

BUTLER.

Sir, here is the Conjurer----what a deviliſh long beard he has! I warrant it has been growing theſe hundred years. [Aſide. Exit.

Sir GEORGE.

Dear Vellum, you have receiv'd my Letter: but before we proceed lock the door.

VELLUM.

It is his voice. [Shuts the door.

Sir GEORGE.

In the next place help me off with this cumberſome Cloak.

VEL-

VELLUM.

It is his ſhape.

Sir GEORGE.

So, now lay my beard upon the table.

VELLUM.

[After having look'd on Sir George thro' his ſpectacles.]
It is his face, every lineament!

Sir GEORGE.

Well, now I have put off the conjurer and the old man, I can talk to thee more at my eaſe.

VELLUM.

Believe me, my good maſter, I am as much rejoiced to ſee you alive, as I was upon the day you were born. Your name was in all the news-papers, in the liſt of thoſe that were ſlain.

Sir GEORGE.

We have not time to be particular. I ſhall only tell thee in general, that I was taken priſoner in the battle, and was under cloſe confinement for ſeveral months. Upon my releaſe, I was reſolv'd to ſurprize my wife with the news of my being alive. I know, Vellum, you are a perſon of ſo much penetration, that I need not uſe any further arguments to convince you that I am ſo.

VELLUM.

I am---and moreover, I queſtion not but your good Lady will likewiſe be convinced of it. Her Ho--nour is a diſcerning Lady.

Sir GEORGE.

I'm only afraid ſhe ſhou'd be convinc'd of it to her ſorrow. Is not ſhe pleas'd with her imaginary Widowhood? Tell me truly, was ſhe afflicted at the report of my death?

VELLUM.

Sorely.

Sir GEORGE.

How long did her grief laſt?

VELLUM.

Longer than I have known any Widow's---- at leaſt three days.

Sir GEORGE.

Three days, ſay'ſt thou? three whole days? I'm afraid thou flattereſt me!---- O woman! woman!

VELLUM.

Grief is twofold.

Sir GEORGE.

This blockhead is as methodical as ever----- but I know he's honeſt. [Aſide.

VELLUM.

There is a real grief, and there is a methodical grief; ſhe was drown'd in tears till ſuch time as the Taylor had made her Widow's weeds---- indeed they became her.

Sir GEORGE.

Became her! and was that her comfort? truly a moſt ſeaſonable conſolation!

VELLUM.

But I muſt needs ſay ſhe paid a due regard to your memory, and could not forbear weeping when ſhe ſaw company.

Sir GEORGE.

That was kind indeed! I find ſhe griev'd with a deal of good-breeding. But how comes this gang of lovers about her?

VELLUM.

Her jointure is conſiderable.

Sir GEORGE.

How this fool torments me! [Aſide.

VELLUM.

Her perſon is amiable-----

Sir GEORGE.

Death! [Aſide.

VELLUM.

But her character is unblemiſh'd. She has been as virtuous in your abſence as a Penelope----- Sir

Sir G E O R G E.

And has had as many ſuitors.

V E L L U M.

Several have made their overtures.

Sir G E O R G E.

Several!

V E L L U M.

But ſhe has rejected all.

Sir G E O R G E.

There thou reviv'ſt me----but what means this Tinſel? Are his viſits acceptable?

V E L L U M.

He is young.

Sir G E O R G E.

Does ſhe liſten to him?

V E L L U M.

He is gay.

Sir G E O R G E.

Sure ſhe could never entertain a thought of marrying ſuch a coxcomb!

V E L L U M.

He is not ill made.

Sir G E O R G E.

Are the vows and proteſtations that paſt between us come to this! I can't bear the thought of it! is Tinſel the man deſign'd for my worthy ſucceſſor?

V E L L U M.

You do not conſider that you have been dead theſe fourteen months----

Sir G E O R G E.

Was there ever ſuch a dog? [Aſide.

V E L L U M.

And I have often heard her ſay, that ſhe muſt never expect to find a ſecond Sir George Truman----meaning your Ho--nour.

Sir GEORGE.

I think ſhe lov'd me; but tI muſt ſearch into this ſtory of the Drummer before I diſcover my ſelf to her. I have put on this habit of a Conjurer, in order to introduce my ſelf. It muſt be your buſineſs to recommend me as a moſt profound perſon, that by my great knowledge in the curious arts can ſilence the Drummer, and diſpoſſeſs the houſe.

VELLUM.

I am going to lay my accounts before my Lady, and I will endeavour to prevail upon her Ho--nour to admit the tryal of your art.

Sir GEORGE.

I have ſcarce heard of any of theſe ſtories that did not ariſe from a love-intrigue----Amours raiſe as many ghoſts as murders.

VELLUM.

Mrs. Abigal endeavours to perſuade us, that 'tis your Ho--nour who troubles the houſe.

Sir GEORGE.

That convinces me 'tis a cheat, for I think, Vellum, I may be pretty well aſſur'd it is not me.

VELLUM.

I am apt to think ſo truly. Ha---ha---ha!

Sir GEORGE.

Abigal had always an aſcendant over her Lady, and if there is a trick in this matter, depend upon it ſhe is at the bottom of it. I'll be hang'd if this ghoſt be not one of *Abigal*s familiars.

VELLUM.

Mrs. Abigal has of late been very myſterious.

Sir GEORGE.

I fancy, Vellum, thou could'ſt worm it out of her. I know formerly there was an amour between you.

VELLUM.

Mrs. Abigal hath her allurements, and she knows I have pick'd up a competency in your Ho--nour's service.

Sir GEORGE.

If thou hast, all I ask of thee in return is, that thou would'st immediately renew thy addresses to her. Coax her up. Thou hast such a silver tongue, Vellum, as 'twill be impossible for her to withstand. Besides, she is so very a Woman, that she'll like thee the better for giving her the pleasure of telling a secret. In short, wheedle her out of it, and I shall act by the Advice which thou giveſt me.

VELLUM.

Mrs. Abigal was never deaf to me, when I talked upon that subject. I will take an opportunity of addressing my self to her in the most pathetick manner.

Sir GEORGE.

In the mean time lock me up in your office, and bring me word what success you have--- Well, sure I am the first that ever was employ'd to lay himself.

VELLUM.

You act indeed a threefold part in this house; you are a Ghost, a Conjurer, and my ho- noured Master Sir George Truman; he, he, he! You will pardon me for being jocular.

Sir GEORGE.

O, Mr. Vellum, with all my heart. You know I love you Men of wit and humour. Be as merry as thou pleasest, so thou do'st thy business. [Mimicking him.] You will remember, Vellum, your commission is twofold, first to gain admission for me to your Lady, and secondly to get the Secret out of Abigal.

VELLUM.

It sufficeth. [The Scene shuts.

Enter

Enter LADY ſola.

LADY.

Women who have been happy in a firſt marriage, are the moſt apt to venture upon a ſecond. But for my part, I had a Husband ſo every way ſuited to my Inclinations, that I muſt entirely forget him, before I can like another Man. I have now been a widow but fourteen months, and have had twice as many lovers,, all of 'em profeſt admirers of my perſon, but paſſionately in love with my jointure. I think it is a revenge I owe my ſex to make an example of this worthleſs tribe of fellows, who grow impudent, dreſs themſelves fine, and fancy we are oblig'd to provide for 'em. But of all my captives, Mr. Tinſel is the moſt extraordinary in his kind. I hope the diverſion I give my ſelf with him is unblameable. I'm ſure 'tis neceſſary to turn my thoughts off from the memory of that dear Man, who has been the greateſt happineſs and affliction of my life. My heart would be a prey to melancholy, if I did not find theſe innocent methods of relieving it. But here comes Abigal. I muſt teaze the baggage, for I find ſhe has taken it into her head that I am entirely at her diſpoſal.

Enter ABIGAL.

ABIGAL.

Madam! Madam! yonder's Mr. Tinſel has as good as taken poſſeſſion of your houſe. Marry, he ſays, he muſt have Sir George's apartment enlarg'd; for truly, ſays he, I hate to be ſtraiten'd. Nay, he was ſo impudent as to ſhew me the chamber where he intends to conſummate, as he calls it.

LADY.

LADY.

Well! he's a wild fellow.

ABIGAL.

Indeed he's a very ſad man, Madam.

LADY.

He's young, Abigal; 'tis a thouſand pities he ſhould be loſt; I ſhould be mighty glad to reform him.

ABIGAL.

Reform him! marry hang him!

LADY.

Has not he a great deal of life?

ABIGAL.

Ay, enough to make your heart ake.

LADY.

I dare ſay thou think'ſt him a very agreeable fellow.

ABIGAL.

He thinks himſelf ſo, I'll anſwer for him.

LADY.

He's very good-natur'd!

ABIGAL.

He ought to be ſo, for he's very ſilly.

LADY.

Doſt thou think he loves me?

ABIGAL.

Mr. Fantome did, I am ſure.

LADY.

With what raptures he talk'd!

ABIGAL.

Yes, but 'twas in praiſe of your jointure-houſe.

LADY.

He has kept bad Company.

ABIGAL.

They muſt be very bad indeed, if they were worſe than himſelf.

LADY.

LADY.

I have a ſtrong fancy a good woman might reform him.

ABIGAL.

It would be a fine experiment, if it ſhou'd not ſucceed.

LADY.

Well, Abigal, we'll talk of that another time; here comes the Steward, I have no further occaſion for you at preſent. [Exit Abigal.

Enter VELLUM.

VELLUM.

Madam, is your Ho--nour at leiſure to look into the accounts of the laſt week? They riſe very high---houſe-keeping is chargeable in a houſe that is haunted.

LADY.

How comes that to paſs? I hope the Drum neither eats nor drinks? But read your account, Vellum.

VELLUM.

[putting on and off his ſpectacles in this Scene] A hogſhead and a half of ale----it is not for the ghoſt's drinking ----- But your Ho--nour's ſervants ſay they muſt have ſomething to keep up their courage againſt this ſtrange noiſe. They tell me they expect a double quantity of malt in their ſmall-beer, ſo long as the houſe continues in this condition.

LADY.

At this rate they'll take care to be frighten'd all the year round, I'll anſwer for 'em. But go on,

VELLUM.

Item, Two ſheep, and a----Where is the ox?---Oh, here I have him-----and an ox-----your Honour muſt always have a piece of cold beef in the houſe for the entertainment of ſo many ſtrangers, who come from all

all parts to hear this Drum. Item, Bread, ten peck-loaves ---- They cannot eat beef without bread - - Item, three barrels of table beer ----- Thny muſt drink with their meat.

LADY.

Sure no Woman in England has a ſteward that makes ſuch ingenious comments on his works. [Aſide.

VELLUM.

Item, to Mr. Tinſel's ſervants five bottles of port wine --- - it was by your Ho- nour's order ------ Item, three bottles of ſack for the uſe of Mrs. Abigal.

LADY.

I ſuppoſe that was by your own order.

VELLUM.

We have been long friends, we are your Ho--nour's ancient ſervants; ſack is an innocent cordial, and gives her ſpirit to chide the ſervants, when they are tardy in their bus'neſs; he, he, he, pardon me for being jocular.

LADY.

Well, I ſee you'll come together at laſt.

VELLUM.

Item, a dozen pound of watch-lights for the uſe of the ſervants.

LADY.

For the uſe of the ſervants! What, are the rogues afraid of ſleeping in the dark? What an unfortunate Woman am I! This is ſuch a particular diſtreſs, it puts me to my wits end. Vellum, what wou'd you adviſe me to do?

VELLUM.

Madam, your Ho--nour has two points to conſider. Imprimis, To retrench theſe extravagant expences, which ſo many ſtrangers bring upon you ----- Secondly, To clear the houſe of this inviſible Drummer.

LADY.

This learned diviſion leaves me juſt as wiſe as I was. But how muſt we bring theſe two points to bear?

VELLUM.

I beſeech your Ho--nour to give me the hearing.

LADY.

I do. But pr'ythee take pity on me, and be not tedious.

VELLUM.

I will be conciſe. There is a certain perſon arriv'd this morning, an aged man of a venerable aſpect, and of a long hoary beard, that reacheth down to his girdle. The common people call him a wizard, a white witch, a conjurer, a cunning-man, a necromancer, a ——

LADY.

No matter for his titles. But what of all this?

VELLUM.

Give me the hearing, good my Lady. He pretends to great skill in the occult ſciences, and is come hither upon the rumour of this Drum. If one may believe him, he knows the ſecret of laying ghoſts, or of quieting houſes that are haunted.

LADY.

Pho, theſe are idle ſtories to amuſe the country people, this can do us no good.

VELLUM.

It can do us no harm, my Lady.

LADY.

I dare ſay thon doſt not believe there is any thing in it thy ſelf.

VELLUM.

I cannot ſay, I do; there is no danger however in the experiment. Let him try his skill; if it ſhou'd ſucceed, we are rid of the Drum; if it ſhou'd not, we may tell the world that it has, and by that means at leaſt get out of

of this expensive way of living; so that it must turn to your advantage one way or another.

LADY.

I think you argue very rightly. But where is the Man? I would fain see him. He must be a curiosity.

VELLUM.

I have already discours'd him, and he is to be with me, in my office, half an hour hence. He asks nothing for his pains, till he has done his work;----- no cure, no money.

LADY.

That circumstance, I must confess, wou'd make one believe there is more in his art than one wou'd imagine. Pray Vellum go and fetch him hither immediately.

VELLUM.

I am gone. He shall be forth-coming forthwith.

[Exeunt.

Enter BUTLER, COACHMAN, and GARDINER.

BUTLER.

Rare news, my lads, rare news!

GARDINER.

What's the matter? hast thou got any more vales for us?

BUTLER.

No, 'tis better than that.

COACHMAN.

Is there another stranger come to the house?

BUTLER.

Ay, such a stranger as will make all our lives easy.

GARDINER,

What! is he a Lord?

BUTLER.

A Lord! no, nothing like it,----He's a Conjurer.

COACH-

COACHMAN.

A Conjurer! what, is he come a wooing to my Lady?

BUTLER.

No, no, you fool, he's come a purpoſe to lay the Spirit.

COACHMAN.

Ay marry, that's good news indeed; but where is he?

BUTLER.

He's lock'd up with the Steward in his Office, they are laying their heads together very cloſe. I fancy they are caſting a figure.

GARDINER.

Pr'ythee John what ſort of a creature is a Conjurer?

BUTLER.

Why he's made much as other men are, if it was not for his long grey beard.

COACHMAN.

Look ye Peter, it ſtands with reaſon, that a Conjurer ſhou'd have a long grey beard--for did ye ever know a Witch that was not an old woman?

GARDINER.

Why! I remember a Conjurer once at a fair, that to my thinking was a very ſmock-fac'd man, and yet ſpew'd out fifty yards of green ferret. I fancy, John, if thou'dſt get him into the pantry and give him a cup of ale, he'd ſhew us a few tricks. Doſt think we cou'd not perſuade him to ſwallow one of thy caſe-knives for his diverſion? he'll certainly bring it up again.

BUTLER.

Peter, thou art ſuch a wiſe-acre! thou do'ſt not know the difference between a Conjurer and a Jugler. This man muſt be a very great maſter of his trade. His beard is at leaſt half a yard long, he's dreſs'd in a ſtrange

ſtrange dark cloak, as black as a coal. Your Conjurer always goes in mourning.

GARDINER

Is he a gentleman? had he a ſword by his ſide?

BUTLER.

No, no, he's too grave a Man for that, a Conjurer is as grave as a Judge------ but he had a long white wand in his hand.

COACHMAN.

You may be ſure there's a good deal of virtue in that wand ---.- I fancy 'tis made out of witch-elm.

GARDINER.

I warrant you if the Ghoſt appears, he'll whisk ye that wand before his eyes, and ſtrike you the drum-ſtick out of his hand.

BUTLER.

No; the wand, look ye, is to make a circle, and if he once gets the Ghoſt in a circle, then he has him ----- let him get out again if he can. A circle, you muſt know, is a Conjurer's trap.

COACHMAN.

But what will he do with him, when he has him there?

BUTLER,

Why then he'll overpower him with his learning.

GARDINER.

If he can once compaſs him, and get him in lobs-pound, he'll make nothing of him, but ſpeak a few hard words to him. and perhaps bind him over to his good behaviour for a thouſand years.

COACHMAN.

Ay, ay, he'll ſend him packing to his grave again with a flea in his ear, I warrant him.

BUTLER.

No, no, I would adviſe Madam to ſpare no coſt. If the Conjurer be but well paid, he'll take pains upon

the

the Ghoſt, and lay him, look ye, in the red-ſea ------ and then he's laid for ever.

COACHMAN.

Ay marry, that wou'd ſpoil his Drum for him.

GARDINER.

Why John, there muſt be a power of ſpirits iu that ſame red-ſea — I warrant ye they are as plenty as fiſh.

COACHMAN.

Well, I wiſh after all that he may not be too hard for the Conjurer; I'm afraid he'll find a tough bit of work on't.

GARDINER.

I wiſh the Spirit may not carry a corner of the houſe off with him.

BUTLER.

As for that, Peter, you may be ſure that the Steward has made his bargain with the cunning-man beforehand, that he ſhall ſtand to all coſts and damages ----- but hark! yonder's Mr. Abigal, we ſhall have her with us immediately, if we do not get off.

GARDINER.

Ay lads! if we could get Mrs. Abigal well laid too ----- we ſhould lead merry lives.

For to a man like me that's ſtout and bold,
A Ghoſt is not ſo dreadful as a Scold.

ACT

ACT III. SCENE I.

SCENE opens, and discovers Sir George in Vellum's Office.

Sir GEORGE.

I Wonder I don't hear of Vellum yet. But I know his wisdom will do nothing rashly. The fellow has been so us'd to form in business, that it has infected his whole conversation. But I must not find fault with that punctual and exact behaviour, which has been of so much use to me; my estate is the better for it.

Enter VELLUM.

Well Vellum, I'm impatient to hear your success.

VELLUM.

First, let me lock the door.

Sir GEORGE.

Will your Lady admit me?

VELLUM.

If this lock is not mended soon, it will be quite spoiled.

Sir GEORGE.

Pr'ythee let the lock alone at present, and answer me.

VELLUM.

Delays in business are dangerous — I must send for the smith next week — and in the mean time will take a minute of it.

Sir GEORGE.

What says your Lady?

VEL-

VELLUM.

This Pen is naught, and wants mending —— My Lady, did you ſay?

Sir GEORGE.

Does ſhe admit me?

VELLUM.

I have gain'd admiſſion for you as a Conjurer.

Sir GEORGE.

That's enough! I'll gain admiſſion for my ſelf as a Husband. Does ſhe believe there is any thing in my art!

VELLUM.

It is hard to know what a woman believes.

Sir GEORGE.

Did ſhe ask no queſtions about me?

VELLUM.

Sundry — ſhe deſires to talk with you her ſelf, before you enter upon your buſineſs.

Sir GEORGE.

But when?

VELLUM.

Immediately. This inſtant.

Sir GEORGE.

Pugh. What haſt thou been doing all this while! Why didſt not tell me ſo? Give me my cloak —— have you yet met with Abigal?

VELLUM.

I have not yet had an opportunity of talking with her. But we have interchanged ſome languiſhing glances.

Sir GEORGE.

Let thee alone for that, Vellum, I have formerly ſeen thee ogle her through thy ſpectacles. Well! this is a moſt venerable cloak. After the buſineſs of this day is over, I'll make thee a preſent of it. 'Twill become thee mightily.

VELLUM.

He, he, he! wou'd you make a Conjurer of your Steward?

Sir

Sir G E O R G E.

Pr'ythee don't be jocular, I'm in haſte. Help me on with my beard.

V E L L U M.

And what will your Ho--nour do with your caſt beard?

Sir G E O R G E.

Why, faith, thy gravity wants only ſuch a beard to it; if thou would'ſt wear it with the cloak, thou would'ſt make a moſt compleat heathen philoſopher. But where's my wand?

V E L L U M.

A fine taper ſtick! it is well choſen. I will keep this till you are ſheriff of the county. It is not my cuſtom to let any thing be loſt.

Sir G E O R G E.

Come Vellum, lead the way. You muſt introduce me to your Lady. Thou'rt the fitteſt fellow in the world to be a Maſter of the ceremonies to a Conjurer. [Exeunt.

Enter ABIGAL croſſing the ſtage, TINSEL following.

T I N S E L.

Naby, Naby, whither ſo faſt child?

A B I G A L.

Keep your hands to your ſelf. I'm going to call the Steward to my Lady.

T I N S E L.

What? Goodman Two-fold? I met him walking with a ſtrange old fellow yonder. I ſuppoſe he belongs to the family too. He looks very antique. He muſt be ſome of the furniture of this old manſion-houſe.

A B I G A L.

What does the man mean? Don't think to palm me, as you do my Lady.

TIN-

TINSEL.

Pr'ythee, Nabby, tell me one thing; what's the reaſon thou art my Enemy?

ABIGAL.

Marry, becauſe I'm a friend to my Lady.

TINSEL.

Doſt thou ſee any thing about me thou doſt not like? Come hither, huſſy, give me a kiſs: don't be ill-natur'd.

ABIGAL.

Sir, I know how to be civil. [Kiſſes her.] —— this rogue will carry off my Lady, if I don't take care. [Aſide.

TINSEL.

Thy lips are as ſoft as velvet, Abigal, I muſt get thee a husband.

ABIGAL.

Ay, now you don't ſpeak idly, I can talk to you.

TINSEL.

I have one in my eye for thee. Doſt thou love a young luſty ſon of a whore?

ABIGAL.

Laud, how you talk!

TINSEL.

This is a thundering dog.

ABIGAL.

What is he?

TINSEL.

A private gentleman.

ABIGAL.

Ay! where does he live?

TINSEL.

In the horſe-guards—But he has one fault I muſt tell thee of. If thou canſt bear with that, he's a man for thy purpoſe.

ABIGAL.

Pray, Mr. Tinſel, what may that be?

TIN-

TINSEL.

He's but five and twenty years old.

ABIGAL.

'Tis no matter for his age, if he has been well educated.

TINSEL.

No man better, child; he'll tie a wig, toſs a dye, make a paſs, and ſwear with ſuch a grace, as wou'd make thy heart leap to hear him.

ABIGAL.

Half theſe accompliſhments will do, provided he has an Eſtate---Pray what has he?

TINSEL.

Not a farthing.

ABIGAL.

Pax on him, what do I give him the hearing for! [Aſide.

TINSEL.

But as for that I wou'd make it up to him.

ABIGAL.

How?

TINSEL.

Why look ye, child, as ſoon as I have married thy Lady, I deſign to diſcard this old prig of a ſteward, and to put this honeſt gentleman, I am ſpeaking of, into his place.

ABIGAL.

This fellow's a fool---- I'll have no more to ſay to him. [Aſide.]----Hark! my Lady's a coming!

TINSEL.

Depend upon it, Nab, I'll remember my promiſe.

ABIGAL.

Ay, and ſo will I too---- to your coſt. [Aſide.

[Exit Abigal.

TINSEL.

My Dear is purely fitted up with a maid---but I ſhall rid the houſe of her.

Enter LADY.

LADY.

Oh, Mr. Tinſel, I am glad to meet you here. I am going to give you an entertainment, that won't be diſagreeable to a man of wit and pleaſure of the town---- There may be ſomething diverting in a converſation between a Conjurer and this conceited aſs. [Aſide.

TINSEL.

She loves me to diſtraction, I ſee that. [Aſide.] ---- Pr'ythee, widow, explain thy ſelf.

LADY.

You muſt know here is a ſtrange ſort of a Man come to town, who undertakes to free the houſe from this diſturbance. The ſteward believes him a Conjurer.

TINSEL.

Ay; thy ſteward is a deep one!

LADY.

He's to be here immediately. It is indeed an odd figure of a man.

TINSEL.

Oh! I warrant you he has ſtudy'd the black art! Ha, ha, ha! Is he not an Oxford Sholar?---- Widow, thy houſe is the moſt extraordinarily inhabited of any widow's this day in chriſtendom---- I think thy four chief domeſticks are--- a wither'd Abigal--- a ſuperannuated Steward---- a Ghoſt---- and a Conjurer.

LADY [mimicking Tinſel.]

And you wou'd have it inhabited by a fifth, who is a more extraordinary Perſon than any of all theſe four.

TINSEL.

It's a ſure ſign a woman loves you, when ſhe imitates your manner. [Aſide]--- Thou'rt very ſmart, my dear. But ſee! ſmoke the Doctor.

Enter

Enter VELLUM, and Sir GEORGE in his Conjurer's habit.

VELLUM.

I will introduce this profound person to your Lady ship, and then leave him with you--- Sir, this is her Ho--nour.

Sir GEORGE.

I know it well. [Exit Vellum.

[Aside, walking in a musing Posture.] That dear Woman! the sight of her unmans me. I cou'd weep for tenderness, did not I, at the same time, feel an indignation rise in me, to see that wretch with her: And yet I cannot but smile to see her in the company of her first and second husband at the same time.

LADY.

Mr. Tinsel, do you speak to him; you are us'd to the company of men of learning.

TINSEL.

Old Gentleman, thou dost not look like an inhabitant of this world; I suppose thou art lately come down from the stars. Pray what news is stirring in the Zodiack?

Sir GEORGE

News that ought to make the heart of a coward tremble. Mars is now entring into the first house, and will shortly appear in all his domal dignities---

TINSEL.

Mars? Pr'ythee, father grey-beard, explain thy self.

Sir GEORGE.

The entrance of Mars into his house, portends the entrance of a master into this family---and that soon.

TINSEL.

D'ye hear that, Widow? The stars have cut me out for thy husband. This house is to have a master, and that soon---Hark thee, old Gadbury, is not Mars very like a young fellow call'd Tom Tinsel?

Sir G E O R G E.

Not ſo much as Venus is like this Lady.

T I N S E L.

A word in your ear, Doctor; theſe two planets will be in conjunction by and by; I can tell you that.

Sir G E O R G E. [aſide, walking diſturb'd.]

Curſe on this impertinent fop! I ſhall ſcarce forbear diſcovering my ſelf---- Madam, I am told that your houſe is viſited with ſtrange noiſes.

L A D Y.

And I am told that you can quiet them. I muſt confeſs I had a curioſity to ſee the perſon I had heard ſo much of; and, indeed, your aſpect ſhows that you have had much experience in the world, You muſt be a very aged Man.

Sir G E O R G E.

My aſpect deceives you; what do you think is my real age?

T I N S E L.

I ſhou'd gueſs thee within three years of Methuſelah. Pr'ythee tell me, waſt not thou born before the Flood?

L A D Y.

Truly I ſhou'd gueſs you to be in your ſecond or third century. I warrant you, you have great grand-children with beards of a foot long.

Sir G E O R G E.

Ha, ha, ha! If there be truth in Man, I was but five and thirty laſt Auguſt. O! the ſtudy of the occult Sciences makes a Man's beard grow faſter than you wou'd imagine.

L A D Y.

What an eſcape you have had, Mr. Tinſel, that you were not bred a Scholar!

T I N S E L.

And ſo I fancy, Doctor, thou think'ſt me an illiterate fellow, becauſe I have a ſmooth chin?

Sir

Sir GEORGE.

Hark ye, Sir, a word in your ear. You are a Coxcomb by all the rules of Physiognomy: but let that be a secret between you and me. [Aside to Tinsel.

LADY.

Pray, Mr. Tinsel, what is it the Doctor whispers?

TINSEL.

Only a compliment, child, upon two or three of my features. It does not become me to repeat it.

LADY.

Pray, Doctor, examine this Gentleman's face, and tell me his fortune.

Sir GEORGE.

If I may believe the lines of his face, he likes it better than I do, or---than you do, fair Lady.

TINSEL.

Widow, I hope now thou'rt convinc'd he's a cheat.

LADY.

For my part I believe he's a witch---go on, Doctor.

Sir GEORGE.

He will be crost'd in love; and that soon.

TINSEL.

Pr'ythee, Doctor, tell us the truth. Dost not thou live in Moor-Fields?

Sir GEORGE.

Take my word for it, thou shalt never live in my Lady Truman's mansion-house.

TINSEL.

Pray, old Gentleman, hast thou never been pluck'd by the beard when thou were saucy.

LADY.

Nay, Mr. Tinsel, you are angry! do you think I wou'd marry a man that dares not have his fortune told?

Sir GEORGE.

Let him be angry---I matter not---he is but short-liv'd. He will soon die of----

TINSEL.

Come, come, ſpeak out, old Hocus, he, he, he! this fellow makes me burſt with laughing. [Forces a laugh.

Sir GEORGE.

He will ſoon die of a fright -- or of the--- let me ſee your noſe -- ay---- 'tis ſo!

TINSEL.

You ſon of a whore! I'll run ye through the body. I never yet made the ſun ſhine through a Conjurer----

LADY.

Oh, fy, Mr. Tinſel! you will not kill an old man?

TINSEL.

An old man! the dog ſays he's but five and thirty.

LADY.

Oh, fy; Mr. Tinſel, I did not think you could have been ſo paſſionate; I hate a paſſionate man. Put up your ſword, or I muſt never ſee you again.

TINSEL.

Ha, ha, ha! I was but in jeſt, my dear. I had a mind to have made an experiment upon the Doctor's body. I wou'd but have drill'd a little eyelet hole in it, and have ſeen whether he had art enough to cloſe it up again.

Sir GEORGE.

Courage is but ill ſhown before a Lady. But know, if ever I meet thee again, thou ſhalt find this arm can wield other weapons beſides this wand.

TINSEL.

Ha, ha, ha!

LADY.

Well, learned Sir, you are to give a proof of your art, not of your courage. Or if you will ſhow your courage, let it be at nine a-clock---- for that is the time the noiſe is generally heard.

TINSEL.

And look ye, old Gentleman, if thou doſt not do thy buſineſs

buſineſs well, I can tell thee by the little skill I have, that thou wilt be toſs'd in a blanket before ten. We'll do our endeavour to ſend thee back to the ſtars again.

Sir GEORGE.

I'll go and prepare my ſelf for the ceremonies---and Lady, as you expect they ſhou'd ſucceed to your wiſhes, treat that fellow with the contempt he deſerves.

[Exit Sir G.

TINSEL.

The ſaucieſt dog I ever talk'd with in my whole Life!

LADY.

Methinks he's a diverting fellow; one may ſee he's no fool.

TINSEL.

No fool! ay, but thou doſt not take him for a Conjurer.

LADY.

Truly I don't know what to take him for; I am reſolv'd to employ him however. When a ſickneſs is deſperate, we often try remedies that we have no great faith in.

Enter ABIGAL.

ABIGAL.

Madam, the Tea is ready in the parlour, as you ordered.

LADY.

Come, Mr. Tinſel, we may there talk of this ſubject more at leiſure. [Exeunt Lady and Tinſel.

ABIGAL ſola.

Sure never any Lady had ſuch Servants as mine has! well, if I get this thouſand pound, I hope to have ſome of my own. Let me ſee, I'll have a pretty tight Girl---juſt ſuch as I was ten years ago (I'm afraid I may ſay twenty) ſhe ſhall dreſs me and flatter me---for I will be flatter'd, that's pos! my Lady's caſt ſuits will ſerve her, after I have given them the wearing. Beſides, when I am worth a thouſand pound, I ſhall certainly carry off the Steward---- Madam Vellum!---how prettily that will ſound! Here, bring out Madam Vellum's Chaiſe--nay, I do not know but it may be a Chariot---- It will break the Attorney's Wife's heart---- for I ſhall take place of every body in the Pariſh but my Lady. If I have a Son, he ſhall be call'd Fantome. But ſee Mr. Vellum, as I could wiſh. I know his humour, and will do my utmoſt to gain his heart.

Enter VELLUM with a Pint of Sack.

VELLUM.

Mrs. Abigal, don't I break in upon you unſeaſonably?

ABIGAL.

Oh, no, Mr. Vellum, your viſits are always ſeaſonable.

VELLUM.

I have brought with me a taſte of freſh Canary, which I think is delicious.

ABIGAL.

Pray ſet it down---- I have a dram-glaſs juſt by----

[Brings in a Rummer.

I'll pledge you; my Lady's good health.

VELLUM.

And your own with it---ſweet Mrs. Abigal.

ABIGAL.

Pray, good Mr. Vellum, buy me a little parcel of this Sack, and put it under the article of Tea---I would not have my name appear to it.

VELLUM.

Mrs. Abigal, your name ſeldom appears in my Bills---and yet---- if you will allow me a merry expreſſion --- you have been always in my books, Mrs. Abigal. Ha, ha, ha!

ABI-

ABIGAL.

Ha, ha, ha! Mr. Vellum, you are such a dry jesting Man!

VELLUM.

Why truly, Mrs. Abigal, I have been looking over my papers----and I find you have been a long time my Debtor.

ABIGAL.

Your Debtor! for what, Mr. Vellum?

VELLUM.

For my heart, Mrs. Abigal---- and our accounts will not be balanc'd between us, till I have yours in exchange for it. Ha, ha, ha!

ABIGAL.

Ha, ha, ha! you are the most gallant dun, Mr. Vellum.

VELLUM.

But I am not us'd to be paid by words only, Mrs. Abigal; when will you be out of my Debt?

ABIGAL.

Oh, Mr. Vellum, you make one blush----my humble service to you.

VELLUM.

I must answer you, Mrs. Abigal, in the country phrase---- Your Love is sufficient. Ha, ha, ha!

ABIGAL.

Ha, ha, ha! Well, I must own I love a merry Man!

VELLUM.

Let me see, how long is it, Mrs. Abigal, since I first broke my mind to you---- It was, I think, Undecimo Gulielmi---- we have convers'd together these fifteen years--and yet, Mrs. Abigal, I must drink to our better acquaintance. He, he, he----Mrs. Abigal, you know I am naturally jocose.

ABIGAL.

Ah, you Men love to make sport with us silly creatures.

VELLUM.

Mrs. Abigal, I have a trifle about me, which I wou'd willingly make you a preſent of. It is indeed but a little toy.

ABIGAL.

You are always exceedingly obliging.

VELLUM.

It is but a little toy---- ſcarce worth your acceptance.

ABIGAL.

Pray do not keep me in ſuſpenſe; what is it, Mr. Vellum?

VELLUM.

A ſilver thimble.

ABIGAL.

I always ſaid Mr. Vellum was a generous lover.

VELLUM.

But I muſt put it on my ſelf, Mrs. Abigal---- you have the prettieſt tip of a finger---- I muſt take the freedom to ſalute it.

ABIGAL.

Oh fye! you make me aſham'd, Mr. Vellum; how can you do ſo? I proteſt I am in ſuch a confuſion----

[A feign'd ſtruggle

VELLUM.

This finger is not the finger of idleneſs; it bears the honourable ſcars of the needle---but why are you ſo cruel as not to pare your nails?

ABIGAL.

Oh, I vow you preſs it ſo hard! pray give me my finger again.

VELLUM.

This middle finger, Mrs. Abigal, has a pretty neighbour--a wedding-ring would become it mightily---He, he, he!

ABIGAL.

You're ſo full of your Jokes. Ay, but where muſt I find one for it?

VEL-

VELLUM.

I deſign this thimble only as the forerunner of it, they will ſet off each other, and are---- indeed a two-fold emblem. The firſt will put you in mind of being a good huſwife, and the other of being a good wife. Ha, ha, ha!

ABIGAL.

Yes, yes, I ſee you laugh at me.

VELLUM.

Indeed I am ſerious.

ABIGAL.

I thought you had quite forſaken me---- I am ſure you cannot forget the many repeated vows and promiſes you formerly made me.

VELLUM.

I ſhou'd as ſoon forget the multiplication table.

ABIGAL.

I have always taken your part before my Lady.

VELLUM.

You have ſo, and I have Item'd it in my memory.

ABIGAL.

For I have always look'd upon your intereſts as my own.

VELLUM.

It is nothing but your cruelty can hinder them from being ſo.

ABIGAL.

I muſt ſtrike while the Iron's hot. [Aſide.]---- Well, Mr. Vellum, there is no refuſing you, you have ſuch a bewitching tongue!

VELLUM.

How? ſpeak that again!

ABIGAL.

Why then in plain Engliſh I love you.

VELLUM.

I'm overjoy'd!

ABIGAL.

I muſt own my paſſion for you.

VELLUM.

I'm tranſported! [Catches her in his Arms.

ABIGAL.

Dear charming man!

VELLUM.

Thou ſum total of all my happineſs! I ſhall grow extravagant! I can't forbear!---- to drink thy virtuous inclinations in a bumper of Sack. Your Lady muſt make haſte, my Duck, or we ſhall provide a young ſteward to the Eſtate, before ſhe has an heir to it---- Pr'ythee my dear, does ſhe intend to marry Mr. Tinſel?

ABIGAL.

Marry him! my Love, no, no! we muſt take care of that! there would be no ſtaying in the houſe for us if ſhe did. That young Rake-hell wou'd ſend all the old ſervants a grazing. You and I ſhou'd be diſcarded before the honey-moon was at an end.

VELLUM.

Pr'ythee, ſweet one, does not this Drum put the thoughts of marriage out of her head?

ABIGAL.

This Drum, my dear, if it be well manag'd, will be no leſs than a thouſand pound in our way.

VELLUM.

Ay, ſay'ſt thou ſo, my Turtle?

ABIGAL.

Since we are now as good as Man and Wife----I mean, almoſt as good as Man and Wife---- I ought to conceal nothing from you.

VELLUM.

Certainly my Dove, not from thy yoke-fellow, thy help-mate, thy own fleſh and blood!

ABIGAL.

Huſh! I hear Mr. Tinſel's lagh, my Lady and he are a coming coming this way; if you will take a turn without, I'll tell you the whole contrivance,

VELLUM.

Give me your hand, Chicken.

ABIGAL.

Here take it, you have my heart already.

VELLUM.

We ſhall have much iſſue. [Exeunt.

ACT

ACT IV. SCENE I.

Enter VELLUM and BUTLER.

VELLUM.

JOHN, I have certain orders to give you — and therefore be attentive.

BUTLER.

Attentive! ay, let me alone for that. — I ſuppoſe he means being ſober. [Aſide.

VELLUM.

You know I have always recommended to you a method in your buſineſs; I wou'd have your knives and forks, your ſpoons and napkins, your plate and glaſſes, laid in a method.

BUTLER.

Ah, Maſter Vellum, you are ſuch a ſweet-ſpoken man, it does one's heart good to receive your orders.

VELLUM.

Method, John, makes buſineſs eaſy, it baniſhes all perplexity and confuſion out of families.

BUTLER.

How he talks! I cou'd hear him all day.

VELLUM.

And now, John, let me know whether your table-linen, your ſide-board, your cellar, and every thing elſe within your province, are properly and methodically diſpos'd for an entertainment this evening.

BUT.

BUTLER.

Maſter Vellum, they ſhall be ready at a quarter of an hour's warning. But pray Sir, is this entertainment to be made for the Conjurer?

VELLUM.

It is, John, for the Conjurer, and yet it is not for the Conjurer.

BUTLER.

Why, look you Maſter Vellum, if it is for the Conjurer, the cook-maid ſhou'd have orders to get him ſome diſhes to his palate. Perhaps he may like a little brimſtone in his ſauce.

VELLUM.

This Conjurer, John, is a complicated creature, an amphibious animal, a perſon of a two-fold nature—but he eats and drinks like other men.

BUTLER.

Marry, Maſter Vellum, he ſhou'd eat and drink as much as two other men, by the account you give of him.

VELLUM.

Thy conceit is not amiſs, he is indeed a double man, ha, ha, ha!

BUTLER.

Ha! I underſtand you, he's one of your Hermaphrodites, as they call 'em.

VELLUM.

He is married, and he is not married—— he hath a beard, and he hath no beard. He is old, and he is young.

BUTLER.

How charmingly he talks! I fancy, Maſter Vellum, you cou'd make a Riddle. The ſame Man old and young! how do you make that out, Maſter Vellum?

VELLUM.

Thou haſt heard of a ſnake caſting his skin, and recovering his youth. Such is this ſage perſon.

BUT-

BUTLER.

Nay, 'tis no wonder a Conjurer ſhou'd be like a Serpent.

VELLUM.

When he has thrown aſide the old Conjurer's ſlough that hangs about him, he'll come out as fine a young Gentleman as ever was ſeen in this houſe.

BUTLER.

Does he intend to ſup in his ſlough?

VELLUM.

That time will ſhow.

BUTLER.

Well, I have not a head for theſe things. Indeed, Mr. Vellum, I have not underſtood one word you have ſaid this half hour.

VELLUM.

I did not intend thou ſhou'dſt — but to our buſineſs — let there be a table ſpread in the great hall. Let your pots and glaſſes be waſh'd, and in a readineſs. Bid the Cook provide a plentiful ſupper, and ſee that all the ſervants be in their beſt Liveries.

BUTLER.

Ay! now I underſtand every word you ſay. But I wou'd rather hear you talk a little in that t'other way.

VELLUM.

I ſhall explain to thee what I have ſaid by and by — bid Suſan lay two pillows upon your Lady's bed.

BUTLER.

Two pillows! Madam won't ſleep upon 'em both! ſhe is not a double woman too?

VELLUM.

She will ſleep upon neither. But hark, Mrs. Abigal, I think I hear her chiding the Cook-maid.

BUTLER.

Then I'll away, or it will be my turn next; ſhe, I am ſure, ſpeaks plain Engliſh, one may eaſily underſtand every word ſhe ſays. [Exit Butler.

VELLUM ſolus.

VELLUM.

Servants are good for nothing, unleſs they have an Opinion of the Perſon's underſtanding who has the direction of them — But ſee Mrs. Abigal! ſhe has a bewitching countenance, I wiſh I may not be tempted to marry her in good earneſt.

Enter ABIGAL.

ABIGAL.

Ha! Mr. Vellum.

VELLUM.

What brings my ſweet one hither?

ABIGAL.

I am coming to ſpeak to my friend behind the wainſcot. It is fit, child, he ſhould have an account of this Conjurer, that he may not be ſurpriz'd.

VELLUM.

That wou'd be as much as thy thouſand pound is worth.

ABIGAL.

I'll ſpeak low —— walls have ears.

[Pointing at the wainſcot.

VELLUM.

But heark you Ducklin! be ſure you do not tell him that I am let into the ſecret.

ABIGAL.

That's a good one indeed! as if I ſhou'd ever tell what paſſes between you and me.

VELLUM.

No, no, my child, that muſt not be; he, he, he! that muſt not be; he, he, he!

ABIGAL.

You will always be waggiſh.

VELLUM.

Adieu, and let me hear the reſult of your conference.

ABIGAL.

How can you leave one ſo ſoon? I ſhall think it an age till I ſee you again.

VELLUM.

Adieu my pretty one.

ABIGAL.

Adieu ſweet Mr. Vellum.

VELLUM.

My pretty one.— [As he is going off.

ABIGAL.

Dear Mr. Vellum!

VELLUM.

My pretty one! [Exit Vellum.

ABIGAL ſola.

ABIGAL.

I have him— if I can but get this thouſand pound.

[Fantome gives three raps upon his Drum behind the wainſcot.

ABIGAL.

Ha! three raps upon the Drum! the ſignal Mr. Fantome and I agreed upon, when he had a mind to ſpeak with me. [Fantome raps again.

ABIGAL.

Very well, I hear you; come fox, come out of your hole.

Scene opens and FANTOME comes out.

ABIGAL.

You may leave your Drum in the ward-robe, till you have occaſion for it.

FAN-

FANTOME.

Well, Mrs. Abigal, I want to hear what is a doing in the world.

ABIGAL.

You are a very inquisitive Spirit. But I must tell you, if you do not take care of your self, you will be laid this evening.

FANTOME.

I have overheard something of that matter. But let me alone for the Doctor—I'll engage to give a good account of him. I am more in pain about Tinsel. When a Lady's in the case, I'm more afraid of one Fop than twenty Conjurers.

ABIGAL.

To tell you truly, he presses his attacks with so much impudence, that he has made more progress with my Lady in two days, than you did in two months.

FANTOME.

I shall attack her in another manner, if thou canst but procure me another interview. There's nothing makes a lover so keen, as being kept up in the dark.

ABIGAL.

Pray no more of your distant bows, your respectful compliments—Really, Mr. Fantome, you're only fit to make love a-cross a tea-table.

FANTOME.

My dear Girl! I can't forbear hugging thee for thy good advice.

ABIGAL.

Ay, now I have some hopes of you; but why don't you do so to my Lady?

FANTOME.

Child, I aiways thought your Lady lov'd to be treated with respect.

ABIGAL.

Believe me, Mr. Fantome, there is not so great a difference difference between woman and woman, as you imagine. You ſee Tinſel has nothing but his ſaucineſs to recommend him.

FANTOME.

Tinſel is too great a Coxcomb to be capable of love —And let me tell thee, Abigal, a man, who is ſincere in his paſſion, makes but a very aukward profeſſion of it—but I'll mend my manners.

ABIGAL.

Ay, or you'll never gain a widow—come, I muſt tutor you a little; ſuppoſe me to be my Lady, and let me ſee how you'll behave your ſelf.

FANTOME.

I'm afraid, child, we han't time for ſuch a piece of mummery.

ABIGAL.

Oh, it will be quickly over, if you play your part well.

FANTOME.

Why then, dear Mrs. Ab---- I mean my Lady Truman.

ABIGAL.

Ay! but you han't ſaluted me.

FANTOME.

That's right; Faith I forgot that circumſtance. [Kiſſes her.] Nectar and Ambroſia!

ABIGAL.

That's very well——

FANTOME.

How long muſt I be condemn'd to languiſh! when ſhall my ſufferings have an end! my life! my happineſs, my all is wound up in you.——

ABIGAL.

Well! why don't you ſqueeze my hand?

FANTOME.

What, thus?

ABI-

ABIGAL.

Thus? Ay — now throw your arm about my middle; hug me cloſer. — You are not afraid of hurting me! now pour forth a volley of rapture and nonſenſe, till you are out of breath.

FANTOME.

Tranſport and eeſtaſy! where am I! my life! my bliſs! — I rage, I burn, I bleed, I die!

ABIGAL.

Go on, go on.

FANTOME.

Flames and darts — bear me to the gloomy ſhade, rocks and grottoes — flowers, Zephyrs; and purling ſtreams.

ABIGAL.

Oh! Mr. Fantome, you have a tongue wou'd undo a veſtal! you were born for the ruin of our ſex.

FANTOME.

This will do then, Abigal?

ABIGAL.

Ay, this is talking like a lover. Tho' I only repreſent my Lady, I take a pleaſure in hearing you. Well, o' my conſcience when a man of ſenſe has a little daſh of the coxcomb in him, no woman can reſiſt him. Go on at this rate, and the thouſand pound is as good as in my pocket.

FANTOME.

I ſhall think it an age till I have an opportunity of putting this leſſon in practice.

ABIGAL.

You may do it ſoon, if you make good uſe of your time; Mr. Tinſel will be here with my Lady at eight, and at nine the Conjurer is to take you in hand.

FANTOME.

Let me alone with both of them.

ABIGAL.

Well! fore-warn'd, fore-arm'd. Get into your box, and I'll endeavour to diſpoſe every thing in your favour. [Fantome goes in. [Exit Abigal.

Enter VELLUM.

VELLUM.

Mrs. Abigal is withdrawn. — I was in hopes to have heard what paſs'd between her and her inviſible correſpondent.

Enter TINSEL.

TINSEL.

Vellum! Vellum!

VELLUM.

Vellum! We are methinks very familiar; I am not us'd to be call'd ſo by any but their Ho--nours [aſide.] —— What wou'd you, Mr. Tinſel?

TINSEL.

Let me beg a favour of thee, old gentleman.

VELLUM.

What is that, good Sir?

TINSEL.

Pr'ythee run and fetch me the rent-roll of thy Lady's eſtate.

VELLUM.

The rent-roll?

TINSEL.

The rent-roll? ay, the rent-roll! doſt not underſtand what that means?

VELLUM.

Why? have you thoughts of purchaſing of it?

TINSEL.

Thou haſt hit it, old boy; that is my very intention.

VEL.

VELLUM.

The purchaſe will be conſiderable.

TINSEL.

And for that reaſon I have bid thy Lady very high — ſhe is to have no leſs for it than this entire Perſon of mine.

VELLUM.

Is your whole eſtate perſonal, Mr. Tinſel? — he, he, he!

TINSEL.

Why, you queer old dog, you don't pretend to jeſt, d'ye? Look ye Vellum, if you think of being continued my ſteward, you muſt learn to walk with your toes out.

VELLUM.

An inſolent companion! [Aſide.

TINSEL.

Thou'rt confounded rich I ſee, by that dangling of thy arms.

VELLUM.

An ungracious bird! [Aſide.

TINSEL.

Thou ſhalt lend me a couple of thouſand pounds.

VELLUM.

A very profligate. [Aſide.

TINSEL.

Look ye, Vellum, I intend to be kind to you — I'll borrow ſome money of you.

VELLUM.

I cannot but ſmile to conſider the diſappointment this young fellow will meet with; I will make myſelf merry with him. [Aſide.] — And ſo, Mr. Tinſel, you promiſe you will be a very kind maſter to me?

[ſtifling a laugh.

TINSEL.

What will you give for a Life in the houſe you live in?

VEL-

VELLUM.

What do you think of five hundred pounds?—ha, ha, ha!

TINSEL.

That's too little.

VELLUM.

And yet it is more than I ſhall give—and I will offer you two reaſons for it.

TINSEL.

Pr'ythee what are they?

VELLUM.

Firſt, becauſe the tenement is not in your diſpoſal; and ſecondly, becauſe it never will be in your diſpoſal: and ſo fare you well, good Mr. Tinſel. Ha, ha, ha, you will pardon me for being jocular. [Exit Vellum.

TINSEL.

This rogue is as ſaucy as the Conjurer; I'll be hang'd if they are not a-kin.

Enter LADY.

LADY.

Mr. Tinſel! what, all alone? You Free-thinkers are great admirers of ſolitude.

TINSEL.

No faith, I have been talking with thy ſteward; a very groteſque figure of a fellow, the very picture of one of our Benchers. How can you bear his converſation?

LADY.

I keep him for my ſteward, and not my companion. He's a ſober man.

TINSEL.

Yes, yes, he looks like a put----a queer old dog, as ever I ſaw in my life: We muſt turn him off, widow. He cheats thee confoundedly, I ſee that.

LADY.

Indeed you're miſtaken, he has always had the reputation of being a very honeſt man.

TINSEL.

What I ſuppoſe he goes to church.

LADY.

Goes to church! ſo do you too, I hope.

TINSEL.

I wou'd for once, Widow, to make ſure of you.

LADY.

Ah, Mr. Tinſel, a husband who would not continue to go thither, would quickly forget the promiſes he made there.

TINSEL.

Faith very innocent and very ridiculous! Well then, I warrant thee Widow, thou wou'dſt not for the world marry a ſabbath-breaker!

LADY.

Truly they generally come to a bad end. I remember the Conjurer told you you were ſhort-liv'd.

TINSEL.

The Conjurer! Ha, ha, ha!

LADY.

Indeed you're very witty!

TINSEL.

Indeed you're very handſome. [Kiſſes her hand.

LADY.

I wiſh the Fool does not love me! [Aſide.

TINSEL.

Thou art the idol I adore. Here muſt I pay my devotion------Pr'ythee, Widow, haſt thou any timber upon thy eſtate?

LADY.

The moſt impudent fellow I ever met with. [Aſide.

TINSEL.

I take notice thou haſt a great deal of old plate here in the houſe, Widow.

LADY.

Mr. Tinſel, you are a very obſerving man.

TINSEL.

Thy large ſilver ciſtern would make a very good coach; and half a dozen ſalvers that I ſaw on the ſide-board, might be turned into ſix as pretty horſes as any that appear in the ring.

LADY.

You have a very good fancy, Mr. Tinſel---- what pretty transformations you could make in my houſe ----- But I'll ſee where 'twill end. [Aſide.

TINSEL.

Then I obſerve, child, you have two or three ſervices of gilt plate; we'd eat always in china, my dear.

LADY.

I perceive you are an excellent manager — how quickly you have taken an inventory of my goods!

TINSEL.

Now hark ye, Widow, to ſhow you the love that I have for you----

LADY.

Very well, let me hear.

TINSEL.

You have an old-faſhion'd gold caudle-cup, with the figure of a Saint upon the lid on't.

LADY.

I have: what then?

TINSEL.

Why look ye, I'd ſell the caudle-cup with the old Saint for as much money as they'd fetch, which I wou'd convert into a diamond buckle, and make you a preſent of it.

LADY.

LADY.

Oh you are generous to an extravagance. But pray, Mr. Tinsel, don't dispose of my goods before you are sure of my Person. I find you have taken a great affection to my moveables.

TINSEL.

My dear, I love every thing that belongs to you.

LADY.

I see you do, Sir, you need not make any protestations upon that subject.

TINSEL.

Pho, pho, my dear, we are growing serious, and, let me tell you, that's the very next step to being dull. Come, that pretty face was never made to look grave with.

LADY.

Believe me, Sir, whatever you may think, marriage is a serious subject.

TINSEL.

For that very reason, my dear, let us get over it as fast as we can.

LADY.

I shou'd be very much in haste for a husband, if I married within fourteen months after Sir George's decease.

TINSEL.

Pray, my dear, let me ask you a question; Do'st not thou think that Sir George is as dead at present, to all intents and purposes, as he will be a twelvemonth hence?

LADY.

Yes: but decency, Mr. Tinsel ——

TINSEL.

Or do'st thou think thou'lt be more a Widow then, than thou art now?

LADY.

The world would say I never lov'd my first husband.

TINSEL.

Ah, my dear, they wou'd ſay you lov'd your ſecond; and they wou'd own I deſerv'd it, for I ſhall love thee moſt inordinately.

LADY.

But what wou'd people think?

TINSEL.

Think! why they wou'd think thee the Mirrour of widowhood—That a Woman ſhou'd live fourteen whole months after the deceaſe of her Spouſe, without having engaged herſelf. Why, about town, we know many a woman of quality's ſecond Husband ſeveral years before the death of the firſt.

LADY.

Ay, I know you Wits have your common-place jeſts upon us poor Widows.

TINSEL.

I'll tell you a ſtory, Widow; I know a certain Lady, who conſidering the crazineſs of her husband, had, in caſe of mortality, engaged her ſelf to two young fellows of my acquaintance. They grew ſuch deſperate rivals for her while her husband was alive, that one of them pink'd the t'other in a duel. But the good Lady was no ſooner a Widow, but what did my dowager do? Why faith, being a woman of Honour, ſhe married a third, to whom, it ſeems, ſhe had given her firſt promiſe.

LADY.

And this is a true ſtory upon your own knowledge?

TINSEL.

Every tittle, as I hope to be marry'd, or never believe Tom Tinſel.

LADY.

Pray, Mr. Tinſel, do you call this talking like a Wit, or like a Rake?

TINSEL.

Innocent enough, he, he. he! Why! where's the difference, my dear?

LADY.

LADY.

Yes, Mr. Tinsel, the only man I ever lov'd in my life, had a great deal of the one, and nothing of the other in him.

TINSEL.

Nay now you grow vapouriſh; thou'lt begin to fancy thou hear'ſt the Drum by and by.

LADY.

If you had been here laſt night about this time, you would not have been ſo merry.

TINSEL.

About this time, ſay'ſt thou? Come faith, for the humour's ſake, we'll ſit down and liſten.

LADY.

I will, if you'll promiſe to be ſerious.

TINSEL.

Serious! never fear me, child. Ha, ha, ha! do'ſt not hear him?

LADY.

You break your word already. Pray, Mr. Tinſel, do you laugh to ſhow your wit or your teeth?

TINSEL.

Why, both! my dear---- I'm glad however, that ſhe has taken notice of my teeth. [Aſide.] But you look ſerious, Child; I fancy thou hear'ſt the Drum, do'ſt not?

LADY.

Don't talk ſo raſhly.

TINSEL.

Why, my dear, you could not look more frighted if you had Lucifer's Drum-major in your houſe.

LADY.

Mr. Tinſel, I muſt deſire to ſee you no more in it, if you do not leave this idle way of talking.

TINSEL.

Child, I thought I had told you what is my opinion of Spirits, as we were drinking a diſh of tea but juſt now. ---- There is no ſuch thing, I give thee my word.

LADY.

Oh, Mr. Tinſel, your authority muſt be of great weight to thoſe that know you.

TINSEL.

For my part, Child, I have made my ſelf eaſy in thoſe points.

LADY.

Sure nothing was ever like this fellow's vanity, but his ignorance. [Aſide.

TINSEL.

I'll tell thee what now, Widow ---- I wou'd engage by the help of a white ſheet and a penny-worth of link in a dark night, to frighten you a whole country village out of their ſenſes, and the Vicar into the bargain. [Drum beats.] Hark! hark! what noiſe is that! Heaven defend us! this is more than fancy.

LADY.

It beats more terrible than ever.

TINSEL.

'Tis very dreadful! what a dog have I been to ſpeak againſt my conſcience, only to ſhew my parts!

LADY.

It comes nearer and nearer. I wiſh you have not anger'd it by your fooliſh diſcourſe.

TINSEL.

Indeed, Madam, I did not ſpeak from my heart; I hope it will do me no hurt, for a little harmleſs raillery.

LADY.

Harmleſs, d'ye call it? it beats hard by us, as if it wou'd break through the Wall.

TIN-

TINSEL.

What a devil had I to do with a white ſheet?

[Scene opens, and diſcovers Fantome.

TINSEL.

Mercy on us! it appears.

LADY.

Oh! 'tis he! 'tis he himſelf, 'tis Sir George! 'tis my husband! [She faints.

TINSEL.

Now wou'd I give ten thouſand pound that I were in town. [Fantome advances to him drumming.

I beg ten thouſand pardons. I'll never talk at this rate any more. [Fantome ſtill advances drumming.

By my ſoul, Sir George, I was not in earneſt [falls on his knees.] have compaſſion on my youth, and conſider I am but a Coxcomb ---- [Fantome points to the door.] But ſee he waves me off---- ay with all my heart ----What a devil had I to do with a white ſheet?

[He ſteals off the ſtage, mending his pace as the Drum beats.

FANTOME.

The ſcoundrel is gone, and has left his Miſtreſs behind him. I'm miſtaken if he makes love in this houſe any more. I have now only the Conjurer to deal with. I don't queſtion but I ſhall make his reverence ſcamper as faſt as the lover. And then the day's my own. But the ſervants are coming. I muſt get into my cup-board. [He goes in.

Enter ABIGAL and Servants.

ABIGAL.

O my poor Lady! this wicked Drum has frighted Mr. Tinſel out of his wits, and my Lady into a ſwoon. Let me bend her a little forward. She revives. Here, carry her into the freſh air, and ſhe'll recover, [They carry her off.] This is a little barbarous to my Lady, but 'tis all for her good: and I know her ſo well, that ſhe wou'd not be angry with me, if ſhe knew what I was to get by it. And if any of her friends ſhou'd blame me for it hereafter,

I'll clap my Hand upon my Purſe, and tell 'em,
'Twas for a thouſand Pound, and Mr. Vellum.

ACT V. SCENE I.

Enter Sir George, in his Conjurer's Habit, the Butler marching before him with two large candles, and the two Servants coming after him, one bringing a little table, and another a chair.

BUTLER.

AN'T pleaſe your Worſhip, Mr. Conjurer, the Steward has given all of us orders to do whatſoever you ſhall bid us, and to pay you the ſame reſpect, as if you were our Maſter.

Sir GEORGE.

Thou ſay'ſt well.

GARDINER.

An't pleaſe your Conjurerſhip's Worſhip, ſhall I ſet the table down here?

Sir GEORGE.

Here, Peter.

GARDINER.

Peter! ----he knows my name by his learning.

[Aſide.

COACHMAN.

I have brought you, reverend Sir, the largeſt elbow chair in the houſe; 'tis that the Steward ſits in when he holds a Court.

Sir GEORGE.

Place it there.

BUTLER.

Sir, will you pleaſe to want any thing elſe?

Sir GEORGE.

Paper, and a pen and ink.

BUTLER.

Sir, I believe we have paper that is fit for your purpoſe! my Lady's mourning paper, that is black'd at the edges — wou'd you chuſe to write with a crow quill?

Sir GEORGE.

There is none better.

BUTLER,

Coachman, go fetch the paper and ſtandiſh out of the little Parlour.

COACHMAN. [To the Gardiner.

Peter, pr'ythee do thou go along with me---I'm afraid---- you know I went with you laſt night into the garden, when the cook-maid wanted a handful of parſley.

BUTLER.

Why, you don't think I'll ſtay with the Conjurer by my ſelf!

GARDINER.

Come, we'll all three go and fetch the pen and ink together. [Exeunt Servants.

Sir GEORGE, ſolus.

There's nothing, I ſee, makes ſuch ſtrong alliances as fear. Theſe fellows are all enter'd into a confederacy againſt the Ghoſt. There muſt be abundance of buſineſs done in the family at this rate. But here comes the triple alliance. Who cou'd have thought theſe three rogues cou'd have found each of 'em an employment in fetching a pen and ink?

Enter GARDINER with a Sheet of paper, COACHMAN wich a Standiſh, and BUTLER with a Pen.

GARDINER.

Sir, there is your paper.

COACHMAN.

Sir, there is your Standiſh.

BUTLER.

Sir, there is your crow-quill pen---I'm glad I have got rid on't. [Aſide.

GARDINER.

He forgets that he's to make a circle [Aſide.]—Doctor, ſhall I help you to a bit of chalk?

Sir GEORGE.

It is no matter.

BUTLER.

Look ye, Sir, I ſhow'd you the ſpot where he's heard oftenеſt, if your worſhip can but ferret him out of that old wall in that next room----

Sir GEORGE.

We ſhall try.

GARDINER.

That's right, John. His worſhip muſt let fly all his learning at that old wall.

BUTLER.

Sir, if I was worthy to adviſe you, I wou'd have a bottle of good October by me. Shall I ſet a cup of old ſtingo at your elbow?

Sir GEORGE.

I thank thee-----we ſhall do without it.

GARDINER,

John, he ſeems a very good-natur'd man for a Conjurer.

BUTLER.

I'll take this opportunity of enquiring after a bit of plate I have loſt. I fancy, whilſt he is in my Lady's pay, one may hedge in a queſtion or two into the bargain. Sir, Sir, may I beg a word in your ear?

Sir GEORGE.

What wouldſt thou?

BUTLER.

Sir, I know I need not tell you, thar I loſt one of my ſilver ſpoons laſt week.

Sir GEORGE.

Mark'd with a Swan's neck—

BUTLER.

My Lady's Creſt! He knows every thing. [Aſide.] How wou'd your Worſhip adviſe me to recover it again?

Sir GEORGE.

Hum!

BUTLER.

What muſt I do to come at it?

Sir GEORGE.

Drink nothing but ſmall-beer for a fortnight-----

BUTLER.

Small-beer! Rot-gut!

Sir GEORGE.

If thou drink'ſt a ſingle drop of Ale before fifteen days are expir'd----it is as much----as thy ſpoon----is worth.

BUTLER.

I ſhall never recover it that way; I'll e'en buy a new one. [Aſide.

COACHMAN.

D'ye mind how they whiſper?

GARDINER.

I'll be hang'd if he be not asking him ſomething about Nell—

COACHMAN.

I'll take this opportunity of putting a queſtion to him about poor Dobbin: I fancy he cou'd give me better counſel than the farrier.

BUTLER [to the Gardiner.]

A prodigious Man! he knows every thing: Now is the time to find out thy pick-ax.

GARDINER.

I have nothing to give him: Does not he expect to have his hand croſs'd with ſilver?

COACH-

COACHMAN [to Sir George.]

Sir, may a man venture to ask you a queſtion?

Sir GEORGE.

Ask it.

COACHMAN.

I have a poor horſe in the ſtable that's bewitch'd—

Sir GEORGE.

A bay gelding.

COACHMAN.

How cou'd he know that?---- [Aſide.

Sir GEORGE.

Bought at Banbury.

COACHMAN.

Whew----ſo it was o' my conſcience. [Whiſtles.

Sir GEORGE.

Six years old laſt Lammas.

COACHMAN.

To a day. [Aſide.] Now, Sir, I wou'd know whether the poor beaſt is bewitch'd by Goody Crouch or Goody Flye?

Sir GEORGE.

Neither.

COACHMAN.

Then it muſt be Goody Gurton! for ſhe is the next oldeſt woman in the pariſh.

GARDINER.

Haſt thou done, Robin?

COACHMAN [to Gardiner.]

He can tell thee any thing.

GARDINER [to Sir George.]

Sir, I wou'd beg to take you a little further out of hearing——

Sir GEORGE.

Speak.

GARDINER.

The Butler and I, Mr. Doctor, were both of us in love at the ſame time with a certain perſon. Sir

Sir GEORGE.

A woman.

GARDINER.

How cou'd he know that? [Aside.

Sir GEORGE.

Go on.

GARDINER.

This woman has lately had two children at a birth.

Sir GEORGE.

Twins.

GARDINER.

Prodigious! where could he hear that? [Aside.

Sir GEORGE.

Proceed.

GARDINER.

Now, becauſe I us'd to meet her ſometimes in the garden, ſhe has laid them both——

Sir GEORGE.

To thee.

GARDINER.

What a power of learning he muſt have! he knows every thing. [Aside.

Sir GEORGE.

Haſt thou done?

GARDINER.

I wou'd deſire to know whether I am really father to them both?

Sir GEORGE.

Stand before me, let me ſurvey thee round.

[Lays his wand upon his head, and makes him turn about.

COACHMAN.

Look yonder, John, the ſilly dog is turning about under the Conjurer's wand. If he has been ſaucy to him, we ſhall ſee him puff'd off in a whirlwind immediately.

Sir GEORGE.

Twins, doſt thou ſay? [Still turning him.

GAR-

GARDINER.

Ay; are they both mine, d'ye think?

Sir GEORGE.

Own but one of them.

GARDINER.

Ah, but Mrs. Abigal will have me take care of them both---she's always for the Butler---if my poor Master Sir George had been alive, he wou'd have made him go halves with me.

Sir GEORGE.

What, was Sir George a kind master?

GARDINER.

Was he! ay, my fellow-servants will bear me witness.

Sir GEORGE.

Did ye love Sir George?

BUTLER.

Every body lov'd him----

COACHMAN.

There was not a dry eye in the Parish at the news of his death----

GARDINER.

He was the best neighbour----

BUTLER.

The kindest husband----

COACHMAN.

The truest friend to the poor ---

BUTLER.

My good Lady took on mightily, we all thought it wou'd have been the death of her---

Sir GEORGE.

I protest these fellows melt me! I think the time long till I am their master again, that I may be kind to them. [Aside.

Enter

Enter VELLUM.

VELLUM.

Have you provided the Doctor ev'ry thing he has occaſion for? if ſo--- you may depart. [Exeunt Servants.

Sir GEORGE.

I can as yet ſee no hurt in my wife's behaviour; but ſtill have ſome certain pangs and doubts, that are natural to the heart of a fond Man. I muſt take the advantage of my diſguiſe to be thoroughly ſatisfied. It wou'd neither be for her happineſs, nor mine, to make my ſelf known to her 'till I am ſo [Aſide.]---- Dear Vellum! I am impatient to hear ſome news of my wife, how does ſhe after her fright?

VELLUM.

It is a ſaying ſomewhere in my Lord Coke, that a Widow----

Sir GEORGE.

I ask of my Wife, and thou talk'ſt to me of my Lord Coke---- pr'ythee tell me how ſhe does, for I am in pain for her.

VELLUM.

She is pretty well recover'd, Mrs. Abigal has put her in good heart; and I have given her great hopes from your skill.

Sir GEORGE.

That I think cannot fail, ſince thou haſt got this ſecret out of Abigal. But I could not have thought my friend Fantome would have ſerved me thus----

VELLUM.

You will ſtill fancy you are a living Man----

Sir GEORGE.

That he ſhou'd endeavour to enſnare my wife----

VELLUM.

You have no right in her, after your demiſe: Death extinguiſhes

extinguiſhes all property,----Quoad hanc---- it is a maxim in the law.

Sir GEORGE.

A pox on your learning! well, but what is become of Tinſel?

VELLUM.

He ruſh'd out of the houſe, call'd for his horſe, clap'd ſpurs to his ſides, and was out of ſight in leſs time than I--- can --tell--- ten.

Sir GEORGE.

This is whimſical enough! my wife will have a quick ſucceſſion of lovers, in one day---- Fantome has driven out Tinſel, and I ſhall drive out Fantome.

VELLUM.

Ev'n as one wedge driveth out another--- he, he, he! you muſt pardon me for being jocular.

Sir GEORGE.

Was there ever ſuch a provoking blockhead! but he means me well. [Aſide.] Well! I muſt have ſatisfaction of this traitor Fantome; and cannot take a more proper one, than by turning him out of my houſe, in a manner that ſhall throw ſhame upon him, and make him ridiculous as long as he lives.---- You muſt remember, Vellum, you have abundance of buſineſs upon your hands, and I have but juſt time to tell it you over; all I require of you is diſpatch, therefore hear me.

VELLUM.

There is nothing more requiſite in buſineſs than diſpatch----

Sir GEORGE.

Then hear me.

VELLUM.

It is indeed the life of buſineſs----

Sir GEORGE.

Hear me then, I ſay.

VELLUM.

And as one has rightly obſerved, the benefit that attends it is four-fold. Firſt----

Sir GEORGE.

There is no bearing this! thou art a going to deſcribe diſpatch, when thou ſhouldſt be practiſing it.

VELLUM.

But your Ho--nour will not give me the hearing---

Sir GEORGE.

Thou wilt not give me the hearing---- [Angrily.

VELLUM.

I am ſtill.

Sir GEORGE.

In the firſt place, you are to lay my wig, hat, and ſword ready for me in the cloſet, and one of my ſcarlet coats. You know how Abigal has deſcribed the Ghoſt to you.

VELLUM.

It ſhall be done.

Sir GEORGE.

Then you muſt remember, whilſt I am laying this Ghoſt, you are to prepare my wife for the reception of her real husband; tell her the whole ſtory, and do it with all the art you are maſter of, that the ſurprize may not be too great for her.

VELLUM.

It ſhall be done---but ſince her Ho- nour has ſeen this apparition, ſhe deſires to ſee you once more, before you encounter it.

Sir GEORGE.

I ſhall expect her impatiently. For now I can talk to her without being interrupted by that impertinent Rogue Tinſel. I hope thou haſt not told Abigal any thing of the ſecret.

VELLUM.

Mrs. Abigal is a woman; there are many reaſons why

ſhe

ſhe ſhou'd not be acquainted with it: I ſhall only mention ſix----

Sir GEORGE.

Huſh, here ſhe comes! oh my heart!

Enter LADY and ABIGAL.

Sir GEORGE.

[Aſide, while Vellum talks in dumb ſhow to Lady.] O that lov'd woman! how I long to take her in my arms! if I find I am ſtill dear to her memory, it will be a return to life indeed! But I muſt take care of indulging this tenderneſs, and put on a behaviour more ſuitable to my preſent character.

[Walks at a diſtance in a penſive poſture, waving his wand.

LADY [to Vellum.]

This is ſurprizing indeed! ſo all the ſervants tell me; they ſay he knows every thing that has happen'd in the family.

ABIGAL [Aſide.]

A parcel of credulous fools! they firſt tell him their ſecrets, and then wonder how he comes to know them.

[Exit Vellum, exchanging fond looks with Abigal.

LADY.

Learned Sir, may I have ſome converſation with you, before you begin your ceremonies?

Sir GEORGE.

Speak! but hold---- firſt let me feel your pulſe.

LADY.

What can you learn from that?

Sir GEORGE.

I have already learn'd a ſecret from it, that will aſtoniſh you.

LADY.

Pray, what is it?

Sir GEORGE.

You will have a husband within this half hour.

ABIGAL [Aside.]

I'm glad to hear that----he muſt mean Mr. Fantome; I begin to think there's a good deal of truth in his art.

LADY.

Alas! I fear you mean I ſhall ſee Sir George's apparition a ſecond time.

Sir GEORGE.

Have courage, you ſhall ſee the apparition no more. The husband I mention ſhall be as much alive as I am.

ABIGAL.

Mr. Fantome to be ſure. [Aside.

LADY.

Impoſſible! I lov'd my firſt too well.

Sir GEORGE.

You cou'd not love the firſt better than you will love the ſecond.

ABIGAL [Aside.

I'll be hang'd if my dear Steward has not inſtructed him.; he means Mr. Fantome to be ſure; the thouſand pound is our own!

LADY.

Alas! you did not know Sir George.

Sir GEORGE.

As well as I do my ſelf---I ſaw him with you in the red damask room, when he firſt made love to you; your mother left you together, under pretence of receiving a viſit from Mrs. Hawthorn, on her return from London.

LADY.

This is aſtoniſhing!

Sir GEORGE.

You were a great admirer of a ſingle life for the firſt half hour; your refuſals then grew ſtill fainter and fainter. With what ecſtaſy did Sir George kiſs your hand, when you told him you ſhou'd always follow the advice of your Mamma!

LADY.

LADY.

Every circumſtance to a tittle!

Sir GEORGE.

Then, Lady! the wedding night! I ſaw you in your white ſattin night-gown? you wou'd not come out of your dreſſing-room, 'till Sir George took you out by force. He drew you gently by the hand---you ſtruggled---- but he was too ſtrong for you----you bluſh'd, he----

LADY.

Oh! ſtop there! go no farther!---- He knows every thing. [Aſide.

ABIGAL.

Truly, Mr. Conjurer, I believe you have been a wag in your youth.

Sir GEORGE.

Mrs. Abigal, you know what your good word coſt Sir George, a purſe of broad pieces, Mrs. Abigal----

ABIGAL.

The Devil's in him. [Aſide.] Pray, Sir, ſince you have told ſo far, you ſhould tell my Lady that I refus'd to take them.

Sir GEORGE.

'Tis true, Child, he was forc'd to thruſt them into your boſom.

ABIGAL.

This Rogue will mention the thouſand pound, if I don't take care. [Aſide.] Pray, Sir, tho' you are a Conjurer, methinks you need not be a Blab----

LADY.

Sir, ſince I have now no reaſon to doubt of your art, I muſt beſeech you to treat this Apparition gently---- it has the reſemblance of my deceas'd husband; if there be any undiſcover'd ſecret, any thing that troubles his reſt, learn it of him.

Sir

Sir GEORGE.

I muſt to that end be ſincerely informed by you, whether your heart be engaged to another; have not you receiv'd the Addreſſes of many lovers ſince his death?

LADY.

I have been oblig'd to receive more viſits, than have been agreeable.

Sir GEORGE.

Was not Tinſel welcome?---I'm afraid to hear an anſwer to my own queſtion. [Aſide.

LADY.

He was well recommended.

Sir GEORGE.

Racks! [Aſide.

LADY.

Of a good family.

Sir GEORGE.

Tortures! [Aſide.

LADY.

Heir to a conſiderable Eſtate!

Sir GEORGE.

Death! [Aſide.] And you ſtill love him?---I'm diſtracted! [Aſide.

LADY.

No, I deſpiſe him. I found he had a deſign upon my fortune, was baſe, profligate, cowardly, and ev'ry thing that con'd be expected from a Man of the vileſt principles!---

Sir GEORGE.

I'm recover'd. [Aſide.

ABIGAL.

Oh, Madam, had you ſeen how like a ſcoundrel he look'd when he left your Ladyſhip in a ſwoon. Where have you left my Lady? ſays I. In an Elbow-chair, Child, ſays he: And where are you going? ſays I. To town

town, Child, ſays he: For to tell thee truly, Child, ſays he, I don't care for living under the ſame roof with the Devil, ſays he.

Sir GEORGE.

Well, Lady, I ſee nothing in all this that may hinder Sir George's Spirit from being at reſt.

LADY.

If he knows any thing of what paſſes in my heart, he cannot but be ſatisfy'd of that fondneſs which I bear to his memory. My ſorrow for him is always freſh when I think of him. He was the kindeſt, trueſt, tendereſt---Tears will not let me go on---

Sir GEORGE.

This quite o'erpowers me--- I ſhall diſcover my ſelf before my time. [Aſide.]--- Madam, you may now retire and leave me to my ſelf.

LADY.

Succeſs attend you!

ABIGAL.

I wiſh Mr. Fantome gets well off from this old Don--- I know he'll be with him immediately.

[Exeunt Lady and Abigal.

Sir GEORGE ſolus.

Sir GEORGE.

My heart is now at eaſe, ſhe is the ſame dear woman I left her---- now for my revenge upon Fantome.---- I ſhall cut the ceremonies ſhort---- a few words will do his buſineſs---- now let me ſeat my ſelf in form---- a good eaſy chair for a Conjurer this!--- now for a few mathematical ſcratches--- a good lucky ſcrawl, that---- faith I think it looks very Aſtrological--- theſe two or three magical Pot-hooks about it, make it a compleat Conjurer's ſcheme. [Drum beats.] Ha, ha, ha, Sir, are you

you there? Enter, Drummer. Now I muſt pore upon my Paper.

Enter FANTOME, beating his Drum.

Sir GEORGE.

Pr'ythee don't make a noiſe, I'm buſy. [Fantome beats. A pretty march! pr'ythee beat that over again.

[He beats and advances.

Sir GEORGE. [Riſing.]

Ha! you're very perfect in the ſtep of a Ghoſt. You ſtalk it majeſtically. [Fantome advances.

How the Rogue ſtares! he acts it to admiration! I'll be hang'd if he has not been practiſing this half hour in Mrs. Abigal's wardrobe.

[Fantome ſtarts, gives a rap upon his Drum.

Pr'ythee don't play the fool! [Fantome beats.

Nay, nay, enough of this, good Mr. Fantome.

FANTOME [Aſide.]

Death! I'm diſcover'd. This Jade Abigal has betray'd me.

Sir GEORGE.

Mr. Fantome, upon the word of an Aſtrologer, your thouſand pound bribe will never gain my Lady Truman.

FANTOME.

'Tis plain, ſhe has told him all. [Aſide.

Sir GEORGE.

Let me adviſe you to make off as faſt as you can, or I plainly perceive by my art, Mr. Ghoſt will have his bones broke.

FANTOME [to Sir George.

Lookye, old Gentleman, I perceive you have learnt this ſecret from Mrs. Abigal.

Sir GEORGE.

I have learn'd it from my art.

FANTOME.

Thy art! pr'ythee no more of that. Look ye, I know you are a cheat as much as I am. And if thou lt keep my counsel, I'll give thee ten broad pieces ——

Sir GEORGE.

I am not mercenary! young Man, I scorn thy Gold.

FANTOME.

I'll make them up twenty ——

Sir GEORGE.

Avaunt! and that quickly, or I ll raise such an Apparition, as shall ——

FANTOME.

An Apparition, old Gentleman! you mistake your Man, I am not to be frighted with bugbears. ——

Sir GEORGE.

Let me retire but for a few moments, and I will give thee such a proof of my art ——

FANTOME.

Why, if thou hast any Hocus pocus Tricks to play, why canst not do them here?

Sir GEORGE.

The raising of a Spirit, requires certain secret mysteries to be performed, and words to be muttered in private ——

FANTOME.

Well, if I see through your trick, you will promise to be my friend?

Sir GEORGE.

I will —— attend and tremble. [Exit.

FANTOME solus.

FANTOME.

A very solemn old Ass! but I smoak him, ----he has a mind to raise his price upon me. I could not think this slut wou'd have us'd me thus---I begin to grow horribly tir'd of my Drum, I wiſh I was well rid of it. However I have got this by it, that it has driven off Tinſel for good and all; I ſhan't have the mortification to ſee my miſtreſs carry'd off by ſuch a Rival. Well, whatever happens, I muſt ſtop this old fellow's mouth, I muſt not be ſparing in huſh-money. But here he comes.

Enter Sir GEORGE in his own habit.

FANTOME.

Ha! what's that! Sir George Trumau! This can be no counterfeit. His dreſs! his ſhape! his face! the very wound of which he dy'd! nay, then 'tis 'time to decamp! [Runs off.

Sir GEORGE.

Ha, ha, ha! Fare you well, good Sir George —— the Enemy has left me maſter of the field: here are the marks of my victory. This Drum will I hang up in my great hall as the trophy of the day.

Enter ABIGAL.

Sir George ſtands with his hand before his face in a muſing poſture.

ABIGAL.

Yonder he is. O' my conſcience he has driven off the Conjurer. Mr. Fantome, Mr. Fantome! I give you joy, I give you joy. What do you think of your thouſand pounds now? Why does not the Man ſpeak?

[Pulls him by the ſleeve.

Sir GEORGE.

Ha! [Taking his Hand from his face.

ABIGAL.

Oh! 'tis my Maſter! [Shrieks.

[Running away he catches her.

Sir

Sir GEORGE.

Good Mrs. Abigal not ſo faſt.

ABIGAL.

Are you alive, Sir?---He has given my ſhoulder ſuch a curſed tweak! they muſt be real fingers. I feel 'em I'm ſure.

Sir GEORGE

What do'ſt think?

ABIGAL.

Think, Sir? Think? Troth I don't know what to think. Pray, Sir, how----

Sir GEORGE.

No queſtions, good Abigal. Thy curioſity ſhall be ſatisfied in due time. Where's your Lady?

ABIGAL.

Oh, I'm ſo frighted---and ſo glad!----

Sir GEORGE.

Where's your Lady, I ask you---

ABIGAL.

Marry I don't know where I am my ſelf---I can't forbear weeping for joy-----

Sir GEORGE.

Your Lady! I ſay your Lady! I muſt bring you to your ſelf with one pinch more----

ABIGAL.

Oh! ſhe has been talking a good while with the Steward.

Sir GEORGE.

Then he has open'd the whole ſtory to her, I'm glad he has prepar'd her. Oh! here ſhe comes.

Enter LADY follow'd by VELLUM.

LADY.

Where is he? let me fly into his arms! My life! my ſoul! my husband!

Sir GEORGE.

Oh! let me catch thee to my heart, dearest of women!

LADY.

Are you then still alive, and are you here! I can scarce believe my senses! now am I happy indeed!

Sir GEORGE.

My heart is too full to answer thee.

LADY.

How could you be so cruel to defer giving me that joy which you knew I must receive from your presence? You have robb'd my life of some hours of happiness that ought to have been in it.

Sir GEORGE.

It was to make our happiness the more sincere and unmixt. There will be now no doubts to dash it. What has been the affliction of our lives, has given a variety to them, and will hereafter supply us with a thousand materials to talk of.

LADY.

I am now satisfy'd that it is not in the power of absence to lessen your love towards me.

Sir GEORGE.

And I am satisfy'd that it is not in the power of death to destroy that love which makes me the happiest of Men.

LADY.

Was ever woman so blest! to find again the darling of her Soul, when she thought him lost for ever! to enter into a kind of second marriage with the only Man whom she was ever capable of loving!

Sir GEORGE.

May it be as happy as our first, I desire no more! Believe me, my Dear, I want words to express those transports of joy and tenderness which are every moment rising in my heart whilst I speak to thee.

Enter

Enter SERVANTS.

BUTLER.

Juſt as the Steward told us, Lads! Look you there, if he ben't with my Lady already.

GARDINER.

He! he! he! what a joyful night will this be for Madam!

COACHMAN.

As I was coming in at the gate, a ſtrange gentleman whisk'd by me; but he took to his heels, and made away to the George. If I did not ſee maſter before, I ſhou'd have ſworn it had been his Honour.

GARDINER.

Ha'ſt given orders for the bells to be ſet a ringing?

COACHMAN.

Never trouble thy head about that, 'tis done.

Sir GEORGE [to Lady.]

My Dear, I long as much to tell you my whole ſtory, as you do to hear it. In the mean while, I am to look upon this as my wedding-day. I'll have nothing but the voice of mirth and feaſting in my houſe. My poor neighbours and my ſervants ſhall rejoice with me. My hall ſhall be free to every one, and let my cellars be thrown open.

BUTLER.

Ah! bleſs your Honour, may you never die again!

COACHMAN.

The ſame good man that ever he was!

GARDINER.

Whurra!

Sir GEORGE.

Vellum, thou haſt done me much ſervice to-day. I know thou lov'ſt Abigal, but ſhe's diſappointed in a fortune. I'll make it up to both of you. I'll give thee a thouſand pound with her. It is not fit there ſhou'd be one ſad heart in my houſe to-night.

LADY.

What you do for Abigal, I know is meant as a compliment to me. This is a new inſtance of your love.

ABIGAL.

Mr. Vellum, you are a well-ſpoken man: Pray do you thank my Maſter and my Lady.

Sir GEORGE.

Vellum, I hope you are not diſpleas'd with the Gift I make.

VELLUM.

The gift is twofold. I receive from you
The virtuous partner, and a portion too;
For which, in humble wiſe, I thank the Donors:
And ſo we bid good-night to both your Ho--nours.

THE

EPILOGUE,

Spoken by Mrs. Oldfield.

TO-night the Poet's advocate I ſtand,
And he deſerves the favour at my hand,
Who in my equipage their cauſe debating
Has plac'd two Lovers, and a third in waiting;
If both the firſt ſhou'd from their duty ſwerve,
There's one behind the wainſcote in reſerve.
In his next Play, if I wou'd take this trouble,
He promis'd me to make the number double:
In troth 'twas ſpoke like an obliging creature,
For tho' 'tis ſimple, yet it ſhews good-nature.

My help thus ask'd, I cou'd not chuſe but grant it,
And really I thought the Play wou'd want it,
Void as it is of all the uſual arts
To warm your fancies, and to ſteal your hearts:
No Court-Intrigue, nor City Cuckoldom,
No ſong, no dance, no muſick——but a Drum——
No ſmutty thought in doubtful phraſe expreſt;
And, Gentlemen, if ſo, pray where's the jeſt?

EPILOGUE.

When we wou'd raiſe your mirth, you hardly know
Whether in ſtrictneſs you ſhou'd laugh or no,
But turn upon the Ladies in the pit,
And if they redden, you are ſure 'tis wit.

Protect him then, ye Fair-ones; for the Fair
Of all conditions are his equal care.
He draws a Widow, who, of blameleſs carriage,
True to her jointure, hates a ſecond marriage;
And to improve a virtuous wife's delights,
Out of one Man contrives two wedding-nights.
Nay, to oblige the ſex in every ſtate,
A nymph of five and forty finds her mate.

Too long has Marriage, in this taſteleſs age,
With ill-bred raillery ſupply'd the ſtage;
No little Scribler is of wit ſo bare,
But has his fling at the poor wedded pair.
Our Author deals not in conceits ſo ſtale:
For ſhou'd th' examples of his Play prevail,
No man need bluſh, tho' true to marriage-vows,
Nor be a jeſt tho' he ſhou'd love his ſpouſe.
Thus has he done you Britiſh conſorts right,
Whoſe Husbands, ſhou'd they pry like mine to night,
Wou'd never find you in your conduct ſlipping,
Tho' they turn'd Conjurers to take you tripping.

Count TARIFF.

THE LATE

Tryal and Conviction

Count TARIFF.

THE whole Nation is at preſent very inquiſitive after the proceedings in the cauſe of Goodman Fact, Plaintiff, and Count Tariff, Defendant; as it was tried on the 18th of June, in the thirteenth year of her Majeſty's reign, and in the year of the Lord 1713. I ſhall therefore give my countrymen a ſhort and faithful account of that whole matter. And in order to it, muſt in the firſt place premiſe ſome particulars relating to the perſon and character of the ſaid Plaintiff Goodman Fact.

Goodman Fact is allowed by every body to be a plain-ſpoken perſon, and a man of very few words. Tropes and figures are his Averſion. He affirms affirms every thing roundly, without any art, rhetorick, or circumlocution. He is a declared enemy to all kinds of ceremony and complaiſance. He flatters no body. Yet ſo great is his natural eloquence, that he cuts down the fineſt orator, and deſtroys the beſt contrived argument, as ſoon as ever he gets himſelf to be heard. He never applies to the paſſions or prejudices of his audience: when they liſten with attention and honeſt minds, he never fails of carrying his point. He appeared in a ſuit of Engliſh broad-cloth, very plain, but rich. Every thing he wore was ſubſtantial, honeſt, homeſpun ware. His cane indeed came from the Eaſt-Indies, and two or three little ſuperfluities from Turkey, and other parts. It is ſaid that he encouraged himſelf with a bottle of neat Port, before he appeared at the tryal. He was huzzaed into the Court by ſeveral thouſands of Weavers, Clothiers, Fullers, Dyers, Packers, Calenders, Setters, Silk-men, Spinners, Dreſſers, Whitſters, Winders, Mercers, Throwſters, Sugar-bakers, Diſtillers, Drapers, Hoſiers, Planters, Merchants and Fiſhermen; who all unanimouſly declared that they could not live above two months longer, if their friend Fact did not gain his cauſe.

Every body was over-joyed to hear that the good man was come to town. He no ſooner made his appearance in Court, but ſeveral of his friends fell a weeping at the ſight of him: for indeed he had not been ſeen there three years before.

The charge he exhibited againſt Count Tariff was drawn up in the following articles.

I. That the ſaid Count had given in falſe and fraudulent reports in the name of the Plaintiff.

II. That

II. That the ſaid Count had tampered with the ſaid Plaintiff, and made uſe of many indirect methods to bring him over to his party.

III. That the ſaid Count had wilfully and knowingly traduced the ſaid Plaintiff, having miſrepreſented him in many cunningly deviſed ſpeeches, as a perſon in the French intereſt.

IV. That the ſaid Count had averred in the preſence of above five hundred perſons, that he had heard the Plaintiff ſpeak in derogation of the Portugueſe, Spaniards, Italians, Hollanders, and others; who were the perſons whom the ſaid Plaintiff had always favoured in his diſcourſe, and whom he ſhould always continue to favour.

V. That the ſaid Count had given a very diſadvantageous relation of the three great farms, which had long flouriſhed under the care and ſuperintendency of the Plaintiff.

VI. That he would have obliged the owners of the ſaid farms to buy up many commodities which grew upon their own lands. That he would have taken away the labour from the tenants, and put it into the hands of ſtrangers. That he would have leſſened and deſtroyed the produce of the ſaid farms.

That by theſe and many other wicked devices he would have ſtarved many honeſt day-labourers; have impoveriſhed the owner, and have filled his farm with beggars, &c.

VII. That the ſaid Count had either ſunk or miſlaid ſeveral books, papers, and receipts, by which the Plaintiff might ſooner have found means to vindicate himſelf from ſuch calumnies, aſperſions, and miſrepreſentations.

In all theſe particulars Goodman Fact was very ſhort but pithy: for, as I ſaid before, he was a plain home-ſpun man. His yea was yea, and his his nay, nay. He had further ſo much of the Quaker in him, that he never ſwore, but his affirmation was as valid as another's oath.

It was obſerved that Count Tariff endeavoured to brow-beat the Plaintiff all the while he was ſpeaking: but though he was not ſo impudent as the Count, he was every whit as ſturdy; and when it came to the Count's turn to ſpeak, old Fact ſo ſtared him in the face, after his plain, downright way, that the Count was very often ſtruck dumb, and forced to hold his tongue in the middle of his diſcourſe.

More witneſſes appear'd on this occaſion to atteſt Goodman Fact's veracity than ever were ſeen in a court of juſtice. His cauſe was pleaded by the ableſt men in the kingdom; among whom was a Gentleman of Suffolk who did him ſignal Service.

Count Tariff appeared juſt the reverſe of Goodman Fact. He was dreſſed in a fine brocade waiſtcoat, curiouſly embroidered with Flower-deluces. He wore alſo a broad-brimmed hat, a ſhoulder-knot, and a pair of ſilver-clocked ſtockins. His ſpeeches were accompanied with much geſture and grimace. He abounded in empty phraſes, ſuperficial flouriſhes, violent aſſertions, and feeble proofs. To be brief, he had all the French aſſurance, cunning, and volubility of tongue; and would moſt certainly have carried his cauſe, had he dealt with any one antagoniſt in the world beſides Goodman Fact.

The Count being call'd upon to anſwer to the charge which had been made againſt him, did it after a manner peculiar to the family of the Tariffs, viz. by railing and calling names.

He

He in the firſt place accuſed his adverſary of Scandalum magnatum, and of ſpeaking againſt his ſuperiors with ſaucineſs and contempt. As the plain good man was not of a make to have any friends at Court, he was a little ſtartled at this accuſation, till at length he made it appear, that it was impoſſible for any of his family to be either ſaucy or cringing; for that their character was, above all others in the world, to do what was required of them by the Court, that is, TO SPEAK THE TRUTH AND NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH.

The Count in the next place aſſured the Court, that his antagoniſt had taken upon him a wrong name, having curtailed it of two or three letters; for that in reality his name was not FACT but FACTION. The Count was ſo pleaſed with this conceit, that for an hour together he repeated it in every ſentence; calling his antagoniſt's aſſertions, the reports of faction; his friends, the ſons of faction; the teſtimonies of witneſſes, the dictates of faction: nay, with ſuch a degree of impudence did he puſh this matter, that when he heard the cries of above a million of people begging for their bread, he termed the prayers and importunities of ſuch a ſtarving multitude, the CLAMOURS OF FACTION.

As ſoon as the Count was driven out of this device, he affirmed roundly in the Court that FACT was not an Engliſhman by birth, but that he was of Dutch extraction and born in Holland. In conſequence of this aſſertion, he began to rally the poor Plaintiff, under the title of MYNHEER VAN FACT; which took pretty well with the ſimpletons of his party, but the men of ſenſe did not think the jeſt worth all their lands and tenements.

When

When the Count had finiſhed his ſpeech, he deſired leave to call in his witneſſes, which was granted: when immediately there came to the bar a man with a hat drawn over his eyes in ſuch a manner that it was impoſſible to ſee his face. He ſpoke in the ſpirit, nay in the very language of the Count, repeated his arguments, and confirmed his aſſertions. Being asked his name; he ſaid the world called him MERCATOR; but as for his true name, his age, his lineage, his religion, his place of abode, they were particulars, which for certain reaſons he was obliged to conceal. The Court found him ſuch a falſe, ſhuffling, prevaricating raſcal, that they ſet him aſide as a perſon unqualified to give his teſtimony in a Court of Juſtice; adviſing him at the ſame time, as he tendered his ears, to forbear uttering ſuch notorious falſhoods as he had then publiſhed. The witneſs however perſiſted in his contumacy, telling them he was very ſorry to find, that notwithſtanding what he had ſaid they were reſolved to be as arrant fools as all their forefathers had been for a hundred years before them.

There came up another witneſs, who ſpoke much to the reputation of Count Tariff. This was a tall, black, bluſtering perſon, dreſs'd in a Spaniſh habit, with a plume of feathers on his head, a Golillio about his neck, and a long Toledo ſticking out by his ſide; his garments were ſo covered with tinſel and ſpangles, that at a diſtance he ſeemed to be made up of ſilver and gold. He called himſelf DON ASSIENTO, and mentioned ſeveral nations that had ſought his friendſhip; but declared that he had been gained over by the Count; and that he was come into theſe parts to enrich every one that heard

heard him. The Court was at firſt very well pleaſed with his figure, and the promiſes he made them; but upon examination found him a true Spaniard: nothing but ſhow and beggary. For it was fully proved, that notwithſtanding the boaſts and appearance which he made, he was not worth a groat: nay, that upon caſting up his annual expences, with the debts and incumbrances which lay upon his eſtate, he was worſe than nothing.

There appeared another witneſs in favour of the Count, who ſpoke with ſo much violence and warmth, that the Court began to liſten to him very attentively; till upon hearing his name they found he was a notorious Knight of the poſt, being kept in pay, to give his teſtimony on all occaſions where it was wanted. This was the EXAMINER; a perſon who had abuſed almoſt every man in England, that deſerved well of his country. He called Goodman Fact a lyar, a ſeditious perſon, a traytor, and a rebel; and ſo much incenſed the honeſt man, that he would certainly have knocked him down if he could have come at him. It was allowed by every body, that ſo foul-mouthed a witneſs never appeared in any cauſe. Seeing ſeveral perſons of great eminence, who had maintained the cauſe of Goodman Fact, he called them ideots, blockheads, villains, knaves, infidels, atheiſts, apoſtates, fiends and devils; never did man ſhow ſo much eloquence in ribaldry. The Court was at length ſo juſtly provoked with this fellow's behaviour, who ſpared no age, nor ſex, nor profeſſion, which had ſhown any friendſhip or inclination for the Plaintiff, that ſeveral began to whiſper to one another, it was high time to bring him to puniſhment. But the witneſs overhearing the word Pillory repeated twice or thrice, ſlunk away privately, and hid himſelf among the people.

After a full hearing on both ſides, Count Tariff was caſt, and Goodman Fact got his cauſe; but the Court ſitting late, did not think it fit at that time to give him coſts, or indeed to enter into that matter. The honeſt man immediately retir'd, after having aſſured his friends, that at any time when the Count ſhould appear on the like occaſion, he would undertake their defence, and come to their aſſiſtance, if they would be at the pains to find him out.

It is incredible, how general a joy Goodman Fact's ſucceſs created in the city of London; there was nothing to be ſeen or heard the next day, but ſhaking of hands, congratulations, reflexions on the danger they had eſcaped; and gratitude to thoſe who had delivered them from it.

The night concluded with balls, bonfires, ringing of bells, and the like publick demonſtrations of joy.

Nescia mens hominum fati sortisque futuræ,
Et servare modum, rebus sublata secundis!

Intactum Pallanta, et cum spolia ista diemque
Oderit———

THE design of this work is to censure the writings of others, and to give all persons a rehearing, who have suffered under any unjust sentence of the Examiner. As that Author has hitherto proceeded, his paper would have been more properly entitled the Executioner: at least his examination is like that which is made by the rack and wheel. I have always admired a Critic that has discovered the beauties of an author, and never knew one who made it his business to lash the faults of other writers, that was not guilty of greater himself;

as

as the hangman is generally a worſe malefactor, than the criminal that ſuffers by his hand. To prove what I ſay, there needs no more than to read the annotations which this Author has made upon Dr. Garth's Poem, with the preface in the front, and a riddle at the end of them: To begin with the firſt: Did ever an advocate for a party open with ſuch an unfortunate aſſertion? The collective body of the Whigs have already engroſſed our riches: That is, in plain Engliſh, the Whigs are poſſeſſed of all the riches in the nation. Is not this giving up all he has been contending for theſe ſix weeks? Is there any thing more reaſonable, than that thoſe who have all the riches of the nation in their poſſeſſion, or if he likes his own phraſe better, as indeed I think it is ſtronger, that thoſe who have already engroſſed our riches, ſhould have the management of our publick Treaſure, and the direction of our fleets and armies? But let us proceed: Their Repreſentative the Kit-Cat have pretended to make a Monopoly of our ſenſe. Well, but what does all this end in? If the author means any thing it is this, That to prevent ſuch a Monopoly of ſenſe, he is reſolved to deal in it himſelf by retail, and ſell a pennyworth of it every week. In what follows, there is ſuch a ſhocking familiarity both in his railleries and civilities, that one cannot long be in doubt who is the Author. The remaining part of the preface has ſo much of the pedant, and ſo little of the converſation of men in it, that I ſhall paſs it over, and haſten to the riddles, which are as follows.

The

The RIDDLE.

SPHINX was a monſter, that would eat
Whatever ſtranger ſhe could get;
Unleſs his ready wit diſclos'd
The ſubtle riddles ſhe propos'd.
Oedipus was reſolv'd to go,
And try what ſtrength of parts could do:
Says Sphinx, On this depends your fate;
Tell me what animal is that,
Which has four feet at morning bright?
Has two at noon, and three at night?
'Tis man, ſaid he, who weak by nature,
At firſt creeps, like his fellow-creature,
Upon all four: As years accrue,
With ſturdy ſteps he walks on two:
In age, at length, grown weak and ſick,
For his third leg adopts the ſtick.
Now in your turn, 'tis juſt, methinks,
You ſhould reſolve me, Madam Sphinx,
What ſtranger creature yet is he,
Who has four legs, then two, then three;
Then loſes one, then gets two more,
And runs away at laſt on four.

The firſt part of this little myſtical Poem is an old riddle, which we could have told the meaning of, had not the Author given himſelf the trouble of explaining it: but as for the expoſition of the ſecond, he leaves us altogether in the dark. The riddle runs thus: What creature is it that walks upon four legs in the morning, two legs at noon, and three legs at night? This he ſolves, as our forefathers have done for theſe two thouſand years;

yeers; and not according to Rabelais, who gives another reaſon why a man is ſaid to be a creature with three legs at night. Then follows the ſecond riddle: What creature, ſays he, is it that firſt uſes four legs, then two legs, then three legs; then loſes one leg, then gets two legs, and at laſt runs away upon four legs? Were I diſpoſed to be ſplenetick, I ſhould ask if there was any thing in the new garland of riddles ſo wild, ſo childiſh, or ſo flat: But though I dare not go ſo far as that, I ſhall take upon me to ſay, that the Author has ſtollen his hint out of the garland, from a riddle which I was better acquainted with than the Nile when I was but twelve years old. It runs thus, Riddle my riddle my ree, what is this? Two legs ſat upon three legs, and held one leg in her hand; in came four legs, and ſnatch'd away one leg; up ſtarted two legs, and flung three legs at four legs, and brought one leg back again. This Enigma, joined with the fore-going two, rings all the changes that can be made upon four legs. That I may deal more ingenuouſly with my Reader than the above-mentioned Enigmatiſt has done, I ſhall preſent him with a key to my riddle; which upon application he will find exactly fitted to all the words of it: one leg is a leg of mutton, two legs is a ſervant-maid, three legs is a joint-ſtool, which in the Sphinx's country was called a tripode; as four legs is a dog, who in all nations and ages has been reckoned a quadruped. We have now the expoſition of our firſt and third riddles upon legs; let us here, if you pleaſe, endeavour to find out the meaning of our ſecond, which is thus in the Author's words:

What

What ſtranger creature yet is he,
That has four legs, then two, then three;
Then loſes one, then gets two more,
And runs away at laſt on four?

This riddle, as the Poet tells us, was propoſed by Oedipus to the Sphinx, after he had given his ſolution to that which the Sphinx had propoſed to him. This Oedipus, you muſt underſtand, though the people did not believe it, was ſon to a King of Thebes, and bore a particular grudge to the Tr---r of that Kingdom; which made him ſo bitter upon H. L. in this Enigma.

What ſtranger creature yet is he,
That has four legs, then two, then three?

By which he intimates, that this great man at Thebes being weak by nature, as he admirably expreſſes it, could not walk as ſoon as he was born, but, like other children, fell upon all four when he attempted it; that he afterwards went upon two legs, like other men; and that in his more advanced age, he got a white ſtaff in Queen Jocaſta's court, which the Author calls his third leg. Now it ſo happened that the Treaſurer fell, and by that means broke his third leg, which is intimated by the next words, Then loſes one---- Thus far I think we have travelled through the riddle with good ſucceſs.

What ſtranger creature yet is he
That has four legs, then two, then three?
Then loſes one----

But now comes the difficulty that has puzzled the whole town, and which I muſt confeſs has kept me awake for theſe three nights;

------ Then gets two more,
And runs away at laſt on four.

I at laſt thought the treaſurer of Thebes might have walked upon crutches, and ſo ran away on four legs, viz. two natural and two artificial. But this I have no authority for; and therefore upon mature conſideration do find that the words (Then gets two more) are only Greek expletives, introduced to make up the verſe, and to ſignify nothing; and that runs, in the next line, ſhould be rides. I ſhall therefore reſtore the true ancient reading of this riddle, after which it will be able to explain it ſelf.

Oedipus ſpeaks:
Now in your turn, 'tis juſt methinks,
You ſhould reſolve me, Madam Sphinx,
What ſtranger creature yet is he,
Who has four legs, then two, then three;
Then loſes one, then gains two more,
And rides away at laſt on four?

I muſt now inform the Reader, that Thebes was on the continent, ſo that it was eaſy for a man to ride out of its dominions on horſeback, an advantage that a Britiſh Stateſman would be deprived of. If he would run away, he muſt do it in an open boat; for to ſay of an Engliſhman in this ſenſe, that he runs away on all four, would be as abſurd as to ſay, he clapped ſpurs to his horſe horſe at St. James's gate, and galloped away to the Hague.

Before I take my farewel of this ſubject, I ſhall adviſe the Author for the future to ſpeak his meaning more plainly. I allow he has a happy talent at doggrel, when he writes upon a known ſubject: where he tells us in plain intelligible language, how Syriſca's ladle was loſt in one hole, and Hans Carvel's finger in another, he is very jocular and diverting; but when he wraps a lampoon in a riddle, he muſt conſider that his jeſt is loſt to every one, but the few merry wags that are in the ſecret. This is making darker ſatyrs than ever Perſius did. After this curſory view of the Examiner's performance, let us conſider his remarks upon the Doctor's. That general piece of raillery which he paſſes upon the Doctor's conſidering the Treaſurer in ſeveral different views, is that which might fall upon any Poem in Waller, or any other writer who has diverſity of thoughts and alluſions: and tho' it may appear a pleaſant ridicule to an ignorant Reader, is wholly groundleſs and unjuſt. I do likewiſe diſſent with the Examiner, upon the phraſes of paſſions being poiſed, and of the retrieving merit from dependence, which are very beautiful and poetical. It is the ſame cavilling ſpirit that finds fault with that expreſſion of the pomp of peace among the woes of war, as well as of offering unasked. As for the Nile, how Icarus and Phaeton came to be joined with it, I cannot conceive. I muſt confeſs they have been formerly uſed to repreſent the fate of raſh ambitious men; and I cannot imagine why the Author ſhould deprive us of thoſe particular Similes for the future. The next Criticiſm upon the ſtars, ſeems introduced for no other reaſon but to mention Mr. Bickerſtaff, whom the Author every where endeavours to imitate and abuſe. But I ſhall refer the Examiner to the frog's advice to her little one, that was blowing it ſelf up to the ſize of an Ox:

----- Non ſi te ruperis, inquit,
Par eris.----

The alluſion to the victim may be a Gallimatia in French politicks, but is an apt and noble alluſion to a true Engliſh ſpirit. And as for the Examiner's remarks on the word bleed (though a man wou'd laugh to ſee impotent malice ſo little able to contain it ſelf) one cannot but obſerve in them the temper of the Banditti whom he mentions in the ſame paper, who always murder where they rob. The laſt obſervation is upon the line, Ingratitude's a weed of every clime. Here he is very much out of humour with the Doctor, for having called that the weed, which Dryden only terms the growth, of every Clime. But for God-ſake, why ſo much tenderneſs for ingratitude.

But I ſhall ſay no more. We are now in an age wherein impudent aſſertions muſt paſs for arguments: and I do not queſtion but the ſame, who has endeavoured here to prove that he who wrote the Diſpenſary was no Poet, will very ſuddenly undertake to ſhew, that he who gained the Battle of Blenheim is no General.

Thurſday,

N° 2. Thurſday, September 21.

——— Arcades ambo,
Et cantare pares ———

I Never yet knew an Author that had not his admirers. Bunyan and Quarles have paſſed thro' ſeveral editions, and pleaſe as many Readers, as Dryden and Tillotſon. The Examiner had not written two half ſheets of paper, before he met with one that was aſtoniſhed at the force he was maſter of, and approaches him with awe, when he mentions State-ſubjects, as encroaching on the province that belonged to him, and treating of things that deſerved to paſs under his pen. The ſame humble author tells us, that the Examiner can furniſh mankind with an Antidote to the poyſon that is ſcattered through the nation. This crying up of the Examiner's Antidote, puts me in mind of the firſt appearance that a celebrated French quack made in the ſtreets of Paris. A little boy walked before him, publiſhing, with a ſhrill voice, Mon pere guerit toutes ſortes de maladies, My father cures all ſorts of diſtempers: To which the Doctor, who walked behind him, added in a grave and compoſed manner, L'enfant dit vrai, The child ſays true.

That the Reader may ſee what party the Author of this Letter is of, I ſhall ſhew how he ſpeaks of the French King and the Duke of Anjou, and how of our greateſt Allies, the Emperor of Germany and the States-General. In the mean while the French King has withdrawn his troops from Spain, and has put it out of his power to reſtore that monarchy to us, was he reduced low enough really to deſire to do it. The Duke of Anjou has had leiſure to take off thoſe whom he ſuſpected, to confirm his friends, to regulate his revenues, to increaſe and form his troops, and above all, to rouſe that ſpirit in the Spaniſh nation, which a ſucceſſion of lazy and indolent Princes had lulled aſleep. From hence it appears probable enough, that if the war continue much longer on the preſent foot, inſtead of regaining Spain, we ſhall find the Duke of Anjou in a condition to pay the debt of gratitude, and ſupport the grandfather in his declining years; by whoſe arms, in the days of his infancy, he was upheld. What expreſſions of tenderneſs, duty and ſubmiſſion! The Panegyrick on the Duke of Anjou, is by much the beſt written part of this whole Letter; the Apology for the French King is indeed the ſame which the Poſt-boy has often made, but worded with greater deference and reſpect to that great Prince. There are many ſtrokes of the Author's good-will to our confederates, the Dutch and the Emperor, in ſeveral parts of this notable Epiſtle; I ſhall only quote one of them, alluding to the concern which the Bank, the States-General, and the Emperor, expreſſed for the Miniſtry by their humble applications to Her Majeſty, in theſe words.

Not daunted yet, they reſolve to try a new expedient, and the intereſt of Europe is to be repreſented as inſeparable from that of the Miniſters.

Haud

Haud dubitant equidem implorare quod uſquam eſt;
Flectere ſi nequeunt Superos, Acheronta movebunt.

The members of the Bank, the Dutch, and the Court of Vienna, are called in as confederates to the Miniſtry. This, in the mildeſt Engliſh it will bear, runs thus. They are reſolved to look for help where-ever they can find it; if they cannot have it from heaven, they will go to hell for it; That is, to the members of the Bank, the Dutch, and the Court of Vienna. The French King, the Pope, and the Devil, have been often joined together by a well-meaning Engliſhman; but I am very much ſurprized to ſee the Bank, the Dutch, and the Court of Vienna, in ſuch company. We may ſtill ſee this Gentleman's principles in the accounts which he gives of his own country: ſpeaking of the G----l, the quondam T----r, and the J----to, which every one knows comprehends the Whigs, in their utmoſt extent; he adds, in oppoſition to them, For the Queen and the whole body of the Britiſh nation,-----

Nos Numerus ſumus.

In Engliſh,

We are Cyphers.

How properly the Tories may be called the whole body of the Britiſh nation, I leave to any one's judging: and wonder how an author can be ſo diſreſpectful to Her Majeſty, as to ſeparate Her in ſo ſaucy a manner from that part of her people, who according to the Examiner himſelf, have engroſſed the riches of the nation; and all this to join her, with ſo much impudence, under the common denomination of We; that is, WE Queen and Tories are cyphers. Nos numerus ſumus is a ſcrap of Latin more impudent than Cardinal Woolſey's Ego et Rex meus. We find the ſame particle WE, uſed with great emphaſis and ſignificancy in the eighth page of this Letter; But, nothing deciſive, nothing which had the appearance of earneſt, has been ſo much as attempted, except that wiſe expedition to Thoulon, which WE ſuffered to be defeated before it began. Whoever did, God forgive them: there were indeed ſeveral ſtories of diſcoveries made, by letters and meſſengers that were ſent to France.

Having done with the Author's party and principles, we ſhall now conſider his performance, under the three heads of Wit, Language, and Argument. The firſt laſh of his Satyr falls upon the Cenſor of Great Britain, who, ſays he, reſembles the famous Cenſor of Rome, in nothing but eſpouſing the cauſe of the vanquiſhed. Our Letter-writer here alludes to that known verſe in Lucan, Victrix cauſa Diis placuit, ſed victa Catoni.

The Gods eſpouſed the cauſe of the conquerors, but Cato eſpouſed the cauſe of the vanquiſhed. The misfortune is, that this verſe was not written of Cato the Cenſor, but of Cato of Utica. How Mr. Bickerſtaff, who has written in favour of a party that is not vanquiſhed, reſembles the younger Cato, who was not a Roman Cenſor, I do not well conceive, unleſs it be in ſtruggling for the liberty of his country. To ſay therefore, that the Cenſor of Great-Britain reſembles that famous Cenſor of Rome

Rome in nothing but eſpouſing the cauſe of the vanquiſhed; is juſt the ſame as if one ſhould ſay, in regard to the many obſcure truths and ſecret hiſtories that are brought to light in this Letter, that the Author of theſe new revelations, reſembles the ancient Author of the Revelations in nothing but venturing his head. Beſides that there would be no ground for ſuch a reſemblance, would not a man be laughed at by every common Reader, ſhould he thus miſtake one St. John for another, and apply that to St. John the Evangeliſt which relates to St. John the Baptiſt, who died many years before him?

Another ſmart touch of the Author we meet with in the fifth page, where, without any preparation, he breaks out all on a ſudden into a vein of poetry; and inſtead of writing a letter to the Examiner, gives advice to a painter in theſe ſtrong lines: Paint, Sir, with that force which you are maſter of, the preſent ſtate of the war abroad; and expoſe to the publick view thoſe principles upon which, of late, it has been carried on, ſo different from thoſe upon which it was originally entered into. Collect ſome few of the indignities which have been this year offered to Her Majeſty, and of thoſe unnatural ſtruggles which have betrayed the weakneſs of a ſhattered conſtitution. By the way, a man may be ſaid to paint a battle, or if you pleaſe, a war; but I do not ſee how it is poſſible to paint the preſent ſtate of a war. So a man may be ſaid to deſcribe or to collect accounts of indignities and unnatural ſtruggles; but to collect the things themſelves, is a figure which this Gentleman has introduced into our Engliſh proſe. Well, but what will be the uſe of this picture of a ſtate of the war? and this collection of indignities and ſtruggles? It ſeems the chief deſign of them is to make a dead man bluſh, as we may ſee in thoſe inimitable lines which immediately follow: And when this is done, D----n ſhall bluſh in his grave among the dead, W----le among the living, and even Vol----e ſhall feel ſome remorſe. Was there ever any thing, I will not ſay ſo ſtiff and ſo unnatural, but ſo brutal and ſo ſilly! this is downright hacking and hewing in Satyr. But we ſee a maſterpiece of this kind of writing in the twelfth page; where, without any reſpect to a Dutcheſs of Great-Britain, a Princeſs of the Empire, and one who was a boſom-friend of her Royal Miſtreſs, he calls a great Lady an inſolent woman, the worſt of her ſex, a fury, an executioner of divine vengeance, a plague; and applies to her a line which Virgil writ originally upon Alecto. One would think this foul-mouthed writer muſt have received ſome particular injuries, either from this great Lady or from her husband; and theſe the world ſhall be ſoon acquainted with, by a book which is now in the preſs, entitled, An Eſſay towards proving that gratitude is no virtue. This Author is full of Satyr, and is ſo angry with every one that is pleaſed with the Duke of Marlborough's victories, that he goes out of his way to abuſe one of the Queen's ſinging-men, who it ſeems did his beſt to celebrate a thankſgiving day in an Anthem; as you may ſee in that paſſage: Towns have been taken, and battels have been won; the mob has huzza'd round bonefires, the Stentor of the chapple has ſtrained his throat in the gallery, and the Stentor of S----m has deafned his audience from the pulpit. Thus you ſee how like a true ſon of the High-Church, he falls upon a learned and reverend Prelate, and for no other crime, but for preaching with an audible voice. If a man lifts up his voice like a trumpet to preach ſedition, he is received by ſome men as a Confeſſor; but if he cries aloud, and ſpares not, to animate people with devotion and gratitude, for the greateſt publick bleſſings that ever were beſtowed on a ſinful nation, he is reviled as a Stentor.

I promiſed in the next place to conſider the Language of this excellent Author, who I find takes himſelf for an Orator. In the firſt page he cenſures ſeveral for the poiſon which they profuſely ſcatter through the nation; that is, in plain Engliſh, for ſquandering away their poiſon. In the ſecond he talks of carrying probability through the thread of a fable; and in the third, of laying an odium at a man's door. In the fourth he riſes in his expreſſions; where he ſpeaks of thoſe who would perſuade the people, that the G-----l, the quondam T---r, and the F---to, are the only objects of the confidence of the Allies, and of the fears of the enemies. I would adviſe this Author to try the beauty of this expreſſion. Suppoſe a foreign Miniſter ſhould addreſs Her Majeſty in the following manner, (for certainly it is Her Majeſty only to whom the ſenſe of the compliment ought to be paid) Madam, you are the object of the confidence of the Allies; or, Madam, your Majeſty is the only object of the fears of the enemies. Would a man think that he had learned Engliſh? I would have the Author try, by the ſame rule, ſome of his other phraſes, as Page 7. where he tells us, That the ballance of power in Europe would be ſtill precarious. What would a tradeſman think, if one ſhould tell him in a paſſion, that his ſcales were precarious; and mean by it, that they were not fixed? In the thirteenth page he ſpeaks of certain profligate wretches who having uſurped the Royal Seat, reſolved to venture overturning the chariot of government, rather than to loſe their place in it. A plain-ſpoken man would have left the Chariot out of this ſentence, and ſo have made it good Engliſh. As it is there, it is not only an impropriety of ſpeech, but of metaphor; it being impoſſible for a man to have a place in the Chariot which he drives. I would therefore adviſe this Gentleman, in the next edition of his Letter, to change the Chariot of government into the Chaiſe of government, which will ſound as well, and ſerve his turn much better. I could be longer on the errata of this very ſmall work, but will conclude this head with taking notice of a certain figure which was unknown to the ancients, and in which this Letter-writer very much excels. This is called by ſome an Anti-climax, an inſtance of which we have in the tenth page; where he tells us, that Britain may expect to have this only glory left her, That ſhe has proved a farm to the Bank, a province to Holland, and a jeſt to the whole world. I never met with ſo ſudden a downfal in ſo promiſing a ſentence; a jeſt to the whole world gives ſuch an unexpected turn to this happy period, that I was heartily troubled and ſurprized to meet with it. I do not remember in all my reading, to have obſerved more than two couplets of verſes that have been written in this figure; the firſt are thus quoted by Mr. Dryden.

Not only London ecchoes with thy fame,
But alſo Iſlington has heard the ſame.

The

The other are in French.

Allez vous, luy dit il, ſans bruit chez vos parens,
Ou vous avez laiſſé votre honneur & vos gans.

But we need not go further than the Letter before us for examples of this nature, as we may find in page the eleventh. Mankind remains convinced, that a Queen poſſeſſed of all the virtues requiſite to bleſs a nation, or make a private family happy, ſits on the throne. Is this Panegyrick or Burleſque? To ſee ſo glorious a Queen celebrated in ſuch a manner, gives every good ſubject a ſecret indignation; and looks liker Scarron's character of the great Queen Semiramis, who, ſays that Author, "was the Founder of "Babylon, Conqueror of the Eaſt, and an excellent "Houſewife.

The third ſubject, being the argumentative part of this Letter, I ſhall leave till another occaſion.

——Non defenſoribus iſtis
Tempus eget. —— Virg.

I Was once talking with an old humdrum fellow, and before I had heard his ſtory out, was called away by buſineſs. About three years after I met him again, when he immediately reaſſumed the thread of his ſtory, and began his ſalutation with, but Sir, as I was telling you. The ſame method has been made uſe of by very polite writers; as, in particular, the Author of Don Quixote, who inſerts ſeveral novels in his works, and after a parentheſis of about a dozen leaves, returns again to his ſtory. Hudibras has broke off the Adventure of the Bear and Fiddle. The Tatler has frequently interrupted the courſe of a Lucubration, and taken it up again after a fortnight's reſpite; as the Examiner, who is capable of imitating him in this particular, has likewiſe done.

This may ſerve as an apology for my poſtponing the examination of the argumentative part of the Letter to the Examiner to a further day, though I muſt confeſs, this was occaſioned by a Letter which I received laſt poſt. Upon opening it, I found it to contain a very curious piece of antiquity; which, without preface or application, was introduced as follows.

" Alcibiades

" Alcibiades was a man of wit and pleasure,
" bred up in the school of Socrates; and one of
" the best Orators of his age, notwithstanding he
" lived at a time when learning was at its high" est pitch: he was likewise very famous for his
" military exploits, having gained great conquests
" over the Lacedæmonians, who had formerly
" been the confederates of his countrymen against
" the great King of Persia, but were at that time
" in alliance with the Persians. He had been once
" so far misrepresented and traduced by the malice
" of his enemies, that the Priests cursed him.
" But after the great services which he had done
" for his country, they publickly repealed their
" curses, and changed them into applauses and be-
" nedictions.

" Plutarch tells us, in the life of Alcibiades, that
" one Taureas, an obscure man, contended with
" him for a certain prize, which was to be confer-
" red by vote; at which time each of the compe-
" titors recommended himself to the Athenians by
" an oration. The speech which Alcibiades made
" on that occasion, has been lately discovered a-
" mong the Manuscripts of King's-college in Cam-
" bridge; and communicated to me by my learn-
" ed friend Dr. B---tley; who tells me, that by a
" marginal note it appears, that this Taureas, or,
" as the Doctor rather chuses to call him, Toryas,
" was an Athenian Brewer. This speech I have " translated literally, changing very little in it, ex-
" cept where it was absolutely necessary to make it
" understood by an English Reader. It is as fol-
" lows.

" Is

"IS it then poſſible, O ye Athenians, that I who
" hitherto have had none but Generals to op-
" poſe me, muſt now have an artiſan for my an-
" tagoniſt? That I who have overthrown the " Princes of Lacedæmon, muſt now ſee my ſelf in " danger of being defeated by a Brewer? What will
" the world ſay of the Goddeſs that preſides over
" you, ſhould they ſuppoſe you follow her dictates?
" would they think ſhe acted like herſelf, like the " great Minerva? would they now ſay, ſhe in-
" ſpires her ſons with wiſdom? or would they not
" rather ſay, ſhe has a ſecond time choſen owls for
" her favourites? But O ye men of Athens, what
" has this man done to deſerve your voices? You
" ſay he is honeſt; I believe it, and therefore he
" ſhall brew for me. You ſay he is aſſiduous in
" his calling: and is he not grown rich by it? let
" him have your cuſtom but not your votes: you
" are now to caſt your Eyes on thoſe who can de-
" tect the artifices of the common enemy, that can
" diſappoint your ſecret foes in Council, and your
" open ones in the field. Let it not avail my com-
" petitor, that he has been tapping his liquors, while
" I have been ſpilling my blood; that he has been
" gathering hops for you, while I have been reaping
" lawrels. Have I not born the duſt and heat of " the day, while he has been ſweating at the furnace?
" behold theſe ſcars, behold this wound which ſtill
" bleeds in your ſervice; what can Taureas ſhew
" you of this nature? What are his marks of ho-
" nour? Has he any other wound about him, ex-
" cept the accidental ſcaldings of his wort, or bruiſes
" from the tub or barrel? Let it not, O Athenians,
" let it not be ſaid, that your Generals have con-

" quered

" quered themſelves into your diſpleaſure, and loſt
" your favour by gaining you victories. Shall
" thoſe atchievements that have redeemed the preſent
" age from ſlavery, be undervalued by thoſe who " feel the benefits of them? Shall thoſe names that " have made your city the glory of the whole earth,
" be mentioned in it with obloquy and detraction?
" Will not your poſterity bluſh at their forefathers,
" when they ſhall read in the annals of their coun-
" try, that Alcibiades in the 90th Olympiad, after
" having conquered the Lacedæmonians, and reco-
" vered Byzantium, contended for a prize againſt
" Taureas the Brewer? The competition is diſ-
" honourable, the defeat would be ſhameful. I
" ſhall not however ſlacken my endeavours for the " ſecurity of my country. If ſhe is ungrateful, ſhe
" is ſtill Athens. On the contrary, as ſhe will ſtand
" more in need of defence, when ſhe has ſo dege-
" nerate a people; I will purſue my victories, till
" ſuch time as it ſhall be out of your power to hurt
" yourſelves, and that you may be in ſafety even
" under your preſent leaders. But oh! thou ge-
" nius of Athens, whither art thou fled? Where
" is now the race of thoſe glorious ſpirits that pe-
" riſhed at the battel of Thermopylæ, and fought
" upon the plains of Marathon? Are you weary
" of conquering, or have you forgotten the oath
" which you took at Agraulos, That you would look
" upon the bounds of Attica to be thoſe ſoils only
" which are incapable of bearing wheat and barley,
" vines and olives? Conſider your enemies the
" Lacedæmonians; did you ever hear that they pre-
" ferred a Coffee-man to Ageſilaus? No, though
" their Generals have been unfortunate, though
" they have loſt ſeveral battels, though they have " not

" not been able to cope with the troops of A-
" thens, which I have conducted; they are com-
" forted and condoled, nay celebrated and extolled,
" by their fellow-citizens. Their Generals have
" been received with honour after their defeat,
" yours with ignominy after conqueſt. Are there
" not men of Taureas's temper and character, who
" tremble in their hearts at the name of the great
" King of Perſia? who have been againſt entring
" into a war with him, or for making a peace upon
" baſe conditions? that have grudged thoſe con-
" tributions which have ſet our country at the head
" of all the governments of Greece? that would
" diſhonour thoſe who have raiſed her to ſuch a
" pitch of glory? that would betray thoſe liberties
" which your fathers in all ages have purchaſed or
" recovered with their blood? and would proſe-
" cute your fellow-citizens with as much rigour
" and fury, as of late years we have attacked the
" common enemy? I ſhall trouble you no more,
" O ye men of Athens; you know my actions,
" let my antagoniſt relate what he has done for
" you. Let him produce his vatts and tubs, in
" oppoſition to the heaps of arms and ſtandards which
" were employed againſt you, and which I have
" wreſted out of the hands of your enemies. And
" when this is done, let him be brought into the " field of election upon his dray-cart; and if I can
" finiſh my conqueſt ſooner, I will not fail to " meet him there in a triumphant chariot. But,
" oh ye Gods! let not the King of Perſia laugh
" at the fall of Alcibiades! Let him not ſay, the
" Athenians have avenged me upon their own Ge-
" nerals; or let me be rather ſtruck dead by the " hand of a Lacedæmonian, than diſgraced by the
" voices of my fellow-citizens. Thurſday,

Satis eloquentiæ, ſapientiæ parum. Sal.

HUdibras has defined nonſenſe (as Cowley does wit) by negatives. Nonſenſe (ſays he) is that which is neither true nor falſe. Theſe two great properties of nonſenſe, which are always eſſential to it, give it ſuch a peculiar advantage over all other writings, that it is incapable of being either anſwered or contradicted. It ſtands upon its own baſis like a rock of adamant, ſecured by its natural ſituation againſt all conqueſts or attacks. There is no one place about it weaker than another, to favour an enemy in his approaches.' The major and the minor are of equal ſtrength. Its queſtions admit of no reply, and its aſſertions are not to be invalidated. A man may as well hope to diſtinguiſh colours in the midſt of darkneſs, as to find out what to approve and diſapprove in nonſenſe: you may as well aſſault an army that is buried in intrenchments. If it affirms any thing, you cannot lay hold of it; or if it denies, you cannot confute it. In a word, there are greater depths and obſcurities, greater intricacies and perplexities, in an elaborate and well-written piece of nonſenſe, than in the moſt abſtruſe and profound tract of ſchool-divinity.

After this ſhort panegyrick upon nonſenſe, which may appear as extravagant to an ordinary Reader, as Eraſmus's Encomium of folly; I muſt here ſolemnly proteſt, that I have not done it to curry favour with my antagoniſt, or to reflect any praiſe in an oblique manner upon the Letter to the Examiner: I have no private conſiderations to warp me in this controverſy, ſince my firſt entering upon it. But before I proceed any further, becauſe it may be of great uſe to me in this diſpute, to ſtate the whole nature of nonſenſe; and becauſe 'tis a ſubject entirely new, I muſt take notice that there are two kinds of it, viz. high nonſenſe and low nonſenſe.

Low nonſenſe is the talent of a cold phlegmatick temper, that in a poor diſpirited ſtyle creeps along ſervilely through darkneſs and confuſion. A writer of this complexion gropes his way ſoftly amongſt ſelf-contradictions, and grovels in abſurdities.

Videri vult pauper, & eſt pauper.

He has neither wit nor ſenſe, and pretends to none.

On the contrary, your high nonſenſe bluſters and makes a noiſe: it ſtalks upon hard words, and rattles through polyſyllables. It is loud and ſonorous, ſmooth and periodical. It has ſomething in it like manlineſs and force, and makes one think of the name of Sir Hercules Nonſenſe in the play called the neſt of fools. In a word, your high nonſenſe has a majeſtick appearance, and wears a moſt tremendous garb, like Æſop's aſs cloathed in a lion's skin.

When Ariſtotle lay upon his death-bed, and was asked whom he would appoint for his ſucceſſor in the ſchool, two of his ſcholars being Candidates for it; he called for two different ſorts of wine, and and by the character which he gave of them, denoted the different qualities and perfections that ſhewed themſelves in the ſtyle and writings of each of the competitors. As rational writings have been repreſented by wine; I ſhall repreſent thoſe kinds of writings we are now ſpeaking of, by ſmall-beer.

Low nonſenſe is like that in the barrel, which is altogether flat, taſteleſs, and inſipid. High nonſenſe is like that in the bottle, which has in reality no more ſtrength and ſpirit than the other, but frets and flies, and bounces, and by the help of a little wind that is got into it, imitates the paſſions of a much nobler liquor.

We meet with a low groveling nonſenſe in every Grub-ſtreet production; but I think there are none of our preſent writers who have hit the ſublime in nonſenſe, beſides Dr. S——l in divinity, and the Author of this letter in politicks; between whoſe characters in their reſpective profeſſions, there ſeems to be a very nice reſemblance.

There is ſtill another qualification in nonſenſe which I muſt not paſs over, being that which gives it the laſt finiſhing and perfection, and eminently diſcovers it ſelf in the letter to the Examiner. —— This is when an Author without any meaning, ſeems to have it; and ſo impoſes upon us by the ſound and ranging of his words, that one is apt to fancy they ſignify ſomething. Any one who reads this letter, as he goes through it, will lie under the ſame deluſion; but after having read it, let him conſider what he has learnt from it, and he will immediately diſcover the deceit. I did not indeed at firſt imagine there was in it ſuch a jargon of ideas, ſuch an inconſiſtency of notions, ſuch a confuſion of particles, that rather puzzle than connect the ſenſe,

which in ſome places he ſeems to have aimed at, as I found upon my nearer peruſal of it: Nevertheleſs, as no body writes a book without meaning ſomething, though he may not have the faculty of writing conſequentially, and expreſſing his meaning; I think I have with a great deal of attention and difficulty found out what this Gentleman would ſay, had he the gift of utterance. The Syſtem of his politicks, when diſembroiled and cleared of all thoſe incoherences and independent matters that are woven into this motley piece, will be as follows. The conduct of the late Miniſtry is conſidered firſt of all in reſpect to foreign affairs, and ſecondly to domeſtick: As to the firſt, he tells us, that the motives which engaged Britain in the preſent war, were both wiſe and generous; ſo that the Miniſtry is cleared as to that particular. Theſe motives he tells us, were to reſtore the Spaniſh monarchy to the houſe of Auſtria, and to regain a barrier for Holland. The laſt of theſe two motives, he ſays, was effectually anſwered by the reduction of the Netherlands in the year 1706, or might have been ſo by the conceſſions which it is notorious that the enemy offered. So that the Miniſtry are here blamed for not contenting themſelves with the barrier they had gained in the year 1706, nor with the conceſſions which the enemy then offered. The other motive of our entering into the war, viz. The reſtoring the Spaniſh monarchy to the houſe of Auſtria, he tells us, remained ſtill in its full force; and we were told, ſays he, that though the barrier of Holland was ſecured, the trade of Britain and the ballance of power in Europe would be ſtill precarious: Spain therefore muſt be conquered. He then loſes himſelf in matter foreign to his purpoſe: But what he endeavours in the ſequel of his diſcourſe, is to ſhew, that we have not taken the proper method to recover the Spaniſh monarchy; that the whole ſtreſs of the war has been wantonly laid where France is beſt able to keep us at a bay; that the French King has made it impoſſible for himſelf to give up Spain, and that the Duke of Anjou has made it as impoſſible for us to conquer it: Nay, that inſtead of regaining Spain, we ſhall find the Duke of Anjou in a condition to pay the debt of gratitude, and ſupport the Grandfather in his declining years, by whoſe arms in the days of his infancy he was upheld. He then intimates to us, that the Dutch and the Emperor will be ſo very well ſatisfied with what they have already conquered, that they may probably leave the houſe of Bourbon in the quiet poſſeſſion of the Spaniſh Monarchy.

This ſtrange huddle of politicks has been ſo fully anſwered by General Stanhope, that if the Author had delayed the publiſhing of his letter but a fortnight, the world would have been deprived of that elaborate production. Notwithſtanding all that the French King or the Duke of Anjou have been able to do, notwithſtanding the feeble efforts we have made in Spain, notwithſtanding the little care the Emperor takes to ſupport King Charles, notwithſtanding the Dutch might have been contented with a larger and better countrey than their own already conquered for them, that victorious General at the head of Engliſh and Dutch forces, in conjunction with thoſe of the Emperor, has wreſted Spain out of the hands of the houſe of Bourbon; and added the conqueſt of Navarre, Arragon, and Caſtile, to thoſe of Catalonia, Bavaria, Flanders, Mantua, Milan, Naples, Sicily, Majorca, Minorca, and Sardinia.

dinia. Such a wonderful ſeries of victories, and thoſe aſtoniſhing returns of ingratitude which they have met with, appear both of them rather like dreams than realities: They puzzle and confound the preſent age, and it is to be hoped they will not be believed by poſterity. Will the trifling Author of this letter ſay, that the Miniſtry did not apply themſelves to the reduction of Spain, when the whole Kingdom was twice conquered in their adminiſtration? The Letter-writer ſays, that the Dutch had gained a good barrier after the battel of Ramillies in the year 1706. But I would fain ask him, whether he thinks Antwerp and Bruſſels, Ghent and Bruges, could be thought a ſtrong barrier, or that thoſe important conqueſts did not want ſeveral towns and forts to cover them? But it ſeems our great General on that ſide has done more for us than we expected of him, and made the barrier too impregnable. But, ſays the Letter-writer, the ſtreſs of the war was laid in the wrong place: But if the laying the ſtreſs of the war in the Low-Countries drew thither the whole ſtrength of France; if it weakened Spain, and left it expoſed to an equal force; if France, without being preſſed on this ſide, could have aſſiſted the Duke of Anjou with a numerous army; and if by the advantage of the ſituation, it could have ſent and maintained in Spain ten regiments with as little trouble and expence as England could two regiments; every impartial Judge would think that the ſtreſs of the war has been laid in the right place.

The Author in this confuſed diſſertation on foreign affairs, would fain make us believe, that England has gained nothing by theſe conqueſts, and put us out of humour with our chief Allies, the

Emperor

Emperor and the Dutch. He tells us, they hoped England would have been taken care of, after having ſecured a barrier for Holland: As if England were not taken care of by this very ſecuring a barrier for Holland; which has always been looked upon as our Bulwark, or as Mr. Waller expreſſes it, our outguard on the continent; and which if it had fallen into the hands of the French, would have made France more ſtrong by ſea than all Europe beſides. Has not England been taken care of by gaining a new mart in Flanders, by opening our trade into the Levant, by ſecuring ports for us in Gibraltar, Minorca and Naples, and by that happy proſpect we have of renewing that great branch of our commerce into Spain, which will be of more advantage to England than any conqueſt we can make of towns and provinces? Not to mention the demoliſhing of Dunkirk, which we were in a fair way of obtaining during the laſt Parliament, and which we never ſo much as propoſed to ourſelves at our firſt engaging in this war.

As for this Author's aſperſions of the Dutch and Germans, I have ſometimes wondered that he has not been complained of for it to the Secretary of ſtate. Had he not been looked upon as an inſignificant ſcribler, he muſt have occaſioned remonſtrances and memorials: Such national injuries are not to be put up, but when the offender is below reſentment. This puts me in mind of an honeſt Scotchman, who as he was walking along the ſtreets of London, heard one calling out after him Scot, Scot, and caſting forth in a clamorous manner a great deal of opprobrious language againſt that antient nation: Sawney turned about in a great paſſion, and found, to his ſurprize, that the perſon who abuſed him was a ſaucy parrot that hung up not far from him in a cage; upon which he clapped his hand to his ſword, and told him, were he a man as he were a green-gooſe, he would have run him through the wemb.

The next head our Politician goes upon, relates to our domeſtick affairs; where I am extremely at a loſs to know what he would be at: All that I can gather from him is, that the Queen had grieved her ſubjects in making choice of ſuch men for her Miniſters, as raiſed the nation to a greater pitch of glory than ever it was in the days of our forefathers, or than any other nation in theſe our days.

N° 5. Thurſday, October 12.

Parere jam non ſcelus eſt. Martial.

WE live in a nation where at preſent there is ſcarce a ſingle head that does not teem with politicks. The whole Iſland is peopled with Stateſmen, and not unlike Trinculo's Kingdom of Vice-roys, every man has contrived a ſcheme of government for the benefit of his fellow-ſubjects, which they may follow and be ſafe.

After this ſhort preface, by which, as an Engliſhman, I lay in my claim to be a Politician; I ſhall enter on my diſcourſe.

The chief point that has puzzled the Freeholders of Great Britain, as well as all thoſe that pay ſcot

ſcot and lot, for about theſe ſix months laſt paſt, is this, Whether they would rather be governed by a Prince that is obliged by laws to be good and gracious, juſt and upright, a friend, a father, and a defender of his people; or by one who, if he pleaſes, may drive away or plunder, impriſon or kill, without oppoſition or reſiſtance. This is the true ſtate of the controverſy relating to paſſive-obedience and non-reſiſtance. For I muſt obſerve, that the Advocates for this doctrine have ſtated the caſe in the ſofteſt and moſt palatable terms that it will bear: And we very well know, that there is great art in moulding a queſtion; and that many a motion will paſs with a nemine contradicente in ſome words, that would have been as unanimouſly rejected in others. Paſſive-obedience and Non-reſiſtance are of a mild, gentle, and meek-ſpirited ſound: They have reſpect but to one ſide of the relation between the ſovereign and the ſubject, and are apt to fill the mind with no other ideas but thoſe of peace, tranquillity, and reſignation. To ſhew this doctrine in thoſe black and odious colours that are natural to it, we ſhould conſider it with regard to the Prince as well as to the People: The queſtion will then take another turn, and it will not be debated whether reſiſtance may be lawful, or whether we may take up arms againſt our Prince; but whether the Engliſh form of government be a tyranny or a limited monarchy? Whether our Prince be obliged by our conſtitution to act according to law, or whether he be arbitrary and deſpotical?

It is impoſſible to ſtate the meaſures of Obedience, without ſettling the extent of Power; or to deſcribe the Subject, without defining the King.

An arbitrary Prince is in juſtice and equity the maſter of a non-reſiſting people; for where the power is uncircumſcribed, the obedience ought to be unlimited. Paſſive-obedience and Non-reſiſtance are the duties of Turks and Indians, who have no laws above the Will of a Grand Signior or a Mogul. The ſame power which thoſe Princes enjoy in their reſpective governments, belongs to the legiſlative body in our conſtitution; and that for the ſame reaſon; becauſe no body of men is ſubject to laws, or can be controuled by them, who have the authority of making, altering, or repealing whatever laws they ſhall think fit. Were our legiſlature veſted in the perſon of our Prince, he might doubtleſs wind and turn our conſtitution at his pleaſure; he might ſhape our government to his fancy. In a word, he might oppreſs, perſecute, or deſtroy, and no man ſay to him, What doſt thou?

If therefore we would rightly conſider our form of government, we ſhould diſcover the proper meaſures of our duty and obedience; which can never riſe too high to our Sovereign, whilſt he maintains us in thoſe rights and liberties we were born to. But to ſay that we have rights which we ought not to vindicate and aſſert; that Liberty and Property are the birth-right of the Engliſh nation, but that if a Prince invades them by violent and illegal methods, we muſt upon no pretence reſiſt, but remain altogether paſſive; nay, that in ſuch a caſe we muſt all loſe our lives unjuſtly rather than defend them: this, I ſay, is to confound governments, and to join things together that are wholly repugnant in their natures; ſince it is plain, that ſuch a paſſive ſubjection, jection, such an unconditional obedience, can be only due to an arbitrary Prince or to a legislative body.

Were these smooth ensnaring terms rightly explained to the people, and the controversy of Non-resistance set in this just light, we should have wanted many thousands of hands to some late Addresses. I would fain know what Freeholder in England would have subscribed the following Address, had it been offered to him; or whether Her Majesty, who values the rights of her subjects as much as her own prerogative, would not have been very much offended at it? and yet I will appeal to the Reader, if this has not been the sense of many Addresses, when taken out of several artificial qualifying expressions, and exposed in their true and genuine light.

Madam,

"IT is with unspeakable grief of heart, that "we hear a set of men daily preaching up "among us that pernicious and damnable do-"ctrine of self-preservation; and boldly affirm-"ing, as well in their publick writings, as in "their private discourses, that it is lawful to re-"sist a tyrant, and take up arms in defence of "their lives and liberties. We have the utmost hor-"ror and detestation of these diabolical princi-"ples, that may induce your people to rise up in "vindication of their rights and freedoms, when-"ever a wicked Prince shall make use of his "Royal authority to subvert them. We are asto-"nished at the bold and impious attempts of "those men, who under the reign of the best of "Sovereigns, would avow such dangerous tenets

" as may ſecure them under the worſt. We are
" reſolved to beat down and diſcountenance theſe
" ſeditious notions, as being altogether republi-
" can, jeſuitical, and conformable to the practice
" of our rebellious forefathers; who in all ages,
" at an infinite expence of blood and treaſure,
" aſſerted their rights and properties, and con-
" ſulted the good of their poſterity by reſiſtance,
" arms, and pitched battles, to the great trouble
" and diſquiet of their lawful Prince. We do
" therefore in the moſt humble and dutiful man-
" ner ſolemnly proteſt and declare, that we will
" never reſiſt a Sovereign that ſhall think fit to
" deſtroy our Magna Charta, or invade thoſe
" rights and liberties which thoſe traytors pro-
" cured for us; but will venture our lives and
" fortunes againſt ſuch of our fellow-ſubjects
" who think they may ſtand up in defence of
" them.

It happens very unluckily that there is ſomething ſo ſupple and inſinuating in this abſurd unnatural doctrine, as makes it extremely agreeable to a Prince's ear: for which reaſon the publiſhers of it have always been the favourites of weak Kings. Even thoſe who have no inclination to do hurt to others, ſays the famous Satyriſt, would have the power of doing it if they pleaſed. Honeſt men who tell their Sovereigns what they expect from them, and what obedience they ſhall be always ready to pay them, are not upon an equal foot with ſuch baſe and abject flatterers; and are therefore always in danger of being the laſt in the Royal favour. Nor indeed would that be unreaſonable, if the profeſſors of Non-reſiſtance and

Paſſive-

Paſſive-obedience would ſtand to their principle: but inſtead of that we ſee they never fail to exert themſelves againſt an arbitrary power, and to caſt off the oppreſſion when they feel the weight of it. Did they not in the late Revolution riſe up unanimouſly with thoſe who always declared their ſubjection to be conditional, and their obedience limited? And very lately, when their Queen had offended them in nothing but by the promotion of a few great men to poſts of truſt and honour, who had diſtinguiſhed themſelves by their moderation and humanity to all their fellow-ſubjects, what was the behaviour of theſe men of meek and reſigned principles? Did not the Church-Memorial, which they all applauded and cried up as the language and ſentiments of their party, tell H. M. that it would not be ſafe for Her to rely upon their doctrines of Paſſive-obedience and Non-reſiſtance, for that nature might rebel againſt principles? Is not this, in plain terms, that they will only practiſe Non-reſiſtance to a Prince that pleaſes them, and Paſſive-obedience when they ſuffer nothing? I remember one of the rabble in Oedipus, when he is upbraided with his rebellion, and asked by the Prophet if he had not taken an oath to be loyal, falls a ſcratching his head, and tells him, Why yes truly, he had taken ſuch an oath, but it was a hard thing that an oath ſhould be a man's maſter. This is in effect the language of the Church in the above-mentioned Memorial. Men of theſe ſoft peaceable diſpoſitions in times of proſperity, put me in mind of Kirke's Lambs; for that was the name he uſed to give his dragoons that had ſignalized themſelves above the reſt of the army by many military atchievements among their own countrymen.

Their

There are two or three fatal conſequences of this doctrine, which I cannot forbear pointing out. The firſt of which is, That it has a natural tendency to make a good King a very bad one. When a man is told he may do what he pleaſes with impunity, he will be leſs careful and cautious of doing what he ſhould do, than a man who is influenced by fear as well as by other motives to virtue. It was a ſaying of Thales the wiſe Mileſian, that of all wild beaſts a tyrant is the worſt, and of all tame beaſts a flatterer. They do indeed naturally beget one another, and always exiſt together. Perſuade a Prince that he is irreſiſtible, and he will take care not to let ſo glorious an attribute lie dead and uſeleſs by him. An arbitrary power has ſomething ſo great in it, that he muſt be more than man who is endowed with it, but never exerts it.

This conſequence of the doctrine I have been ſpeaking of, is very often a fatal one to the people; there is another which is no leſs deſtructive to the Prince. A late unfortunate King very viſibly owed his ruin to it. He relied upon the aſſurances of his people, that they would never reſiſt him upon any pretence whatſoever, and accordingly began to act like a King who was not under the reſtraint of laws, by diſpenſing with them, and taking on him that power which was veſted in the whole legiſlative body. And what was the dreadful end of ſuch a proceeding? It is too freſh in every body's memory. Thus is a Prince corrupted by the profeſſors of this doctrine, and afterwards betrayed by them. The ſame perſons are the Actors, both in the temptation and the puniſhment. They aſſure him they will never reſiſt, ſiſt, but retain their obedience under the utmoſt ſufferings: he tries them in a few inſtances, and is depoſed by them for his credulity.

I remember at the beginning of King James's reign the Quakers preſented an Addreſs, which gave great offence to the High Church-men of thoſe times. But notwithſtanding the uncourtlineſs of their phraſes, the ſenſe was very honeſt. The Addreſs was as follows, to the beſt of my memory, for I then took great notice of it; and may ſerve as a counterpart to the foregoing one.

"THESE are to teſtify to thee our ſorrow for
" our friend Charles, whom we hope thou
" wilt follow in every thing that is good.
" We hear that thou art not of the religion of the " land any more than we, and therefore may reaſo-
" nably expect that thou wilt give us the ſame liber-
" ty that thou takeſt thy ſelf.
" We hope that in this and all things elſe thou
" wilt promote the good of thy people, which will
" oblige us to pray that thy reign over us may be
" long and proſperous.

Had all King James's ſubjects addreſſed him with the ſame integrity; he had, in all probability, ſat upon his throne till death had removed him from it.
